10 DIE IN CRASH OF TWO PLANES IN FILM SCENE

Kenneth Hawks, Husband of Mary Astor, and Aid Killed.

LOCKED CRAFT DIVE 2,500 FEET INTO SEA

Tragedy Occurs During Lowenstein Death-Jump "Shot."

SANTA MONICA PILOT DESCRIBES IMPACT

Col. Roscoe Turner Believes Collision Was Caused by Blinding Sun.

Santa Monica, Calif., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Ten persons, including Kenneth Hawks, motion picture director, and Max Gold, assistant director and former national handball champion, were killed today when two motion picture camera planes collided head-on in midair and plunged into the ocean near here.

The cabin ships, loaded with cameras and motion picture equipment, in addition to five persons each, crashed together at about 3,000 feet altitude, three miles off the coast. They wedged together in a tangled mass, burst into flames and plunged to the surface, sinking immediately.

Three of the passengers were thrown clear as the interlocked planes struck the water. The other seven were carried beneath the surface. Three bodies later broke free from the wreckage on the sea bottom and rose to be picked up by patrol boats. The doors had been removed from the plane cabins to give cameramen free play and searchers believed all bodies eventually would appear on the surface.

Official Death List.

The dead:

Kenneth Hawks, motion picture director and husband of Mary Astor, film actress.

Max Gold, assistant director and former national hand ball champion.

Geo. Eastman, cameraman.

Conrad Wells, cameraman.

Ben Frankel, assistant cameraman.

Hank Johannes, property man.

Tom Harris, property man.

Hallock Rouse, pilot.

Ross Cook, pilot.

Whim Saves Hawks' Brother.

All were in the employ of the Fox Film Corporation and all were residents of Hollywood except Rouse and Cook, who were Clover Field pilots.

Hawks' brother, Howard, whose wife is Athole Shearer, sister of Norma Shearer, screen star, escaped death by a last-minute whim which caused him to change his mind about accompanying Kenneth in one of the camera planes which took off from Clover field here, to film a parachute jump scene over the ocean. He had accompanied Kenneth to the field with the intention of boarding the plane.

Stunt Scene "Shot" Scheduled.

The two planes and a third, piloted by Lieut. Col. Roscoe Turner, transcontinental flier, were engaged in filming a sequence in a picture based on the death on July 5, 1928, of Capt. Alfred Lowenstein, multimillionaire Belgian financier, who disappeared from a transport plane over the English Channel and whose body later was found washed ashore.

Turner carried with him in his plane a parachute jumper, who was to leap into the ocean with the camera

Warmest Day Sets Record of 14 Years

Temperature Reaches 66 as Washington Doffs Coats and Wraps.

Not in fourteen years and upon but two corresponding days of the year has the National Capital experienced a warmer January 2 than that of yesterday. In the streets, parks and in public and private conveyances, overcoats, topcoats and furs were conspicuous by their absence.

The United States Weather Bureau officially recorded the temperature as registering 66 at 2 o'clock. At noon it had reached 59 and in the next two hours steadily climbed until it touched 66. After that hour the mercury gradually receded, and was below 60 at 6 o'clock, and still falling.

Fourteen years ago, or on January 2, 1916, the temperature in Washington registered 70, while 53 years ago, or on January 2, 1876, a mark of 71 was recorded, which is the record for that day of the year. Yesterday's 65 is the third highest.

Weather Bureau officials predict rain for today with a falling temperature, although a real cold snap is not believed in sight.

Billy Dove and Mate To Dissolve Romance

Miss Billy Dove, screen beauty, who has separated from her husband, Irwin Willat, movie director. Hollywood advices state divorce proceedings are expected later.

Screen Star Separates From Director After Six Years.

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—First National Studios today disclosed that Billy Dove, featured motion picture actress and her husband, Irvin Willat, director, have separated.

Studio officials quoted Miss Dove as admitting that incompatibility had resulted in a definite rift in her six years of domestic happiness and that divorce probably would follow later. Mr. Willat, who is in New York City working for a small independent film company, married Miss Dove in October, 1923, soon after he left the Ziegfeld Follies for the movies. Rumors of their split arose in Hollywood film circles after she failed to join him for the Christmas holidays.

COAST GUARD RACES TO SHIP IN DISTRESS

45 MEN ABOARD CRAFT

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Disregarding storm warnings broadcast by the Weather Bureau, two Coast Guard cutters late today were racing to the rescue of the disabled freighter California, which was being battered by a 75-mile gale far out on the Pacific.

The cutters Snohomish and Haida were expected to reach the crippled vessel some time tomorrow. Latest reports from the California gave her position as about 330 miles almost due west of Cape Flattery.

Forty-five men are abord the ship, which lost her steering gear in the terrific storm. The Coast Guardhere received a message late today from Capt. Gregor Johnson, master of the California, which said the ship was "drifting 90 degrees true, 3 miles an hour." This would mean the vessel was drifting east.

The States Steamship Co., of Portland, owner of the ship, reported receiving a message that the captain had rigged up a temporary rudder and was steaming toward Cape Flattery.

The Portland company denied earlier reports that the forward and aft holds of the ship were full of water and Coast Guard officers expressed doubt that the ship was foundering, since none of the messages received so far had indicated that it was leaking.

The California, 3,343 net tons, left Kalama on the Columbia River, December 30 with a cargo composed mostly of lumber for South China.

7,843 AUTO OWNERS STORM TAX OFFICE

MANY WAIT FOR HOURS

For the first time in history the personal tax office got the breaks yesterday when it took in $44,390 from 7,843 automobile owners.

Having been unable in past years to collect personal taxes on automobiles, the District Commissioners decided that the remedy lay in requiring owners to produce tax receipts before they could obtain tags for the new year.

Although this involves payments which may require motorists to disburse as much as $129.50 before they can get tags for some of the more de luxe foreign cars, it appeared to be no deterrent to the mob that stormed the lower floors of the District Building yesterday.

The line began to form a few minutes after 9 o'clock on New Year's night, when William P. Storty, of 2507 K street northwest, staked out his claim in front of the emergency counters that have been erected in the front corridor on the ground floor of the building.

Storty kept a solo vigil until midnight, when he was joined by Francis McDaniel, of 31 Q street northeast, and about an hour later Donald W. Graffius, of 17 U street northwest, arrived. Miss Betty Whitfield, of the Park Lane Apartments, was the first woman in the line, taking her place at 3 o'clock yesterday morning. Stor-

Removal of Old Yew Trees To Cathedral Here Halted

Petersburg Citizens' Ire Aroused by Attempt to Dig Them Up.

City Manager Paul S. Morton, of Petersburg, Va., has halted efforts to remove two beautiful and ancient Irish yews from the Square of Quinn Morton in historic Blandford Cemetery, scheduled to be placed in the bishop's garden of the National Cathedral here. Action was taken by the city manager as soon as it became known that workmen from Washington had begun the work of digging up the trees, which are very beautiful. Many Petersburg people became indignant, and the Petersburg Garden Club sent a telegram to Bishop James E. Freeman of Washington protesting against the removal of the trees, which are believed to be at least 125 years old.

A legal opinion as to whether or not any person has a right to remove a

Federal Grand Jury Will Hear Evidence From Secret Papers.

SPORTSMAN SHOWN AS DOPE RING HEAD

Important New York Persons Are Involved in U. S. Dope Quiz.

New York, Jan. 2 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Startling evidence, gleaned from the files of Arnold Rothstein, slain gambler, involving important persons of New York, "whose names mean something," will be presented before the January Federal grand jury in its investigation of the alleged narcotic rings, it was announced today by Assistant United States Attorney John M. Blake.

At the same time, although Federal authorities would not comment upon it, information leaked out that they were searching for Miss Audrey du Brea, a night-club hostess, who was arrested two years ago in Washington with Jacob Solomon. Solomon was subsequently given fourteen years for violation of the narcotic laws, while Miss du Brea was given a suspended sentence.

The main reason investigating officers want to see Miss du Brea, according to reliable information, is because they found her name in the effects of Louis Saccaroma, who is now out under $50,000 bail, on a narcotic charge, his place in Harlem having been raided last Saturday night.

Bail Supplied by Rothstein.

It was revealed by Mr. Blake, who declined to elaborate upon the known career of the young woman, that both her bail and that of Solomon were supplied by Arnold Rothstein. It was pointed out that this wide latitude, covered by the murdered gambler, only strengthens the evidence that he headed one of the largest dope rings in this country.

Now that the accumulation of evidence has permitted the Government to strike at the gangs operating in the illicit sale and transportation of narcotics throughout the United States, it has drawn the spotlight directly to the door of New York. There is no doubt now, according to the authorities, that the greatest market for drugs in this country is here.

That the work of the Government has just started with the raids last week and subsequent indictments was indicated today by Mr. Blake, who said that he was at work on twelve indictments against many de-

RUM SLAYINGS ARE PROTESTED BY BOSTON MOB

Coast Guard's Posters Torn Down at End of League Meeting.

SMUGGLERS' KILLING IS CALLED MURDER

Resolution Asks Hoover to Order "Impartial" Inquiry Into Case.

NO WARNING SHOTS WERE FIRED, CHARGE

Slaying of Men Discovered Breaking Law Compared to Boston Massacre.

Boston, January 2 (A.P.).—A demonstration on Boston Common in which Coast Guard recruiting posters were destroyed was an unexpected aftermath today of a meeting in historic Faneuil Hall called by the Liberal Civic League in protest against the killing of three rumrunners in Rhode Island waters Sunday by coast guardsmen.

The petty officer in charge of the recruiting station was unable to stem the crowd. The posters were torn from their metal standards and trampled, and the standards were bent and broken.

The ancient rafters of Faneuil Hall echoed to charges by speakers that in enforcement of prohibition the Nation faces a new form of oppression. The Rhode Island incident was referred to by one speaker as the "Newport massacre" and was compared with the Boston massacre, the first bloodshed of the War of Independence.

Hoover Called Upon.

A resolution adopted by an audience which filled the hall called upon President Hoover for an "impartial" investigation. It follows, in part:

"We believe that we have a right to respectfully demand that you, sir, as President of the United States, order a thorough and searching investigation into the facts surrounding this deplorable incident by somebody not connected with the Coast Guard or the Treasury Department.

"By the continuance of such governmental practices as the incident above described we can see nothing but the destruction of the liberties for which our fathers fought, for which free men have bled from the time of the Great Charter.

Whitewash Is Charged.

"We are not asserting the guilt of the Coast Guard, but we believe the attitude of the Government as at present taken will justly give the impression that an attempt is being made to suppress the facts and whitewash a criminal act of the worst kind and all this for the enforcement of an unpopular, unnecessary and stupid law which has no proper place in the Constitution of our Nation and which

Lawyer Will Oppose Simmons in Primary

Raleigh Man's Fight for Senate Seat Seen as Result of Bolt.

Announcement from Raleigh, N. C., that Senator Simmons will be opposed for renomination by Josiah William Bailey, an able and experienced politician with large ready-made following, also for many years a wheel horse of the powerful Simmons organization, was received with interest in virtually all political circles here yesterday.

Bailey's cast of his hat into the ring where the senior Democratic member of the Senate and former chairman of the finance committee has gone unchallenged 30 years save for an unsuccessful contest by the late Gov. William H. Kitchin midway, comes as an aftermath to Simmons' bolt of Gov. Smith in the recent presidential election. It undoubtedly derives special encouragement from the result of the Virginia primaries, where the candidates of Bishop Cannon, jr., and of the Hoovercrats generally met decisive defeat.

In attacking Gov. Smith, the veteran Democratic leader was vigorously opposed by mos tof his chief lieutenants, including former Gov. Cameron Morrison, as well as Bailey. Nevertheless, it transpired that he had not underrated the antagonism toward Smith on grounds of prohibition and region.

It had recently been expected that either Bailey or Judge W. J. Brogden would oppose Simmons. Former Gov. Angus W. McLean announced that he would not run if Simmons did.

Bailey was collector of internal revenue for the Eastern North Carolina district under Wilson, on Simmons' recommendation. He is now a Raleigh lawyer, about 55 years old. Inheriting from his father the Biblical Recorder, the State's leading Baptist organ, he increased its influence until he left it for the law and politics.

He has shown himself a strong political campaigner with both tongue and pen. His special sources of individual strength, besides the Baptist following, include the assured support of his father-in-law, James H. Pau, of Raleigh, brother of Representative E. W. Pou, a lawyer of wide political reputation, who has shown no desire for office himself.

It is understood here that of the eight democratic members of the House from North Carolina, only

BOMB HORROR ARREST NEAR AS BABY VICTIM JOINS BRIDE IN DEATH

Former Official Held Source of Borah Data

Mrs. Willebrandt Gave Him Dry Evidence, Is Belief.

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt is believed to have been the one who gave Senator Borah his prohibition ammunition. Her name crept in yesterday as the speculation continued over the exchange of mystery letters between the senator and the President.

It has not yet been determined just what the President said in his letter to the senator following the latter's statement that he had documentary evidence sufficient to discharge immediately seventeen district attorneys, whether he asked him for the evidence or for suggestions on prohibition enforcement, and, if so, just how the senator replied. He still has the evidence.

Mrs. Willebrandt, it is pointed out, had sole charge of alcohol diversions when she was in the Department of Justice and is known to have felt pretty much about the situation as does Senator Borah now. That she Samuel Hall, 19 Months, Succumbs to Wounds in New Year Blast.

SINGLE INVESTIGATOR PLEDGES FAST ACTION

AUTOPSY PERFORMED ON MRS. BRADY'S BODY

Coroner's Jury Formed, but Inquest Is Not Ordered Yet; Parts of 'Hate-Box' Found.

A second death was written across the bloody record of the Seat Pleasant bomb outrage last night when Samuel Hall, 19 months old and the baby of his family, died at Sibley Hospital.

The child, an innocent victim of a terrible hatred, will be buried alongside his sister, Naomi Hall Brady, 18, the young bride for whom the bomb was meant.

County Policeman Frank Prince, the lone investigator in this most revolting of nearby Maryland's crimes, announced last night that an arrest in the case was impending.

The principal suspect, Prince said, was an elderly bachelor who had tried in vain to win Naomi Hall. When he learned a day or so before Christmas that she had been secretly married in November to Herman Brady, a 22-year-old farmer, the spurned suitor burst into tears.

Has Knowledge of Dynamite.

He is known to have a knowledge of dynamite, the explosive used in the fatal bomb.

Physicians in local hospitals are watching closely over four other members of the family who were maimed or injured when the bomb, camouflaged as a Christmas present, exploded in the Hall kitchen on New Year's Day.

Dorothy Hall, 4, who was injured on the head, face, shoulder and body, was reported last night to be in a serious condition at Sibley Hospital.

Mrs. Nora Hall, 45, the mother, was in Providence Hospital, an eye blasted out and her abdomen shattered. She was kept in ignorance of the death of Samuel, her youngest. With her at Providence are Leslie, 16, who lost part of his hand, and Thomas, 8, who was severely cut on the hands.

Grandmother Leaves Hospital.

Mrs. Margaret Bromley, 86, mother of Mrs. Hall, the least badly hurt of those in the house, was able to leave Casualty Hospital late yesterday. She was in an upstairs room when the blast occurred.

An autopsy was performed last night on the body of Mrs. Naomi Hall Brady at the funeral establishment of Francis Gasch's Sons, in Hyattsville, by Dr. John I. Boyd, of Forrestville.

This postmortem examination was ordered by State's Attorney J. Frank Parran, who hoped that something might be found that would help in the investigation, fragments of the bomb, for example. The result of the autopsy was not announced.

Coroner's Jury Formed.

A coroner's jury also was organized last night, and, under the direction of Justice of the Peace John Wesst, viewed the body of Mrs. Brady. The jury will be held in readiness to hold an inquest at any time the authorities want to order one.

In the meantime, fragments of the Christmas "box of hate" will be turned over to the Bureau of Standards here for examination.

Officer Prince said last night that in searching for bits of the bomb which exploded in the Hall kitchen New Year's morning he had salvaged a piece of the box in which it was stored, several nails which it con-

Fewer Members of Congress Drink Now Than in Past, Senator Declares.

LAMENTS QUAFFING DRYS

(Associated Press.)

Lamenting the drinking of liquor by "some senators and some representatives," Senator Jones, of Washington, last night contributed his latest views on prohibition to the furious discussion of the enforcement situation which has excited the Capital recently.

"He practices what he preaches," was the way the Washington senator described President Hoover, in appealing over the radio for the public to be patient and help. His address took notice of arguments advanced against the dry laws and gave his answers to them.

"In my judgment," he said, "a far fewer number of senators and representatives drink now than did 20 and 30 years ago. I have seen far fewer senators under the influence of liquor during the last ten years than I did during the preceding ten years. They will get fewer and fewer as the years go by."

Senator Jones revealed that he had received many letters recently asking if congressmen were excused from the laws to enforce prohibition.

"Of course not," he answered last night.

Alluding to reports that "many congressmen vote 'dry' while they drink liquor," Jones declared that was not a valid argument against prohibition.

"I am sorry that it may be so," he continued, "but this just emphasizes the strength of the sentiment of the people back home. Instead of showing a weakness in prohibition sentiment, it demonstrates its strength. Representatives are, primarily, to represent the majority views of their constituents and that is what many of them do regardless of their personal views."

Senator Jones remarked that he did not know the attitude of Presi-

HOOVER IS DEFENDED ON DELEGATE CHOICE

RECALLS GENEVA "MESS"

(Associated Press.)

A defense of President Hoover for refraining from placing naval officers on the United States delegation to the London arms conference was voiced yesterday by Representative McClintic, Oklahoma, a Democrat on the House naval committee.

"President Hoover is to be warmly congratulated for appointing members of the commission that represent the American people," McClintic said in a statement, "rather than the officers of the United States Navy."

He took exception to the stand taken in New York by Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske, retired, that a mistake had been made because no naval officers were appointed to the London conference.

"When it is taken into consideration that the sorriest mess ever exposed to the American public," McClintic said, "was the proceedings at Geneva at the last armament conference, which were conducted by a commission, the majority of whom were naval officers, ably assisted by a representative of certain shipbuilders, it can be easily understood why President Hoover has used such good judgment in appointing the kind of commission that will not be dominated by those who have a selfish interest to serve."

McClintic referred to the activities of William B. Shearer, naval lobbyist, which recently were investigated by a Senate committee.

"As to Shearer's effect on the Geneva conference," McClintic continued, "it is now known that he had the cooperation of Admirals Charles P. Plunkett, H. A. Wiley, W. V. Pratt, J. M. Reeves, F. H. Schofield and Commanders H. C. Train and H. A. Frost.

"His work was so satisfactory that one officer in the naval intelligence

The starlings which congregate nightly in the vicinity of the District Building got their first intimation last night since The Post launched its campaign against them that they are in bad with the Commissioners as well as with the general public. But the hint only aroused a spirit of defiance in their breasts and they stuck to their limbs with a persistence that would have put the old Spartan soldiers to shame.

A half dozen smudge pots, which gave off foul smelling odors through the sycamores, seemed not to bother the birds in the least. One could almost hear them hiss as they roosted above the smoking buckets.

UTILITIES RATE CUT IN ARLINGTON URGED

Equal Charge for Gas and Light All Over County Is Wanted.

ZONING HEARING IS DUE

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 309. Clarendon, Va.

Declaring both gas and electric light rates in Arlington County unreasonable, Harry C. Saffell last night stated that the time has come when some consideration should be given to such questions by the County Board of Supervisors.

"Today," he said, "we have in the county two separate rates for electric light service: A Washington company which came into the county many years ago which carries its service to Fort Myer Heights and still operates at Washington rates; and the Virginia Public Service Corporation which serves all other sections of the county at an exorbitant rate.

"The County Board of Supervisors has never taken any steps toward having the service of the Washington company, with its reduced rate, extended in the county, neither has it asked the Washington Gas Light Co., which owns the Rosslyn Gas Light Co., which serves the county, to reduce its rates.

"The Legislature of Virginia convenes January 8, and every taxpayer and resident of Arlington County should make his wishes known to our representatives so that a bill will be passed early in the session which will permit Arlington County to vote on a change of the form of government which will be of the most benefit to the majority.

"There is no reason why Arlington County should not have the same form of government of any city in the State, at the same time receiving State aid for schools and roads under the existing amendment to the constitution.

"Arlington County is the neck of the bottle through which all traffic North and South must pass on the seaboard, and it is unreasonable to expect the county to provide highways to take care of this ever-increasing traffic alone without State aid."

In conclusion, Saffell stated: "Arlington County will receive $500,000 from the City of Alexandria for the recent territory which she gained by annexation between now and July 1 of this year. This money should be spent in public improvements. Every dollar spent should buy a dollar's worth of improvement."

The Arlington County Zoning Commission will hold its final public hearing on the zoning ordinance as now drafted tomorrow night in the auditorium of the Washington Lee High School prior to submitting it to the county board of supervisors for its final adoption.

The commission has for the last eight months been at work on the zoning of the county. It has already held eight public hearings in an effort to meet the will of the citizens as far as it is possible and the meeting announced for tomorrow night will be the last.

Satisfactory adjustments with the Alexandria School Board, allowing the use of the textbooks in the George Mason High School and the Mount Vernon Elementary School by charging a reasonable rental fee until the end of the year, have been completed, announced County School Superintendent Fletcher Kemp last night.

With the reopening of the schools today 30 pupils from the George Mason High School will enter the Washington Lee High School.

Arrangements have been made by the county school board to assist the pupils in reaching the high school by the use of special bus service to be furnished by the Washington, Virginia & Maryland Coach Co.

Pupils from the Mount Vernon elementary school will attend either the Nellie Custis school at Aurora Hills or the Hume school on Mount Vernon avenue.

J. M. Hutchinson, 87 years old, one of Fairfax County's oldest residents and one of the few remaining survivors of the famous Mosby raiders of Civil War days, with his wife, celebrated the coming of the New Year yesterday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Lawrence Michael in Lyon Park, Arlington County.

Mr. Hutchinson was born in Loudon County in 1842. At the age of 18 he joined the Eighth Virginia Infantry, Company G, under Capt. James Thrift. In two years he will celebrate his fiftieth wedding anniversary.

The Clarendon Baptist Church will hold its annual business meeting and election of church officers tonight in the church at 8 o'clock.

The guild of St. George's Episcopal Church will elect its officers for the new year at its meeting this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. W. C. Welburn, at Ballston.

The board of directors of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce will meet this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in the board rooms in the Rees Building at Clarendon.

The directors will at this meeting receive the recommendations of the executive committee relative to the election of a secretary-stenographer. It is understood that the office will be filled at this meeting.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Matthew Fountaine Maury School at Clarendon will hold its monthly meeting tonight at the school house at 8 o'clock. All patrons are asked to attend, as plans for the activities of the association during the remainder of the school year will be discussed.

The monthly meeting of the auxiliary of the Scout Mothers of Troop No. 101 of Ballston will be held this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Strickler at Mulhall Station. Officers for the new year will be elected.

Winchester Treasurer, William T. Barr, Quits

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 1.—William T. Barr retired at midnight last night as treasurer of the City of Winchester, after sixteen years' continuous service, during which time he has seen the receipts and disbursements of the city more than double themselves. He left the office with a substantial working balance in the treasury.

Mr. Barr was succeeded today as treasurer by W. A. Baker, who last night resigned as president of the Common Council, in which he has served as a member fourteen years, without missing a regular or special meeting. Mr. Baker was recently elected by the voters to a four-year term. His successor as a councilman has not been chosen.

JURY IS DISMISSED IN STUDENT KILLING

Group Deadlocked, 10 to 2, on Fate of Abingdon City Policeman.

DELIBERATED 18 HOURS

Abingdon, Va., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—After deliberating eighteen hours without reaching a verdict, a jury in Washington County Circuit Court, considering the fate of James McReynolds, Abingdon city policeman, charged with slaying J. W. Kendrick, 16, on the night of May 6, was dismissed at noon today, hopelessly deadlocked.

It was learned that ten jurors stood for conviction with punishment at one year in prison and a fine of $500, and that two were adamant for acquittal.

McReynolds was indicted jointly with W. D. Worley and J. W. Crowe, deputy sheriffs. Kendrick was killed when officers fired at the car in which he was riding with two companions. Worley's trial resulted in his being fined $400 for involuntary manslaughter. Crowe was acquitted.

The three officers maintained they had reason to believe that Paul Phelps, driver of the car, was transporting whisky and that they were justified in shooting, in view of Phelps' previously having served a jail sentence on a whisky conviction and of Virginia statutes which make the second major dry-law violation punishable as a felony.

Judge A. C. Buchanan, presiding, ordered the case continued until the January term of court, but Commonwealth's Attorney Fred C. Parks said it was probable the second trial would not be held until March.

Encampment Sites For Guard Listed

Announcements Made for All Virginia Units, Except Two Companies.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Definite dates and places of encampment for all units of the Virginia National Guard, except two which remain tentative, were announced today by Adjt. Gen. W. W. Sale.

Encampment headquarters for the 29th Division staff, consisting of 12 officers, and the Twenty-ninth Signal Company, of Norfolk, with 6 officers and 75 enlisted men, will not be confirmed until early in January. The other encampment dates follow:

Danville Tank Company, 5 officers and 60 enlisted men, at Camp George C. Meade, Md., June 8-22.

State Staff Corps and departments and the Ninety-first Infantry Brigade, 133 officers and 1,840 enlisted men, at Virginia Beach, August 3-17.

One Hundred and Eleventh Field Artillery, 50 officers and 550 men, at Tobyhanna, Pa., July 5-19.

Two Hundred and Forty-sixth Coast Artillery, 36 officers and 540 enlisted men, at Fort Monroe, August 10-24.

One Hundred and Fourth Medical Regiment, composed of the Ambulance Company, 2 officers and 45 men, of Norfolk, and the Hospital Company, 3 officers and 60 enlisted men, of Danville, at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., July 26-August 9.

Bullet Found Embedded Near Governor's Chair

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—A .32-caliber bullet, which had ranged through a window pane and screen, was found today embedded in the floor in Gov. John C. Richards' office 5 feet from his office chair.

Detectives summoned said they presumed the ball was fired by New Year celebrants, but began an investigation. It was the second time during the holiday season that a bullet has struck quarters of the chief executive. Christmas night a .38-caliber bullet tore through a wire screen over a door to the executive mansion. It dropped to the floor and did not enter the home.

New Creek Residence Is Destroyed by Fire

Special to The Washington Post.

Keyser, W. Va., Jan. 1.—A house at New Creek, near Keyser, owned by Miss Elsie Wageley and occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cunningham, was destroyed by fire early yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham were forced to leave through an upstairs window.

A high wind prevailed, and when the Keyser Fire Department responded the fire was beyond control. Furniture belonging to Miss Wageley, stored in the house, was also destroyed.

Youth Is Indicted In Death of Girl

Body Was Found, Strangled, in Mountains After His Arrest.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Buren Harman, 20, of Floyd County, was indicted by a Roanoke County Circuit Court grand jury today on a charge of murder in connection with the death of Freeda Bolt, 18, of Willis, whose body was found on Bent Mountain, Roanoke County, the night of December 18.

The girl, according to authorities, was strangled to death.

Harman was arrested December 13, the day of the girl's disappearance from her boarding house at Willis and placed in the Floyd County Jail. Officers said he told them where the body could be found.

PROGRESS IS NOTED IN WELFARE BUREAU

Virginia State Department Is Second Only to That of Massachusetts.

CHILD CARE SPECIALTY

Richmond, Va., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Twenty years of progress in State-directed public welfare work, in many phases of which it has accomplished pioneer objects, has given Virginia a high position among all the States of the Union until only one—Massachusetts—has a larger number of children directly in its custody.

When the department of public welfare began to function in Virginia juvenile delinquents were confined with hardened criminals. They had no recreational life, no schooling and no regular religious services.

In 1929 the children's bureau of the department had under its care over 3,000 children, some being constantly discharged with others coming at the rate of 700 a year. A juvenile court system is operating. Children have separate hearings, probation service for them has been developed, and they are not allowed to remain in almshouses or jails.

Established in 1914.

The State department, as a child-caring agency, was first recognized as such in 1914, and from that time on it has continued to take direct charge of children.

As early as 1912 the department had been taking children, and even before that a limited number had been sent to orphanages, but there were hundreds in jails and poorhouses.

Under the present plan, according to Mrs. Emily W. Dinwiddie, director of the Bureau of Child Welfare, when a child is committed to the bureau he is brought to Richmond and placed in a detention home or in one of thirty-odd boarding homes of the bureau in or near Richmond.

He is given a careful physical and mental examination, his physical defects are corrected where possible, he is provided with clothing, and his difficulties are studied and a plan mapped out for his future.

The more delinquent children who need stricter discipline are sent to State industrial schools, but admission to these is through the children's bureau alone.

The more promising boys and girls are placed in homes.

Albemarle Cupid Busy During 1929

Licenses to Marry Issued to 231 Couples in Past Twelve Months.

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 1.—Cupid was busy in Albemarle County in 1929. During the twelve months just ended marriage licenses were issued in the county clerk's office to 231 couples—162 white and 69 colored—an increase of 34 over the previous year's total. The ages of the contracting parties ranged from 15 to 60 years.

Licenses were granted to 25 widowers and to 13 widows. The number of divorced persons trying a second venture was five, four males and one female. Four brides were only 15 years old, while ten were just "sweet 16." One man, aged 60, took a bride of 28, while another, who gave his age as 56, married a girl of only 16 years.

The youngest couples married during the year were Hugh Thomas, 22 and Martha Garland, 15, both of Esmont; Frank J. Tate, 21, and Edna F. Gibson, 15, both of Crozet; Kemper Shiflett, 22, of Mission Home, and Cora Frazier, 15, of Free Union; Woodsdie Munday, 22, and Mary Birckhead, 15, both of Rio.

FIFTH U. S. DISTRICT HAS BUSINESS LOSS

Review Says Reserve Note Circulation Gained in December.

COTTON PRICE DECLINES

Richmond, Va., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—There was a decrease in the volume of seasonal business during November and early December in the Fifth Federal Reserve District, but it was not regarded as serious in the monthly review of William W. Hoxton, chairman and Federal reserve agent.

"Liquidation of agricultural loans proceeded seasonally," said the report, "but perhaps at a somewhat slower rate than in most years. Member banks reduced their rediscounts at the Reserve Bank, although the reduction from country banks was not in proportion to the reduction of rediscounts of the city institutions.

"Federal reserve note circulation rose during the past month, to meet the demand for cash needed for crop marketing and the holiday trade. Time deposits and other savings deposits declined last month, as usually occurs at that season of the year, but demand deposits in reporting member banks increased somewhat.

Debits to Accounts Decline.

"Debits to individual accounts during the four weeks ended December 11 were less than debits during the preceding four weeks, an unusual development, and in addition were lower than during the corresponding four weeks of 1928 in a majority of the reporting cities and in the total for the district. This may be accounted for, at least in part, by the lessened activity in security dealings.

"Business failures in the Fifth District in November were less numerous and liabilities were 78 per cent lower than in November, 1928, a much more favorable showing than the national comparison, which revealed liabilities 28 per cent greater in November, 1929, than in November, 1928.

"Labor is only moderately employed and, on the whole, the outlook for the next few months appears more doubtful than in earlier months this year. Daily production of bituminous coal in November was less than in November, 1928, and total production of last month declined rather more than seasonal average in comparison with the October output.

Textile Mills Cut Output.

"Textile mills operated less extensively than in November, 1928, and there was some curtailment of work to four days a week, but the recession in operations was less marked than the average for the Nation. Retail trade in department stores in the Fifth District was better than in November, 1928, in the largest cities, but on the whole was poorer in the smaller cities and towns. Wholesale trade in November compared favorably with that of November a year ago in every line reported upon.

"Crop returns were quite spotted, but considering the District as a whole, production of most crops was up to the production of 1928. Prices for cotton, the leading money crop, are much lower this year than in 1928, and returns to the growers will be considerably below the returns last year. Tobacco prices have averaged somewhat lower this year than last, but increased production this year probably about balanced the lower prices."

Boy of 9 Committed In Playmate's Death

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—A 9-year-old boy today was under commitment to the State Board of Public Welfare as the result of Juvenile Court action on charges growing out of the death of a 5-year-old playmate, Norma Foutz, who died of burns in a local hospital on December 17.

It was charged that the boy tossed a lighted piece of paper against the child's clothing, which caused the fire resulting in her death two days later.

YOUTHS IN CULPEPER GIVEN MERIT BADGES

George Cox Awarded Eagle Rating by Court of Honor.

TWO NEW LIFE SCOUTS

Special to The Washington Post.

Culpeper, Va., Jan. 1.—The highest honor in scoutcraft, the title of Eagle Scout, was awarded George Cox, of Culpeper Troop No. 1, last night at a court of honor presided over by E. J. Nottingham, jr. Cox is the second scout of Culpeper to receive this honor, the first being E. J. Nottingham 3d.

J. B. Carpenter and Roy Taylor, also members of the First Troop, were given the title of life scouts, on presentation of evidence that they had such qualifications and had earned sufficient merit badges to entitle them to honor. Fred Farmer, Owen Childress and Tucker Butler qualified for the rating of Star Scout. Merit badges were awarded to a large class, some of the boys qualifying for as many as six badges. Those receiving these badges were Fred Farmer, public health, handicraft, athletics; Owen Childress, leathercraft, woodcraft, firemanship, handicraft, metal work; Winfrey Butler, athletics, personal health, public health; Tucker Butler, pioneering, athletics, public health; A. T. Howard, swimming, athletics, public health; Dick Farmer, woodcarving, personal health, pioneering; Roy Taylor, bird study, public health, civics, first aid to animals, pioneering; George Cox, camping; Jack Fray, camping, bird study.

Those qualifying as first class scouts were John Willis, Archie Lillard, A. T. Howard, Ray Farmer, Lucian Bruce and Fulton Colvin; second class scouts, Carrington Watkins, James Coleman, Carlos Williams, Glassell Stringfellow, Willie Quann, Robert Bruce, Leslie Taylor; tenderfeet, Jack Davies, Carrington Watkins, Fitzhugh Jordan, Aubrey Taylor, Charles O. Dobson, Harris Grimsley and Leslie Taylor.

Most of the boys qualified for their new titles and badges last summer at Camp Sacajawea, the official camp for the Lewis-Clark Scout area. The camp lies just across the mountain from the Hoover fishing lodge of the Rapidan.

Man Electrocuted Stringing Aerial

Wire Comes in Contact With 3,300-Volt Transmission Electric Line.

Newport News, Va., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Charles S. Doupe, 40, was electrocuted today at his home in Hilton Village, four miles north of Newport News, when a radio antennae which he was stringing came in contact with a 3,300-volt transmission wire.

Hope of saving Doupe's life was entertained for nearly five hours by three attending physicians. Prone pressure method artificial respiration was used from 9:15 until 2 o'clock, after which Dr. H. W. Curtis, Warwick County coroner, pronounced him dead.

Doupe is survived by his parents, who live near Scranton, Pa., and by his widow, and a 12-year-old son.

The judges of the contest were J. H. Lindsay, editor of the Progress; Dr. James G. Johnson, superintendent of city schools, and Henry W. Anderson, jr., assistant counsel for the Virginia Public Service Co.

Daily O'Currences

By JOHN DALY

LUELLA was sipping a cocktail. "Don't be alarmed," she said, offering me one, "this is just some nonalcoholic fruit——"

"Nonalcoholic fruit? Is there any other kind?"

"You've heard of applejack, haven't you? Where do you think that comes from, peaches?"

That proved her point. There are alcoholic fruits. As a matter of fact, the only fruit I know of that's strictly nonalcoholic is watermelon.

"Is there any watermelon juice in that cocktail?

• • • •

"OF course not—that would ruin it."

"What's in it?"

"Let's see," she mused, cocking her head. "There's a dash of grape juice, a spray of pineapple, the rind of a lime, a piece of peach, the top of an apricot, and——"

"Don't go any further," I pleaded, "you're breaking my heart!"

"Won't you have some?" she urged.

"Not I. Cocktails never did appeal to me. What I'd like to have is an old-fashioned ice cream soda——"

Luella had a happy thought. She got out one of the Delmonico glasses, dipped the edge of it for about half an inch in powdered sugar.

"Taste this," she said, "the sugar improves it 100 per cent."

"If sugar improves it more than one-half of 1 per cent," I told her, knowing my constitutional law, "it won't be nonalcoholic. You know what sugar does——"

"SUGAR?"

"Certainly! It's the base of all alcoholic content. Without sugar there'd be no fermentation——"

"Good heavens!" said Luella, "I've been experimenting with this cocktail for the Ladies' Aid——"

"They'll get a lot of aid out-a that if you let it stand long enough——"

"You don't get the idea," she flashed. "The Ladies' Aid is my temperance society."

"A temperance society? And you're planning to serve cocktails?"

"These are not really cocktails—just fruit——"

• • • •

"I WOULDN'T tempt 'em. You know what fruit did in the Garden of Eden. And those glasses! Old man Delmonico would turn over in his grave——"

"Oh, dear," she sighed, "whattum I gonna do?"

"If they must drink," I suggested, "why not give 'em vegetable cocktails?"

"That solves the problem," she said, concocting an entirely different recipe. "No one can object to tomato juice."

And liquid spinach looks like cream de menthe, after a fashion.

MASONS DEDICATE SHRINE IN ATLANTA

$2,500,000 Mosque Opened by Imperial Potentate in Brilliant Rites.

PLEA MADE FOR PEACE

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—The new $2,500,000 Mosque of the Atlanta Shrine Temple was dedicated today at a brilliant ceremony, conducted by Leo V. Youngworth, of Los Angeles, Imperial Potentate, and witnessed by nearly 1,000 shriners from various cities of the South.

The Imperial Potentate, addressing a throng at the new mosque on Peachtree street, told his hearers that they "must not forget the great power we have in molding public sentiment in favor of peace—the greatest hope of today." He declared that "unless something can be done at the forthcoming disarmament meeting in London," that the nations of the world would engage in a race for heavy armaments "similar to the one that brought on the World War."

Ceremonies at the temple, at which 56 candidates were admitted to the Shrine Temple here, followed a colorful parade of Shriners through the business section of Atlanta. Shrine Templers from Knoxville, Tenn.; Montgomery, Ala.; Atlanta, Charleston, S. C., and Greenville, S. C., were represented in the parade.

After the ceremonies at the temple, a buffet luncheon was served in the banquet hall at the mosque. Immediately afterward, the various bands and uniformed groups escorted the Imperial Potentate to Grant Field, where a football game was played for benefit of Shrine hospitals in the South. With the Imperial Potentate were Past Imperial Potentates D. W. Crossland, of Montgomery, Ala., and Conrad V. Dykeman, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Imperial Secretary James H. Price, of Richmond, Va., and other Shrine dignitaries.

Mystery Is Seen In Traffic Death

Police Investigate Facts Surrounding Killing of Youth, 13.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Henrico police early tonight still considered the death of Harry Morris, 13, whose body was found at noon by the roadside at Bottoms Bridge, about 10 miles from Richmond, a mystery. Possibility that the boy had been killed by a hit-and-run driver was the only solution they advanced.

A hub cap, found near the spot where the boy's body lay undiscovered for several hours, was the only clew to the cause of the tragedy.

The body was found by a traveler, and identified by parents of the boy, who had become alarmed at his failure to return from a New Year's Eve dance.

The automobile of Morris' parents, in which the boy and O. B. Harris, 26, had gone to the dance, was found first. It had been sideswiped in a collision with an automobile driven by L. K. Sims, Fort Eustis soldier. Witnesses said no one was hurt, and the automobiles were only slightly damaged. Harris told authorities he thought that passengers in both cars, including Morris, had been brought to Richmond in other automobiles.

Police learned from witnesses, however, that hile the crowd was gathered at the scene of the accident a speeding car passed, but no one noticed an accident.

Morris suffered a crushed skull and broken leg.

Pastor Declines Call To Church at Staunton

Special to The Washington Post.

Staunton, Va., Jan. 1.—The Rev. Dr. Henry M. DuBose, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Spartanburg, S. C., and formerly located in Danville, Va., has declined to accept the call extended by the First Presbyterian Church, of Staunton, to become its pastor.

He states that he feels it his duty to remain in Spartenburg. The First Church here will proceed to consider some one else.

MRS. DRUSILLA DAVIS DIES

Partlow Woman Succumbs Here to Paralysis at Age of 81.

Mrs. Drusilla Davis, 81 years old, widow of John W. Davis, of Partlow, Va., died yesterday morning of paralysis in a private sanitarium in Washington. She had been ill four weeks. Three of her daughters, the Misses Mary and Anne, of Partlow, and Mrs. Lee J. Graves, of Sealston, Va., were in attendance.

Two other daughters, Mrs. L. M. Smith, of Huntington, Va., and Mrs. E. W. Chewnig, of Partlow, and three sons, Dr. Henry Davis and Prof. Jack Davis, of Richmond, and Dr. George Davis, of Warrenton, Va., survive.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at Wellers Church, Spottsylvania County, Va., with burial in the church cemetery.

1930 LABOR MARKET WILL BE GOOD HERE

Federal Bureau Forecast Is Indicative of Abundant Supply and Demand.

VIRGINIAS WILL BE BUSY

Increased industrial activities, together with the expanded Government construction program, portend favorable employment conditions in the District of Columbia and adjoining States during 1930, Francis I. Jones, director general of the United States Employment Service, asserts in his annual forecast of labor prospects for the Nation.

The employment outlook for the District is fairly satisfactory, although it is not believed the volume of work in 1930 will greatly exceed that of 1929, Jones reports.

The Federal building program will offer employment to a large number of both skilled and unskilled laborers, of whom a plentiful supply exists, his report states, and industrial establishments in Washington also should continue to engage their usual forces on full-time schedules.

Since the highway department has more than $3,483,000 available for road and street improvement in the District, and the private building program will involve an expenditure of close to $40,000,000, the employment service anticipates no shortage of employment for any class of workers here during the year.

In Maryland, the 1930 industrial employment outlook is regarded as bright. "Practically all localities anticipate sufficient employment for resident skilled workers, and there may be some increase in the demand for unskilled help," the forecast states. "Operations have recently been started in new manufacturing establishments in a number of cities, and several towns have factories in course of erection, which, when completed, will create a demand for additional factory workers. All the major industries also expect to keep their usual forces engaged, with some plant expansion planned."

In addition to these employment sources, the State will have approximately $13,000,000 for highway construction, and large numbers of men will be engaged on various projects, the report asserts. Consequently, the opinion is generally expressed that there will be sufficient labor available for all requirements, even though reports indicate that there will be an increase in the demand.

With improvement expected in the textile situation, active building programs planned, and industrial operations generally favorable, the employment outlook for both skilled and unskilled labor in Virginia is considered to be bright.

Because of the large building programs, it is believed there will be a greater demand for building-trades men than prevailed in 1929, the report avers, adding that work on the airport at Norfolk and proposed adjacent airplane plants will provide work for a large number of men.

Richmond is expected to be the center for much employment. In addition to the $1,000,000 cigarette factory on which work already has begun, the city itself will offer work for many laborers. Preliminary work already has been started on a $1,500,000 bridge in that city, and the total expenditures for municipal maintenance and improvements will total $9,500,000, an increase of $1,700,000 over 1929.

An optimistic outlook prevails in practically all communities concerning the 1930 industrial and employment situation in West Virginia, the report states, and from all indications there will be some increase in the volume of building and municipal improvements.

The State will spend $3,000,000 for road maintenance, and the commission expects to have available for new contracts the proceeds of the sale of $10,000,000 of State road bonds, and approximately $796,000 of Federal aid.

Agricultural conditions in these States are expected to remain practically unchanged. There may be, however, a slight increase in truck farming in Virginia, and in tobacco acreage in West Virginia.

Partially Burned Body Discovered in Woods

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 1.—The body of Patrick Yantz, about 60 years old, was found partially burned in the woods this afternoon near Hazen, within 200 feet of the Mason and Dixon Line. Yantz, who lived in the community all his life and worked for many farmers, was unmarried and had no permanent abode or near relative, as far as is known with the exception of a brother who lived much as he did, and whose whereabouts are unknown.

Yantz had been seen late yesterday afternoon. The authorities found he had kindled a fire near a stump, beside which he had evidently lain when his clothing caught. His body lay about twenty feet from the fire. He had torn off his shirt, it is thought death came from inhaling fire and exposure. His body was brought to this city.

ALEXANDRIA POLICE ARREST 3,802 IN 1929

Annual Report Shows Stolen Property Worth $18,453 Was Recovered.

INVALID WOMAN RESCUED

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
312 S. Washington St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 823.

The annual report of Police Capt. W. W. Campbell, submitted yesterday, shows 3,802 arrests were made by local police in 1929, or 41 less than in 1928.

The report states that property valued at $21,173.46 was reported stolen, of which $18,453.71 was recovered during the year. There were 353 gallons of liquor seized, and 621 gallons destroyed, the excess being accounted for by the fact that some was left over from the year before. Twelve automobiles were seized in connection with violations of the dry laws.

Police headquarters furnished lodging to 1,246 persons, of whom 941 were white and 499 colored. The police answered 1,251 complaints, and 253 felony cases were investigated.

Automobile accidents within the city limits cost two lives in 1929, the first being Courtland Harrison, killed as the result of a motorcycle accident in the 300 block South Patrick street, and Arthus Purvis, killed November 23, at Prince and Henry streets. There were 429 automobile accidents reported inside the city limits and 38 in the outlying districts, which were investigated by the police. There were 80 persons injured within the city and 33 outside. Three hundred and seventy-seven of the accident cases were settled out of court.

The principal items in the report, in addition to the above, were: Housebreaking, 26, of which 22 were cleared up; grand larcency, 35, with 23 cleared up; petit larceny 162, and 74 cleared up; automobiles stolen in the city 24, with 22 recovered; out-of-town cars reported stolen and recovered by the local police, 32.

In December there were 258 arrests, or 38 less than in November. The three leading offenses were: Drunk, 66; violation of prohibition law, 39; traffic violations, 34.

Mrs. George West, invalid, wife of George West, sr., of East Lloyd avenue, Potomac, was rescued from her burning home Tuesday night by Charles Beck, who carried her from the burning building. She was taken to the home of A. V. Brooks, a neighbor.

The building caught fire from a defective flue, and was partially burned. The loss was placed at $2,000, partially covered by insurance. The West family lost practically all their personal effects. Engine Company, No. 5, and Potomac Company, No. 2, responded to the alarm.

Oriental Lodge, No. 6, Knights of Pythias, elected the following officers: H. L. Darnell, chancellor commander; J. C. Morgan, vice chancellor; W. W. Clements, master of wardrobe; E. R. Norris, keeper of records and seal; Charles R. Herbert, prelate; B. H. Cook, maste of finance; H. E. Arnold, master at arms; George W. Bonts, master of exchequer; Robert Hancock, inside guard, and R. P. Whitestone, outside guard.

The newly elected officers will be installed Tuesday night by Deputy Grand Chancellor W. H. Tredgill and staff.

The Railroad Clerk's Association of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad, will give their fifth annual banquet at the George Mason Hotel the night of January 22, with covers for 250 persons, including most of the officials of the railroad company. An elaborate program of entertainment is being prepared by the committee in charge, and several speeches will be made by officials of the company and others.

John Evans, of Four Mile Run, reported to the police yesterday that James Cook narrowly escaped injury when a bullet from a .22 caliber rifle crashed through the glass window of an electric car at Temple Station. Evans was unable to say who fired the shot, but it was supposed to have been fired by boys at target practice.

Hazel E. Reamy, 4-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey D. Reamy, of 212 South Henry street, was found dead in bed yesterday morning by her mother. Sergt. George Everly investigated and summoned Dr. T. Marshall Jones, city coroner, who issued a certificate of death from natural causes.

William H. Sutton, 71 years old, died yesterday at his home, 326 South Washington street, after a brief illness. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Hattie Virginia Sutton, and seven children: Millard R., Hiram H., Clarence W. and Raymond A. Sutton; Mrs. Joseph Rodgers, of this city; Mrs. William K. Griffith and Mrs. Ashby O'Meara, of Washington.

Funeral services will be conducted at the home at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon by the Rev. E. R. Spencer, of Trinity Methodist Church, and the Rev. George J. Hooker, of the Methodist Protestant Church. Interment will be in the Methodist Protestant Cemetery.

Lester Lee Pearce, 42 years old, unmarried, died yesterday at the home of Mrs. O. M. Henderson, 13 East Walnut street, Rosemont, after a long illness. He was formerly an insurance agent, and was a native of Elba, Ala.

Funeral services will be conducted at the residence at 4:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, by the Rev. Ryland T. Dodge, of the Baptist Temple and burial will be in Bethel Cemetery.

Dry Officer, Killer Of Youth, Pardoned

Byrd Frees Virginian, Who Shot Boy, 17, During Liquor Chase.

Special to The Washington Post.

Staunton, Va., Jan. 1.—A. Robert Dickson, former State prohibition officer, convicted of shooting to death Willard Dodge Monroe, 17, about a year ago, and sentenced to six months in the penitentiary and a fine of $500, has been granted a conditional pardon by Gov. Harry F. Byrd. Dickson has returned to his home in this county. He had served a majority of his time.

Monroe was driver of an automobile that Dickson was chasing, suspecting that it contained whisky. The chase lasted for several miles, and Dickson fired his pistol three or four times. The last bullet crashed through the back of the automobile and struck Monroe behind the left ear, killing him instantly. Three gallons and a half of liquor was found in the machine.

Dickson's defense was that he was firing at the tires of the machine, and not at Monroe.

SANTA MONICA PILOT DESCRIBES IMPACT

Col. Roscoe Turner Believes Collision Was Caused by Blinding Sun.

Santa Monica, Calif., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Ten persons, including Kenneth Hawks, motion picture director, and Max Gold, assistant director and former national handball champion, were killed today when two motion picture camera planes collided head-on in midair and plunged into the ocean near here.

The cabin ships, loaded with cameras and motion picture equipment, in addition to five persons each, crashed together at about 3,000 feet altitude, three miles off the coast. They wedged together in a tangled mass, burst into flames and plunged to the surface, sinking immediately.

Three of the passengers were thrown clear as the interlocked planes struck the water. The other seven were carried beneath the surface. Three bodies later broke free from the wreckage on the sea bottom and rose to be picked up by patrol boats. The doors had been removed from the plane cabins to give cameramen free play and searchers believed all bodies eventually would appear on the surface.

Official Death List.

The dead:

Kenneth Hawks, motion picture director and husband of Mary Astor, film actress.

Max Gold, assistant director and former national hand ball champion.

Geo. Eastman, cameraman.

Conrad Wells, cameraman.

Ben Frankel, assistant cameraman.

Hank Johannes, property man.

Tom Harris, property man.

Hallock Rouse, pilot.

Ross Cook, pilot.

Whim Saves Hawks' Brother.

All were in the employ of the Fox Film Corporation and all were residents of Hollywood except Rouse and Cook, who were Clover Field pilots.

Hawks' brother, Howard, whose wife is Athole Shearer, sister of Norma Shearer, screen star, escaped death by a last-minute whim which caused him to change his mind about accompanying Kenneth in one of the camera planes which took off from Clover field here, to film a parachute jump scene over the ocean. He had accompanied Kenneth to the field with the intention of boarding the plane.

Stunt Scene "Shot" Scheduled.

The two planes and a third, piloted by Lieut. Col. Roscoe Turner, transcontinental flier, were engaged in filming a sequence in a picture based on the death on July 5, 1928, of Capt. Alfred Lowenstein, multimillionaire Belgian financier, who disappeared from a transport plane over the English Channel and whose body later was found washed ashore.

Turner carried with him in his plane a parachute jumper, who was to leap into the ocean with the camera

Billy Dove and Mate To Dissolve Romance

Screen Star Separates From Director After Six Years.

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—First National Studios today disclosed that Billy Dove, featured motion picture actress and her husband, Irvin Willat, director, have separated.

Studio officials quoted Miss Dove as admitting that incompatibility had resulted in a definite rift in her six years of domestic happiness and that divorce probably would follow later. Mr. Willat, who is in New York City working for a small independent film company, married Miss Dove in October, 1923, soon after he left the Ziegfeld Follies for the movies. Rumors of their split arose in Hollywood film circles after she failed to join him for the Christmas holidays.

Federal Agents Seeking Woman Arrested Here Two Years Ago.

SPORTSMAN SHOWN AS DOPE RING HEAD

Important New York Persons Are Involved in U. S. Dope Quiz.

New York, Jan. 2 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Startling evidence, gleaned from the files of Arnold Rothstein, slain gambler, involving important persons of New York, "whose names mean something," will be presented before the January Federal grand jury in its investigation of the alleged narcotic rings, it was announced today by Assistant United States Attorney John M. Blake.

At the same time, although Federal authorities would not comment upon it, information leaked out that they were searching for Miss Audrey du Brea, a night-club hostess, who was arrested two years ago in Washington with Jacob Solomon. Solomon was subsequently given fourteen years for violation of the narcotic laws, while Miss du Brea was given a suspended sentence.

The main reason investigating officers want to see Miss du Brea, according to reliable information, is because they found her name in the effects of Louis Saccaroma, who is now out under $50,000 bail, on a narcotic charge, his place in Harlem having been raided last Saturday night.

Bail Supplied by Rothstein.

It was revealed by Mr. Blake, who declined to elaborate upon the known career of the young woman, that both her bail and that of Solomon were supplied by Arnold Rothstein. It was pointed out that this wide latitude, covered by the murdered gambler, only strengthens the evidence that he headed one of the largest dope rings in this country.

Now that the accumulation of evidence has permitted the Government to strike at the gangs operating in the illicit sale and transportation of narcotics throughout the United States, it has drawn the spotlight directly to the door of New York. There is no doubt now, according to the authorities, that the greatest market for drugs in this country is here.

That the work of the Government has just started with the raids last week and subsequent indictments was indicated today by Mr. Blake, who said that he was at work on twelve indictments against many de-

RUM SLAYINGS ARE PROTESTED BY BOSTON MOB

Coast Guard's Posters Torn Down at End of League Meeting.

SMUGGLERS' KILLING IS CALLED MURDER

Resolution Asks Hoover to Order "Impartial" Inquiry Into Case.

Slaying of Men Discovered Breaking Law Compared to Boston Massacre.

Boston, January 2 (A.P.).—A demonstration on Boston Common in which Coast Guard recruiting posters were destroyed was an unexpected aftermath today of a meeting in historic Faneuil Hall called by the Liberal Civic League in protest against the killing of three rumrunners in Rhode Island waters Sunday by coast guardsmen.

The petty officer in charge of the recruiting station was unable to stem the crowd. The posters were torn from their metal standards and trampled, and the standards were bent and broken.

The ancient rafters of Faneuil Hall echoed to charges by speakers that in enforcement of prohibition the Nation faces a new form of oppression. The Rhode Island incident was referred to by one speaker as the "Newport massacre" and was compared with the Boston massacre, the first bloodshed of the War of Independence.

Hoover Called Upon.

A resolution adopted by an audience which filled the hall called upon President Hoover for an "impartial" investigation. It follows, in part:

"We believe that we have a right to respectfully demand that you, sir, as President of the United States, order a thorough and searching investigation into the facts surrounding this deplorable incident by somebody not connected with the Coast Guard or the Treasury Department.

"By the continuance of such governmental practices as the incident above described we can see nothing but the destruction of the liberties for which our fathers fought, for which free men have bled from the time of the Great Charter.

Whitewash Is Charged.

"We are not asserting the guilt of the Coast Guard, but we believe the attitude of the Government as at present taken will justly give the impression that an attempt is being made to suppress the facts and whitewash a criminal act of the worst kind and all this for the enforcement of an unpopular, unnecessary and stupid law which has no proper place in the Constitution of our Nation and which

BOMB HORROR ARREST NEAR AS BABY VICTIM JOINS BRIDE IN DEATH

Former Official Held Source of Borah Data

Mrs. Willebrandt Gave Him Dry Evidence, Is Belief.

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt is believed to have been the one who gave Senator Borah his prohibition ammunition. Her name crept in yesterday as the speculation continued over the exchange of mystery letters between the senator and the President.

It has not yet been determined just what the President said in his letter to the senator following the latter's statement that he had documentary evidence sufficient to discharge immediately seventeen district attorneys, whether he asked him for the evidence or for suggestions on prohibition enforcement, and, if so, just how the senator replied. He still has the evidence.

Mrs. Willebrandt, it is pointed out, had sole charge of alcohol diversions when she was in the Department of Justice and is known to have felt pretty much about the situation as does Senator Borah now. That she Samuel Hall, 19 Months, Succumbs to Wounds in New Year Blast.

AUTOPSY PERFORMED ON MRS. BRADY'S BODY

Coroner's Jury Formed, but Inquest Is Not Ordered Yet; Parts of 'Hate-Box' Found.

A second death was written across the bloody record of the Seat Pleasant bomb outrage last night when Samuel Hall, 19 months old and the baby of his family, died at Sibley Hospital.

The child, an innocent victim of a terrible hatred, will be buried alongside his sister, Naomi Hall Brady, 18, the young bride for whom the bomb was meant.

County Policeman Frank Prince, the lone investigator in this most revolting of nearby Maryland's crimes, announced last night that an arrest in the case was impending.

The principal suspect, Prince said, was an elderly bachelor who had tried in vain to win Naomi Hall. When he learned a day or so before Christmas that she had been secretly married in November to Herman Brady, a 22-year-old farmer, the spurned suitor burst into tears.

Has Knowledge of Dynamite.

He is known to have a knowledge of dynamite, the explosive used in the fatal bomb.

Physicians in local hospitals are watching closely over four other members of the family who were maimed or injured when the bomb, camouflaged as a Christmas present, exploded in the Hall kitchen on New Year's Day.

Dorothy Hall, 4, who was injured on the head, face, shoulder and body, was reported last night to be in a serious condition at Sibley Hospital.

Mrs. Nora Hall, 45, the mother, was in Providence Hospital, an eye blasted out and her abdomen shattered. She was kept in ignorance of the death of Samuel, her youngest. With her at Providence are Leslie, 16, who lost part of his hand, and Thomas, 8, who was severely cut on the hands.

Grandmother Leaves Hospital.

Mrs. Margaret Bromley, 86, mother of Mrs. Hall, the least badly hurt of those in the house, was able to leave Casualty Hospital late yesterday. She was in an upstairs room when the blast occurred.

An autopsy was performed last night on the body of Mrs. Naomi Hall Brady at the funeral establishment of Francis Gasch's Sons, in Hyattsville, by Dr. John I. Boyd, of Forrestville.

This postmortem examination was ordered by State's Attorney J. Frank Parran, who hoped that something might be found that would help in the investigation, fragments of the bomb, for example. The result of the autopsy was not announced.

Coroner's Jury Formed.

A coroner's jury also was organized last night, and, under the direction of Justice of the Peace John Weast, viewed the body of Mrs. Brady. The jury will be held in readiness to hold an inquest at any time the authorities want to order one.

In the meantime, fragments of the Christmas "box of hate" will be turned over to the Bureau of Standards here for examination.

Officer Prince said last night that in searching for bits of the bomb which exploded in the Hall kitchen New Year's morning he had salvaged a piece of the box in which it was stored, several nails which it con-

COAST GUARD RACES TO SHIP IN DISTRESS

45 MEN ABOARD CRAFT

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Disregarding storm warnings broadcast by the Weather Bureau, two Coast Guard cutters late today were racing to the rescue of the disabled freighter California, which was being battered by a 75-mile gale far out on the Pacific.

The cutters Snohomish and Haida were expected to reach the crippled vessel some time tomorrow. Latest reports from the California gave her position as about 330 miles almost due west of Cape Flattery.

Forty-five men are abord the ship, which lost her steering gear in the terrific storm. The Coast Guardhere received a message late today from Capt. Gregor Johnson, master of the California, which said the ship was "drifting 90 degrees true, 3 miles an hour." This would mean the vessel was drifting east.

The States Steamship Co., of Portland, owner of the ship, reported receiving a message that the captain had rigged up a temporary rudder and was steaming toward Cape Flattery.

The Portland company denied earlier reports that the forward and aft holds of the ship were full of water and Coast Guard officers expressed doubt that the ship was foundering, since none of the messages received so far had indicated that it was leaking.

The California, 3,343 net tons, left Kalama on the Columbia River, December 30 with a cargo composed mostly of lumber for South China.

7,843 AUTO OWNERS STORM TAX OFFICE

$44,390 Taken In on First Day of General Sale of License Tags.

MANY WAIT FOR HOURS

For the first time in history the personal tax office got the breaks yesterday when it took in $44,390 from 7,843 automobile owners.

Having been unable in past years to collect personal taxes on automobiles, the District Commissioners decided that the remedy lay in requiring owners to produce tax receipts before they could obtain tags for the new year.

Although this involves payments which may require motorists to disburse as much as $129.50 before they can get tags for some of the more de luxe foreign cars, it appeared to be no deterrent to the mob that stormed the lower floors of the District Building yesterday.

The line began to form a few minutes after 9 o'clock on New Year's night, when William P. Storty, of 2507 K street northwest, staked out his claim in front of the emergency counters that have been erected in the front corridor on the ground floor of the building.

Storty kept a solo vigil until midnight, when he was joined by Francis McDaniel, of 31 Q street northeast, and about an hour later Donald W Graffius, of 17 U street northwest, arrived. Miss Betty Whitfield, of the Park Lane Apartments, was the first woman in the line, taking her place at 3 o'clock yesterday morning. Stor-

JONES SEES SLUMP IN "TOPERS" ON HILL

Fewer Members of Congress Drink Now Than in Past, Senator Declares.

LAMENTS QUAFFING DRYS

(Associated Press.)

Lamenting the drinking of liquor by "some senators and some representatives," Senator Jones, of Washington, last night contributed his latest views on prohibition to the furious discussion of the enforcement situation which has excited the Capital recently.

"He practices what he preaches," was the way the Washington senator described President Hoover, in appealing over the radio for the public to be patient and help. His address took notice of arguments advanced against the dry laws and gave his answers to them.

"In my judgment," he said, "a far fewer number of senators and representatives drink now than did 20 and 30 years ago. I have seen far fewer senators under the influence of liquor during the last ten years than I did during the preceding ten years. They will get fewer and fewer as the years go by."

Senator Jones revealed that he had received many letters recently asking if congressmen were excused from the laws to enforce prohibition.

"Of course not," he answered last night.

Alluding to reports that "many congressmen vote 'dry' while they drink liquor," Jones declared that was not a valid argument against prohibition.

"I am sorry that it may be so," he continued, "but this just emphasizes the strength of the sentiment of the people back home. Instead of showing a weakness in prohibition sentiment, it demonstrates its strength. Representatives are, primarily, to represent the majority views of their constituents and that is what many of them do regardless of their personal views."

Senator Jones remarked that he did not know the attitude of Presi-

HOOVER IS DEFENDED ON DELEGATE CHOICE

RECALLS GENEVA "MESS"

(Associated Press.)

A defense of President Hoover for refraining from placing naval officers on the United States delegation to the London arms conference was voiced yesterday by Representative McClintic, Oklahoma, a Democrat on the House naval committee.

"President Hoover is to be warmly congratulated for appointing members of the commission that represent the American people," McClintic said in a statement, "rather than the officers of the United States Navy."

He took exception to the stand taken in New York by Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske, retired, that a mistake had been made because no naval officers were appointed to the London conference.

"When it is taken into consideration that the sorriest mess ever exposed to the American public," McClintic said, "was the proceedings at Geneva at the last armament conference, which were conducted by a commission, the majority of whom were naval officers, ably assisted by a representative of certain shipbuilders, it can be easily understood why President Hoover has used such good judgment in appointing the kind of commission that will not be dominated by those who have a selfish interest to serve."

McClintic referred to the activities of William B. Shearer, naval lobbyist, which recently were investigated by a Senate committee.

"As to Shearer's effect on the Geneva conference," McClintic continued, "it is now known that he had the cooperation of Admirals Charles P. Plunkett, H. A. Wiley, W. V. Pratt, J. M. Reeves, F. H. Schofield and Commanders H. C. Train and H. A. Frost.

"His work was so satisfactory that one officer in the naval intelligence

Lawyer Will Oppose Simmons in Primary

Raleigh Man's Fight for Senate Seat Seen as Result of Bolt.

Announcement from Raleigh, N. C., that Senator Simmons will be opposed for renomination by Josiah William Bailey, an able and experienced politician with large ready-made following, also for many years a wheel horse of the powerful Simmons organization, was received with interest in virtually all political circles here yesterday.

Bailey's cast of his hat into the ring where the senior Democratic member of the Senate and former chairman of the finance committee has gone unchallenged 30 years save for an unsuccessful contest by the late Gov. William H. Kitchin midway, comes as an aftermath to Simmons' bolt of Gov. Smith in the recent presidential election. It undoubtedly derives special encouragement from the result of the Virginia primaries, where the candidates of Bishop Cannon, jr., and of the Hoovercrats generally met decisive defeat.

In attacking Gov. Smith, the veteran Democratic leader was vigorously opposed by most of his chief lieutenants, including former Gov. Cameron Morrison, as well as Bailey. Nevertheless, it transpired that he had not underrated the antagonism toward Smith on grounds of prohibition and region.

It had recently been expected that either Bailey or Judge W. J. Brogden would oppose Simmons. Former Gov. Angus W. McLean announced that he would not run if Simmons did.

lina district under Wilson, on Simmons' recommendation. He is now a Raleigh lawyer, about 55 years old. Inheriting from his father the Biblical Recorder, the State's leading Baptist organ, he increased its influence until he left it for the law and politics.

He has shown himself a strong political campaigner with both tongue and pen. His special sources of individual strength, besides the Baptist following, include the assured support of his father-in-law, James H. Pau, of Raleigh, brother of Representative E. W. Pou, a lawyer of wide political reputation, who has shown no desire for office himself.

It is understood here that of the eight democratic members of the House from North Carolina, only

Temperature Reaches 66 as Washington Doffs Coats and Wraps.

Not in fourteen years and upon but two corresponding days of the year has the National Capital experienced a warmer January 2 than that of yesterday. In the streets, parks and in public and private conveyances, overcoats, topcoats and furs were conspicuous by their absence.

The United States Weather Bureau officially recorded the temperature as registering 66 at 2 o'clock. At noon it had reached 59 and in the next two hours steadily climbed until it touched 66. After that hour the mercury gradually receded, and was below 60 at 6 o'clock, and still falling.

Fourteen years ago, or on January 2, 1916, the temperature in Washington registered 70, while 53 years ago, or on January 2, 1876, a mark of 71 was recorded, which is the record for that day of the year. Yesterday's 65 is the third highest.

Weather Bureau officials predict rain for today with a falling temperature, although a real cold snap is not believed in sight.

Removal of Old Yew Trees To Cathedral Here Halted

Petersburg Citizens' Ire Aroused by Attempt to Dig Them Up.

City Manager Paul S. Morton, of Petersburg, Va., has halted efforts to remove two beautiful and ancient Irish yews from the Square of Quinn Morton in historic Blandford Cemetery, scheduled to be placed in the bishop's garden of the National Cathedral here. Action was taken by the city manager as soon as it became known that workmen from Washington had begun the work of digging up the trees, which are very beautiful. Many Petersburg people became indignant, and the Petersburg Garden Club sent a telegram to Bishop James E. Freeman of Washington protesting against the removal of the trees, which are believed to be at least 125 years old.

Starlings Cling to Roost Despite Smell-Pot Attack

First Effort to Rout Them From District Building Ends in Failure.

The starlings which congregate nightly in the vicinity of the District Building got their first intimation last night since The Post launched its campaign against them that they are in bad with the Commissioners as well as with the general public. But the hint only aroused a spirit of defiance in their breasts and they stuck to their limbs with a persistence that would have put the old Spartan soldiers to shame.

A half dozen smudge pots, which gave off foul smelling odors through the sycamores, seemed not to bother the birds in the least. One could almost hear them hiss as they roosted above the smoking buckets.

Funeral Plans are Laid.

Prince's job now is to find nails and paper similar to those found on the scene of the blast. If he could accomplish this, he feels that he would have a strong circumstantial evidence.

Funeral plans for Mrs. Brady were completed yesterday by her husband, Herman Brady. The body will be buried in the Mount Oak Methodist Cemetery at Mitchellville, Md.

Although Washington detectives are giving what aid they can, the investigation into nearby Maryland's most startling crime actually is a one-man investigation. The lone sleuth is Officer Prince.

State's Attorney Parran did go to the scene of the explosion yesterday. He peered through the window, observed that it was "terrible" and returned to his office, and remained there for the rest of the day. Last night, however, he promised that he would get out today and interview some of those who might throw light on the mystery.

Neighbor Repeats Story.

Officer Prince tried yesterday to talk to the injured members of the Hall family, but none of them were in condition to talk. Among those that Prince did talk to yesterday was Mrs. John Buckley at whose home on Carmody road the bomb was left Saturday night or Sunday morning. She had nothing to add to her story of the day before, which, briefly, was that she found the "Christmas box" on her doorstep when she went out to get her Sunday morning edition of The Washington Post.

The box was addressed to Naomi Hall. On New Year's morning Mrs. Buckley saw Leslie Hall passing and called him and gave him the package. Leslie took it home, and then the entire family gathered in the kitchen to watch Mrs. Hall open it. As the mother lifted the lid, there was a terrific explosion and the occupants of the kitchen were tossed in every direction.

Low White House Repair Bid $74,880

Sum Does Not Include Cost of Refurnishing Executive Offices.

Contract for repairing structural damages caused by the Christmas Eve blaze at the White House executive offices is expected to be awarded today to the C. H. Tompkins Co., of Washington, on its low bid of $74,880.

Six bids for the work were opened yesterday by Maj. J. C. Mehaffey, assistant to Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, director of the Office of Public Buildings and Parks. The bidders included five Washington firms and one from Chicago. Other bids follow:

De Sibour Construction Co., $81,950; James Baird Construction Co., $82,500; R. Wimer Bolling, $84,545; N. P. Severin Co., of Chicago, $86,000; Davis Wick Rosengarten Co., $86,320.

The contract, which likely will be awarded as soon as word is received from Col. Grant, who is now on a short vacation at Clinton, N. Y., provides only for repairing the structure of the executive offices. Contracts for interior decorations and furnishing will be awarded later.

Sugar Bounty Proposed Instead of Tariff Jump

(Associated Press.)

With the long-pending controversy over the sugar tariff about to come before the Senate for decision, the Western Republican independents are seriously considering a bounty proposal as a substitute for the increased rates.

Senator Borah, of Idaho, a leader of the Republican independents who have the balance of power in the tariff clash between the Republicans and Democrats, is preparing the bounty amendment. He had not decided upon the bounty figure last night nor had a definite decision been reached that it would be offered.

GALLOWAY RESIGNS JUSTICE AID BERTH

Assistant Attorney General Quits to Join Law Firm in Washington.

SERVED HERE TEN YEARS

Announcement of the resignation of Herman J. Galloway as Assistant Attorney General of the United States in charge of defense of suits against the Government was made by the Department of Justice yesterday simultaneously with the announcement by the law firm of King & King that he had been named a partner.

The department made public that Mr. Galloway tendered his resignation to Attorney General William D. Mitchell, effective December 31, but that he was continuing to administer the duties of his office and probably would remain in office until the President names his successor.

The firm of King & King also made public the retirement of William B. King from active membership, although he will continue to act as counsel. In addition to Mr. Galloway, the firm also numbers George A. King and George R. Shields, with John W. Gaskins as an associate.

Mr. Galloway was born and reared in Newport, Ind., and upon graduation from high school there attended the University of Indiana. He was graduated in law from Georgetown University in 1920, and in 1921 received the degrees of master of law and master of patent law from that institution. Prior to that time, however, he had been admitted to the bar in Indiana in 1911 and practiced at Newport until 1913, moving to Terra Haute, Ind., to practice until 1918.

He was in the Ordnance Corps of the Army in 1918, and from 1919 to 1920 was an attorney in the office of the Alien Property Custodian. From 1920 to 1925 he served as special assistant to the Attorney General of the United States, and since 1925 has been Assistant Attorney General. This latter service has included enforcement of consent decree against the "Big Five" meat packers under the antitrust laws, and as representative of the Government in the case of U. S. versus Chemical Foundation, Inc.

Mr. Galloway is a member of the Mystic Shrine and the Columbia Country Club.

STREET CAR TRACKS UNDER POLICE GUARD

New Orleans Force Spurred by Total of 64 Bomb Outrages in 1929.

SHOOT TO KILL, IS ORDER

New Orleans, La., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Announcement by New Orleans Public Service today of the bombing of 64 trolley cars here since the street car strike of union street car crews last July spurred the police department to station heavily armed patrolmen on guard along the city car routes at dark tonight.

The police car received shotguns and pistols and was under orders from the superintendent of police, Theodore Ray, to shoot to kill the bombers, "if necessary."

Though only four persons were recorded as receiving injuries in the dynamiting, scores were shaken and bruised and an undetermined amount of damage was done to street cars, trackage and nearby buildings.

Jitney Sympathizers Blamed.

Ray today laid the continuance of dynamiting to sympathizers with jitney operators and said he believed the perpetrators of the sabotage which grew out of the strike now intended to terrify street car patrons and furnish a flourishing jitney business.

He told the police they must reckon with an automobile load of men, possibly heavily armed, that drives into a darkened section, sets a dynamite contraption on the track and speeds away.

"Use your weapons, your shotguns and pistols, if you come across these dynamiters," the police head told his entire force. "This bombing of street cars must cease."

Injunctions Are Granted.

The United States District Court, which took a hand in union sympathetic riots after a dozen street cars had been burned and two men shot to death early in the strike, today granted injunctions to eastern bondholders of Public Service against 815 alleged jitney operators, restraining them from carrying passengers for hire. A preliminary injunction was issued by Judge Wayne G. Borah against 142 others several weeks ago.

New Year's Eve ushered one of the bombings and last night two more cars were blown up within a period of twenty minutes. The dynamiters have left no clues as to their identity.

Four Sailors Hurt In Saratoga Blaze

Giant Airplane Carrier Is Blackened by Blast of Gasoline.

San Pedro, Calif., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Four men were burned, three of them seriously, when an explosion of undetermined cause today blackened two-thirds of the starboard side of the U. S. S. Saratoga, giant naval airplane carrier, and destroyed the captain's gig, moored to a boom alongside.

The injured:

A. L. Houston, seaman second class, seriously burned.

H. Kentfield, seaman first class, seriously burned.

G. W. Sebrey, seaman second class, seriously burned.

B. J. Morton, seaman second class, minor burns.

Houston, Kentfield and Sebrey were aboard the gig when the explosion occurred. Whether it had its source on the small craft or in the gasoline lines on the bottom of the Saratoga, neither the injured men nor naval authorities were able to say tonight. A board of inquiry was called for an official investigation.

Warden of Auburn Vacates Position

Whether Resignation or Retirement Appears Moot Question.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 2 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Brig. Gen. Edgar S. Jennings is no longer warden of Auburn State Prison, it was announced here today. Commissioner of Correction Raymond F. C. Kieb said the warden had offered his resignation and this "has been accepted." He did not say whether it was requested.

Later in the day the facts in the case were amended somewhat by Gen. Jennings, in a statement made at Auburn. "I did not send a resignation," he explained. "I did, however, request that I be permitted to retire, under the pension law."

Whether resigned or retired, Gen. Jennings, at the end of the most dramatic of the thirteen years he has spent at the prison, is no longer its official head. He has not been actively in charge since the riot of December 11. A statement is expected soon from Gov. Roosevelt reciting the exact facts in the case.

Dr. Frank L. Christian, superintendent of the Elmira State Reformatory, was named acting warden at Auburn by the governor December 14, when injuries received in the December mutiny, the second at the prison in five months, temporarily incapacitated Warden Jennings.

Detroit Gangsters Shoot Police Foe

Inspector Who Warred on Rackets Seriously Hurt in Mysterious Attack.

Detroit, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—A city-wide search for a black sedan and at least three men, who this morning shot and seriously wounded Inspector Henry J. Garvin, head of the crime and bomb squad, and probably fatally wounded an 11-year-old schoolgirl who was in the path of their bullets, was being pushed here tonight.

Inspector Garvin, for two years identified as the moving spirit in the city's battle against racketeers, extortioners and liquor interests, was caught by a veritable broadside of revolver bullets and shotgun slugs shortly before 8 a. m. today, as he was driving to work along Coplin avenue, between Jefferson and Essex avenues. The occupants of the black sedan, believed to have waited outside Inspector Garvin's house most of the night, drove up behind the officer's car, forced him over to the curb and when they came alongside, opened fire.

The schoolgirl, Lois Bartlett, daughter of Murray Bartlett, a Detroit automobile factory worker, was found lying in the yard of a house across the sidewalk. She had been struck in the head and arm by three bullets. The girl had been walking along the sidewalk to school, a short distance away.

JOHNSON MAY WIN IN NOMINEE FIGHT

Oftedahl Is Not Likely to Receive Revenue Post at San Francisco.

CAST MARYLAND VOTE

(Associated Press.)

The contested nomination of Alf Oftedahl to be collector of internal revenue at San Francisco probably will be withdrawn by President Hoover because of the complaint that the nominee is a resident of Maryland.

The nomination has been the subject of stubborn controversy between Senators Shortridge and Johnson of California, both Republicans, with Shortridge defending the Hoover appointee.

Senator Johnson complained of Oftedahl's residence in another State and also objected that he was the selection of the "Benjamin machine" in San Francisco. He threatened to carry his fight to the Senate floor.

Recently Senator Shortridge received evidence that Oftedahl, who was a deputy prohibition director, had registered last year in Maryland and had voted in that State. It was understood last night that he would communicate this fact to the President and that Mr. Hoover will withdraw the nomination after the Senate reconvenes next week.

Louis Gimbel, Founder Of New York Store, Dies

New York, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Louis S. Gimbel, pioneer dry goods merchant and cofounder with Isaac Gimbel, of Gimbel Bros. New York department store, died today at his Park avenue home. He was 62 years old and had retired from active participation in Gimbel Bros. in 1923. He was born in Philadelphia. In 1896 he came to New York.

His widow is a sister of the late Jules Mastbaum, of Philadelphia. Also surviving are two sons — Lee Adam Gimbel and Louis S. Gimbel, jr., both members of the New York Stock Exchange.

Inquiry Into Bus Wreck Killing Two Due Today

Richmond, Ind., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Investigation into the wreck of a Greyhound Lines bus today at West Alexandria, Ohio, 19 miles west of Dayton, Ohio, in which two persons were killed and twelve injured, will begin tomorrow with a coroner's inquest at Eaton, Ohio. The injured passengers will be most of the witnesses.

W. R. Spratt, driver of the St. Louis-Pittsburgh bus, suffered internal injuries when the machine plunged over a 15-foot embankment and buried its hood deep into the side of a gully. He has been unable to give any account of the accident. Thomas Carney, 45, Alexandria, Ind., and Miss Esther Masters, 23, Connorsville, Ind., were instantly killed in the wreck.

CONVENTION CLEARS U. S. CLAIM TO LAND

Stimson and Sir Esme End Philippine Boundary Dispute.

ROTA'S GROUP ARRIVES

(Associated Press.)

Disposing of the last question of sovereignty in the Pacific, Secretary Stimson and Sir Esme Howard, the British Ambassador, signed a convention yesterday establishing definitely the line between the Philippine Archipelago and British North Borneo.

Under the convention and accompanying exchange of notes between the United States and Great Britain, the American title to the Turtle and Mangsee Islands was recognized. At the same time it was agreed that these small land units should continue under administration of the British North Borneo Co.

Although title to the islands was assigned originally by a protocol among Great Britain, Spain and Germany in 1887, the treaty under which the United States took sovereignty of the Philippines from Spain did not mention them and the treaty of 1900 which gave to the United States title to all Philippine and Sulu Archipelago islands not mentioned in the prior agreement still left the boundary unsettled.

The convention signed yesterday also extended to the islands the operation of that part of the Washington arms treaty which prevents their fortification.

A reminder that the question of Philippine independence soon will be taken up by Senate and House committees will reach Washington today in the form of the Philippine Independence Commission headed by Speaker Roxas.

They will be met at the station by Resident Commissioner Guevara, Vincente Bunuan, of the Philippine Press Bureau, and other Filipinos in Washington. Camilo Osias, junior resident commissioner, will be a member of the arriving delegation, having joined the incoming Philippine delegation at Chicago.

The commission is expected to begin work immediately on the final shaping of plans for appearances before the committees. Hearings are scheduled to begin January 15.

Sheriff, Guilty in Rum Plot, Is Facing Ouster

Boise, Idaho, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Ouster proceedings were ordered drawn up today by Attorney General W. D. Gillis for removal of Sheriff R. E. Veniger, of Shoshone County, after his conviction in the Mullan "rum conspiracy." The action was launched upon Sheriff Veniger's refusal to resign pending his appeal to the court of appeals.

At the same time Attorney General Gillis advised the Mullan city attorney that the only legal way of filling the city board of trustees was through appointment by the governor. Chairman Arthur Harwood and three of the trustees have started for prison, leaving only one member of the board in office.

Artist Denies Proposing In Dancer's Suit for Balm

"Affinity Earle" Says He "Didn't Make Love Any More Than She Did," in Answer to Dolores Salazar's $180,000 Damage Claims at Los Angeles.

Los Angeles, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Ferdinand Pinney Earle, artist known as "Affinity Earle," in a deposition on file today in superior court, denied that he ever proposed marriage to Dolores Salazar, Spanish dancer. The deposition, signed in Paris, was the 51-year-old defendant's answer to the dancer's $180,000 breach of promise suit.

When the case was called for trial this morning, Superior Judge Arthur Keetch continued it indefinitely to await the arrival of additional expected depositions from Earle.

Earle declared that he had proposed to only one, the present one, of his four wives. The others—"there is such a thing as spontaneous agreement without proposal"—he explained.

In her suit Miss Salazar demands $50,000 for alleged breach of promise to marry, a like sum for alleged betrayal and $30,000 for alleged breach of contract to star her in motion pictures, and the balance for punitive damages and failure to place agreed amounts in Hollywood banks for her credit. The dancer also declares that Earle won her by a "course of ardent love making and passionate letter writing," and that he finally abandoned her in Paris.

All these charges were denied by Earle in his deposition, although he admitted Miss Salazar accompanied him on a trip to Paris two years ago. He asserted that she abandoned him there after accompanying him across Mexico to Cuba and Europe. Earle declared he first met Miss Salazar when she came to his home uninvited, relating to him a story of having been beaten by her father. "I did not make love to her any more than she did to me," he declared in the deposition.

He denied that he made any "arrangement" for marriage with the dancer, stating that he was not divorced at the time.

He said he was married in Paris January 14, 1928, to Denise Helene Loncin.

KIWANIANS INSTALL OFFICERS FOR 1930

Perfect Attendance Records of Members Accorded Recognition.

EDGAR MORRIS HONORED

The installation of officers and directors for 1930, the presentation of bronze mementos for perfect attendance and the admission of six new members featured the first meeting of the year of the Washington Kiwanis Club at the Washington Hotel yesterday.

With appropriate ceremonies James B. Edmunds was inducted as president; Merritt O. Chance, first vice president; Eugene R. Woodson, second vice president, and George H. Winslow, secretary-treasurer, while the board of directors will consist of Edgar Morris, Radford Moses, Edwin H. Etz, Charles H. Frame, Charles D. German, Charles H. Pardoe, George O. Vass and Dewey Zirkin.

Following installation ceremonies John S. Bennett, Oakley J. Graham, Edmund F. Jewell, Edgar Markham, Rev. Edwin H. Roach and Thomas A. Travis were admitted to membership.

Perfect Attendance Rewarded.

Twenty-one members of the club who had perfect attendance records for the last year were presented by Past President Edgar Morris with bronze paper weights bearing the seal of the Kiwanis Club, with the inscription, "100 per cent attendance, 1929."

Those who received the mementos were Dr. George A. Baker, who has not missed a meeting since April 19, 1919; Z. D. Blackistone, John J. Boobar, Albert M. Briggs, Merritt O. Chance, Burns C. Downey, James B. Edmunds, William N. Freeman, Edwin F. Hill, Harry G. Kimball, F. Archibald Meatyard, Frank T. Mitchell, Edgar Morris, Radford Moses, Charles W. Pimper, Fred W. Quinter, John F. Sheiry, Dr. O. U. Singer, William F. Smith, Arthur F. Steinberg and George H. Winslow.

While Dr. Baker, in point of continuous attendance, has the most perfect record of any member of the club, there are any number of others who have not missed a meeting since their affiliation with the organization.

Other Perfect Records.

The names of those who have not missed a meeting since becoming a member, with the date of their affiliation, follow:

Arthur F. Steinberg, December 20, 1923; Burns C. Downey, July 24, 1924; Z. D. Blackistone, October 25, 1925; Dr. O. U. Singer, May 6, 1926; James B. Edmunds and Albert M. Briggs, November 18, 1926, while Harry G. Kimball has not missed a meeting since November 1, 1923, and F. Archibald Meatyard's continuous attendance record started on November 8, 1923.

After the installation of the new officers and directors, John J. Boobar presented retiring President Edgar Morris with a gold watch, the gift of fellow Kiwanians.

Auburn Warden Quits; Resignation Accepted

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The resignation of Edgar S. Jennings as warden of Auburn Prison, where two riots have occurred in the past year, was announced today by Dr. Raymond F. C. Kieb, State commissioner of correction.

Dr. Kieb would not discuss whether whether Jennings' resignation had been requested, but said "it has been accepted."

Coroner's Office Ends Busy Year

More Than 1,700 Deaths Inquired Into During Last 12 Months.

The last year was a busy one for Dr. J. Ramsay Nevitt, District coroner, and his assistant, Dr. Joseph D. Rogers, more than 1,700 deaths coming to their attention for investigation. The largest total of any single month was 190 last January.

More than 350 deaths due both to violence and natural causes were investigated by the coroner and his assistant during the year, including 105 suicides, 81 traffic accident deaths and 46 homicides.

Included in their investigations were such famous deaths as those occasioned by the recent boiler explosion in the McCrory Five & Ten Cent Store, the death of Mrs. Virginia Hurley McPherson, the slaying of Miss Marjorie O'Donnell by Dexter Dayton in a room at the Roosevelt Hotel and the mysterious fatal plunge of Mrs. Aurelia Fischer Dreyfus from a balcony at the Potomac Boat Club.

Hyde's Bag Limit Statement Flayed

Dr. W. T. Hornaday Calls It Inadequate Gesture of Repentance.

Terming Secretary Hyde's announcement of a reduction in bag limits for ducks and geese next season as an "inadequate gesture of deathbed repentance," Dr. W. T. Hornaday, of the Permanent Wild Life Protection Fund, last night issued a statement urging passage of the McNary-Haugen bag-limit bill.

Dr. Hornaday wired the following statement to The Post from his home in Stamford, Conn.:

"This totally belated change of heart has taken place because of the action of Senator McNary and Representative Haugen in bringing a fine and adequate bag-limit reduction bill before Congress.

"With a mighty host of outside bird defenders clamoring for its passage, it means that no longer will the tail wag the dog through hidden influence."

400,000 Veterans of War Lose Chance to Get Bonus

Hundreds of Applications Pour in Just Before Time Limit Expires; One Man Sends Cable From Hankow, China.

Approximately 400,000 World War veterans lost the opportunity of collecting the Government bonus, or adjusted compensation, to which they were entitled by failing to file proper applications before last midnight, according to estimates of officials of the American Legion national rehabilitation division.

Applications continued to pour into the legion headquarters until after the last mail at 11 o'clock last night. Extra employes had been hard at work for the last several days preparing the claims for transfer to the proper Government agency. About 500 were received by the legion office in the last two days.

Just 50 minutes before the closing time four persons who were entitled to the compensation appeared at the legion office and filed applications, declaring that they had heard of the opportunity for the first time last night over Station WMAL. A cable from a veteran in Hankow, China, asked that his name be placed on the list. The legion cabled a reply instructing the veteran to file his application with the nearest naval officer.

Applications totaling more than $500,000 have passed through the hands of the legion rehabilitation headquarters alone since the final drive opened.

Stimson Convinced Abolition of Foreign Rights At Once Not Meant.

(Associated Press.)

Satisfied after a study of the recent Chinese decree on abolition of extraterritoriality that the position of the Nanking government is in line with that taken by the United States in the matter, Secretary Stimson said yesterday that no representations to China are contemplated.

The Secretary said he understood the decree to mean that the Chinese government set January 1 of this year as the date for beginning a gradual abolition of the extraterritorial rights now held by foreign nations, rather than for an immediate ending of the privileges.

A long time will be required to complete the process of abolition, Secretary Stimson indicated, and the American part in the matter will be handled through a continuance of conversations between the State Department and the Chinese Minister to Washington. These will not be suspended during the London arms conference.

Secretary Stimson said he is convinced that press dispatches from China construing the decree as ordering immediate abolition of foreign rights on Chinese soil were incorrect.

Scouting Fleet Goes South Today

Battleships to Engage in Miami Warfare in Waters of Caribbean Sea.

Sixty vessels of the Navy's scouting fleet will sail today from their home port on the Atlantic Coast to rendevous at Hampton Roads, en route to the Carribbean Sea and Guantanamo Bay for fleet maneuvers and tactical exercises. The Battle Fleet will leave the Pacific Coast next month to join in the mimic warfare in March.

Seven battleships, eight light cruisers and seventeen destroyers, are among the vessels sailing. A mine squadron with two submarine divisions will proceed to the Canal Zone, and the aircraft squadrone will leave from Hampton Roads today, the Wright, the Sandpiper and the Teal acting as tenders. Forty-seven other planes attached to the ships will participate in the meneuvers, which will be concluded in April.

Vice Admiral W. C. Cole is in command of the scouting fleet and Admiral Nulton, aboard the U. S. S. California, will command the Battle Fleet. The vessels will carry on sham warfare and engage in fleet problems. The Battle Fleet has thirty-two vessels and 205 planes.

Six Children Dead, Trio Saved in Fire

Lamp Explosion Takes Toll While Parents Are Out Visiting.

Ormstown, Quebec, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Six children, members of two families, were burned to death in a fire which last night destroyed the home of Albert Usureau.

Three of the dead were Francis, 9; Leo, 7, and a baby, 2 years old, the children of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Patenaude.

The other three were the children of Mr. and Mrs. Usureau. One was a girl, Florence, but the names of the other two were not ascertained.

All of the children had been put to bed in the Usureau home while the four parents went visiting at St. Chrysostome, in a nearby parish. The fire occurred during their absence, and neighbors were unable to rescue the sleeping children.

Nine children were in the Usureau home when the house caught fire. They had been left in charge of Rosine Patenaude, 12.

The fire was caused by the explosion of an oil lamp. Three of the children, including Rosine, escaped, but the other six were trapped by the flames.

ILLEGAL SEARCHERS TO BAN PROSECUTION

U. S. Attorney's Office to Refuse Trial in Such Liquor Cases.

DOCKET CLEARER NOW

That the Department of Justice believes that cases made under the national prohibition law should be predicated only on evidence procured on liquor search warrants was indicated yesterday hen the United States attorney's office, through Assistant United States Attorney David Aiken Hart, in charge of prohibition enforcement in the Police Court, announced that in future no cases will be presented in court where illegal search and seizure had been made.

"We are following the department's instructions to th eletter," Hart stated in making his announcement, which follows close by the recent departmental order that it should be questioned in all cases where United States attorneys believe evidence is not sufficient to convict and wish to issue a noll prosequi.

At the same time Hart announced that the docket of liquor cases in Police Court is in the best condition it has been in years. He stated that his office had made inroads on the old cases during November and December and that at present only a few cases were more than two months old. He stated that he would docket for trial during the next two weeks all cases that originated during November, 1929, which had not been referred t othe grand jury.

Hart's new rule as laid down to the police and to Federal agents is that liquor search warrants should be obtained before entering premises on a liquor quest.

He also stated that his office will refuse to issue papers in cases where liquor is discovered on a mere arrest warrant, and that in instances where police enter premises on a disorderly house warrant that the liquor found will be used only to prove the charge of disorderly house.

Hart expressed the belief that activities of the police in making raids without the proper warrants have been largely instrumental in causing previous congestion of the docket. In a number of instances police have entered premises on warrants other than liquor search warrants and whereever liquor was in evidence booked charges of possession. These charges in the past have been sustained, but that day is over, it was understood.

In cases of this nature, Hart stated, only a small amount of liquor has been found, and in most cases this has been insufficient to convince the juries.

Code Radio Messages Said to Guide Rum Ships

Los Angeles, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Charges that radio messages in secret code were being used by rum-smuggling ships off the southern California coast to receive orders and warnings from their alleged owners in Canada, were made by the Government today in prosecuting a libel suit against the seized cabin cruiser Chiquita. Emmet Dougherty, assistant United States attorney, testified that through the mystery radio rum ships were in constant communication with their owners.

For a considerable period, Clarence Reeves, special Government agent, testified he did nothing but intercept the smugglers' secret messages. He testified he had established that the call letters of the Consolidated Exporters Corporation, Ltd., of Canada, the alleged owner of the asserted mother rum ship Lillenhorn, was "RH." Mr. Reeves testified the call letters of the Lillenhorn were "RL."

"SURPRISE" FOR STARLINGS FAILS TO "CLICK"

Hugh Miller, Post Staff Photographer.

These District employes are shown preparing a surprise for the starlings along E street and Pennsylvania avenue, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, yesterday. Smudge pots were placed in a half dozen trees and the top twigs of one sycamore were trimmed. The birds avoided the trimmed tree but weren't even annoyed by the foul-smelling buckets.

Brickbats-Bouquets

By JAMES HAY, JR.

SUPERFICIAL observers who are all bewildered by Senator J. Thomas Heflin's political power in Alabama fail to estimate his campaign oratory at its true value. When "Handsome Tawm" goes out to round up votes, he thunders forth the kind of eloquence that is dear to the Alabamian of the hamlets and the hills. Dragging from the unabridged dictionary all its linguistic loot, he fills the ambient air with the Roman candles, rockets and pinwheels of Ciceronian philippics and Demosthenesian denunciation.

He plays with the precision of a violin virtuoso on the emotions of men who still stick their breeches into their boots, caress their long and turbulent beards and argue with cuss words instead of logic. Facing multitudes of ladies who, in this age of jazz and brass, retain an admiration of knighthood and a belief in chivalry, he rouses their risibilities with irresistible humor and enchants them with a glittering display of the bejeweled lance of Romance.

There is nothing "Tawm" can't do with language when he bestrides his native heath. Gentlemen who have heard him at his emphatic loudest and best on the floor of the Senate should understand that in Alabama, where real oratory is the very life and breath of statesmanship, his utterances make his Washington speeches sound like deleted and narrow-chested whispers.

• • • •

IN Alabama his tongue, wagged by inspiration and whetted on the grindstone of opposition, splits the air like the first shot at Concord and charms the ear like the fadeaway and melancholy sweetness of Lucia. Onomatopoeia, enthymeme and oxymoron are the machine-gun bullets with which he rakes the enemy. In ridicule of the Pope, bombs and barrages of hyperbole, poison gas and pin pindaric odes burst hissing and howling from his tireless lips and his dilated, dominant and industrious diaphragm.

Then, when he feels obliged to point with the campaigner's modest reluctance to his own record, his pronouncements are adorned with all the glamorous glow of 30 dozen full moons. The stars in heaven, the glittering stars, dance and twinkle through the long-linked sweetness of his discourse.

No note of the nightingale, no murmur of the babbling brook, no whisper of the summer breeze through embowered lanes is too faint or too beautiful for him to catch and glorify it in the gorgeous alchemy of his guttural gift. In the artistry of his articulation he adds splendor to the pellucent tints of sapphire skies, to the ineffable colors of fading rainbows and to the vivid entrancement of the aurora borealis.

• • • •

RECKLESS persons who don't know their Alabama explain Mr. Heflin's laughing defiance of the Democratic organization of the State by pointing out that he has the favor of the Ku Klux Klan, that he is a most efficient organizer, that he knows all the farmers in Alabama by their first names, that he sleeps in their humble cottages and dines with gusto on their cabbage and bacon, and that he kisses all their babies.

So far, so good. But his big punch is in his resplendent perfection as a teller of anecdotes and his incessant flow of such eloquence, sarcasm and derision as make Catiline, Patrick Henry and Carrie Nation turn in their tombs. And as long as he is thus full-armed for the fray, the Alabama "regulars," who so gayly tossed him out of the Democratic party, are going to feel as if a cross between a buzz saw and the day of judgment had leaped into their political laps.

Man Resumes Nap After Explosion

Assures Himself Building Is Not Ablaze and Returns to Couch.

When Morpheus beckons Samuel Basman, a vulcanizer, nothing short of an explosion can force him from heeding the sleep god's call.

Basman decided upon a nap about 10 o'clock yesterday morning and chose a room adjacent to the vulcanizing plant of the Plaza Auto Supply Co., 401 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

A few moments after he was comfortably settled, a safety valve of the vulcanizing machine balked, causing an explosion that blew out virtually all windows of the building. When police and firemen arrived, the drowsy vulcanizer had assured himself the building was not aflame and resumed his comfortable posture.

Walter Basman, manager of the company and brother of the vulcanizer, estimated the damage at $500. The explosion completely wrecked the company's vulcanizing plant.

Woman Sprains Ankle by Fall.

In a fall at Pennsylvania avenue and I street northwest, yesterday, police reported, Agnes Homan, 26 years old, of 1232 Newton street northeast, suffered a sprained left ankle. She was treated at Emergency Hospital.

Veterans Plan Card Party.

The District of Columbia Department, United Spanish War Veterans, will hold a 500 party tomorrow night at the Northeast Masonic Temple.

Two Plaintiffs Win Suits for Damage

One Transfer Firm Loses by $2,480 Verdict and Another by $800.

The spirit of giving apparently was still in the air yesterday in District of Columbia Supreme Court as the only jury functioning awarded damages to plaintiffs in the only two cases tried. Each case had been on the docket for more than two years.

Sara O'Neil Wallis, of Edgemont road, Scarsdale, N. Y., was awarded $2,480 damages in her suit against Samuel Madeoy, operator of a transfer company. The woman sued for $8,505, claiming that the household furnishings she had employed Madeoy to move from Washington to Scarsdale had been destroyed when delivered to her. Madeoy set up a plea that the truck in which the goods were being transported had caught fire.

Sue B. Stewart, 215 S street northwest, was awarded $800 damages in her suit against the Union Transfer Co., Inc. The woman alleged that a trunk which the company undertook to transport from the Union Station to an address in Washington had been lost. She sued for $2,288.55.

10 DIE IN COLLISION OF CAMERA PLANES

planes scheduled to swoop down on either side of him to photograph him as he fell and struck the water. Turner's plane was about 500 feet away from and below the camera planes when the collision occurred.

Turner Describes Tragedy.

Turner said he was up about 2,000 feet when he glanced over the side of his ship after he had noticed that the other two planes had disappeared.

Turner said he saw the two ships just as they met head-on a few hundred feet above the waves. After the collision the airplanes burst into flames and dropped into the water, he reported.

Turner flew back to the Santa Monica airport here and reported the crash. Shore boats were dispatched to the scene and Turner said he saw several fishing boats near the spot of the crash put out, apparently in an effort to rescue any of the occupants who might have escaped death.

Sun Blinded Pilot, Theory.

"I was circling 500 feet to the left and below the camera ships, said Turner, describing the disaster. "They were over my shoulder and I could not see them. Suddenly the boy with me said they looked like they were coming together.

"I immediately winged over and came around for a look at them. By that time, they had crashed together and, when I saw them, they were tangled together on fire and plunging into the water. Just as they hit two or three people either jumped out or were thrown clear of the wreckage. I could see the bodies splash into the ocean a little distance away from the point where the planes hit the sea."

Turner said the camera planes were supposed to have circled close together and to have followed, one on either side of the parachute jumper as he fell. He expressed belief that possibly sun in the eyes of one of the pilots had caused him to circle in the wrong direction, meeting the other ship almost head on.

ODORS FAIL TO ROUT STANCH STARLINGS

Smudge-Pot Barrage Futile at District Building; Clipped Tree Aids.

BUCKSHOT IS "BEST BET"

Fourteenth street temporarily baffled the starling hosts. Whether they avoided this former haven because all the twigs in the top had been cut away or merely on account of its strange appearance could not be learned. The starlings themselves declined to comment on the subject.

The sycamore was trimmed and the pots were placed on the limbs of other trees yesterday by order of Clifford Lanham, superintendent of trees and parkings. While not very optimistic over his schemes, Mr. Lanham declared that he would not be discouraged if the starlings failed to heed the removal notice. He has other ideas for getting rid of them, he said, and he intends to try out some of the suggestions made by Post readers in the recent contest.

The smudge pots contained automobile motor oil, old tires and shoes and gunnysacks; or, as Mr. Lanham put it, "almost anything that would smell bad."

"Personally, I think that buckshot well aimed would be the most certain and effective way of ridding the Capital of the pests," he declared. "I'm not such a bad shot myself. I'd like to take a hand."

The superintendent said he realized that there would be much criticism from well-intentioned persons and cries of "inhuman cruelty to birds" if such a plan were carried through. But then, he aded, even these sentimental folk would probably get rid of the starlings in similar fashion if the birds occupied trees at their homes.

The cutting of the sycamores would not harm the trees, Mr. Lanham said. In fact, it will make them more handsome in the spring. As the starlings prefer the tops of the trees to the lower branches, the superintendent believes he may drive them out of the sycamores.

But to where?

"Now that they've taken refuge on the eaves of the District Building, and even along the fronts of stores on F street, we are confronted with another problem," he added dubiously. "You couldn't even shoot 'em there, because you would shatter windows and damage the buildings."

Merchants along F street have already protetsed to the Commissioners that the starlings are rapidly moving from Pennsylvania avenue to their vicinity.

JONES SEES SLUMP IN CONGRESS LIQUOR

dent Hoover toward prohibition before it became a law. With that, he praised the President at length and said "his personal example should be followed by every good citizen in his home, at social gatherings and in business affairs."

"Americans pride themselves on being good sports," he said. "This is the time to show it. The will of the majority has been expressed in no uncertain way. It should be obeyed and observed until it is changed in the way prescribed by our fundamental law."

"One of the hardest propositions to meet," Jones asserted, "is that men in high standing, socially, financially and officially, do not observe the law. Instead of encouraging good citizenship, they breed the very poorest and most dangerous type. I received a letter the other day from a citizen in my State, in which he says among other similar things: I attended a very swelf private club about five months ago, in which there were three bankers present. They were serving the best brand of Scotch whisky and apparently as unconcerned as though they were serving ginger ale.'"

At a later point, the Washington senator added:

"Grant that there is more drinking today than heretofore among a certain class of our people. What class is it—the extra well-to-do, the class that should be most scrupulous in observing and respecting the law. I may be wrong about it, but many of the fathers and mothers who set their children the example of nonobservance will some day greatly regret that they have not set a different example and given their children a different teaching."

MRS. WILLEBRANDT HELD DATA SOURCE

Supplied Borah With His Dry Ammunition, Is Belief Here.

MOTIVES POINTED OUT

assisted the Brookhart committee's investigation of a district attorney in South Carolina.

It was considered significant, too, that Senator Borah's view that alcohol diversion is the crux of prohibition unenforcement, while embodying a subject so dear to Mrs. Willebrandt, is not the view of Prohibition Commissioner Doran.

The commissioner said yesterday that alcohol diversion has been reduced to a minor problem of prohibition enforcement. The mounting problem now, he said, is the increased use of corn sugar for illicit liquor.

Senator Borah, when his attention was called to this view, said the commissioner was living in a "fool's paradise" if he entertained such a belief.

Senator Borah first came into the present controversy with the statement that the alcohol permit system constituted a national disgrace. It is his view that virtually no control is exercised over the diversion of alcohol, that there is no serious checkup of where it goes after being diverted from the legitimate user.

His statement was taken as a broadside against the prohibition enforcement personnel generally, both the Treasury and Department of Justice phase of it, and the high officials of these two agencies were quick to take offense.

Commissioner Doran, in support of his contention that corn sugar is now the major problem, cited figures from the Department of Commerce that its production had increased from 152,000,000 pounds in 1921 to 968,000,000 pounds in the 1928 fiscal year. The plan adopted two years ago, he said, of limiting the manufacture of alcohol to the country's industrial requirements had reduced the diversion problem.

While Attorney General Mitchell sought not to get into the controversy, he did say that he had no evidence that district attorneys were not discharging their duties. He had received no complaint from the Idaho senator, he said, either about the seventeen district attorneys upon whom the senator claims to have the goods or his statements that "practically open saloons are running" in many jurisdictions.

Lack of Knowledge Claimed.

Senator Borah's general attitude is that if the enforcement officials do not know of the conditions against which he complains that is proof in itself that they are unfit for their prohibition jobs. He apparently does not intend to let his evidence get away from him. He intends, instead, to use it on the Senate floor.

Now as to how Senator Borah got this information, it is pointed out that he, of course, did not make the extensive investigation himself, and that it is hardly a case of his having employed agents to make it for him. The case he is understood to have built up is understood to be too comprehensive for anything but a most thorough survey.

There is, indeed, hardly any one besides Mrs. Willebrandt who would have the information on the district attorneys which Senator Borah now has. The district attorneys came directly under in so far as prohibition prosecutions were concerned. All papers concerning alcohol diversions passed over her desk. She is, in fact, probably the best informed person on the phase of prohibition enforcement in the country.

Puzzle During Campaign.

Quite a number of Mrs. Willebrandt's ardent prohibition supporters, particularly among the women, looked at her rather questioningly during the campaign when she said that she was supporting Mr. Hoover because he would enforce prohibition. The inference was rather plain at the time that it was not being enforced then and inasmuch as Mrs. Willerbandt had so much to do with prohibition enforcement there were many sincere inquiries as to just what she meant.

She is known, however, to have had ambitious plans for enforcement after Mr. Hoover took office. She is believed to have thought that prohibition enforcement was now to be her job and that she would be given a free rein in working it out.

Instead, Mrs. Willebrandt retired to private life, disappointed, her hopes shattered.

Cause Still Dear to Her.

There is no much that she can do ent capacity, except, of course, to for the prohibition cause in her presmake speeches. Yet the prohibition cause is still dear to her. She feels very strongly about many things in the Department of Justice. There is no reason to believe, indeed, that she feels very kindly towards she department at all. What better person is there to turn her ammunition over to than Senator Borah?

It may not be that her action will be so highly appreciated in administration quarters, but then the only visible thing she has received from the administration so far has been the appointment of Alf Oftedahl as collector of internal revenue for California, and then it developed that Oftedahl could not take the job because he was a resident of Maryland

Attorney General Mitchell, in discussing his district attorneys, said that since March 4, one has been removed from office, five have resigned before the expiration of their terms because of unsatisfactory conditions in their offices, and two have completed their terms and have not been reappointed.

Fess Takes Sly Dig.

Whether any of Senator Borah's famous seventeen were in that number is not known.

Senator Fess, of Ohio, returned to town and took a sly dig at the Idaho senator. He planned to propose, he said, that Borah be made chairman of the joint congressional committee, which it is intended to set up to carry out the administration's enforcement program.

In the meantime, the wets, who have been fairly silent, began to grumble with the definite statement that President Hoover's National Law Enforcement Commission is not concerned in the wisdom or unwisdom of prohibition, but solely in the ways and means of enforcing it. It took them a rather long time to become aware of this fact.

all intelligent people know can never be enforced."

Conrad W. Crooker, general counsel for the Liberal Civic League, which has conducted an investigation into the shooting, denied that the rumrunners had attempted to escape or that they were given warning by the Coast Guard patrol boat 290 before it opened fire with a machine gun.

Crooker said his investigation showed the men were shot down from a point-blank range of 15 feet as their craft, the Black Duck, was proceeding at 4 miles an hour in a dense fog directly toward the 290. The 290, he said, instead of being in pursuit, was tied by the stern to the Dumpling Rock buoy at the time.

Afraid to Board Ship, Claim.

He said Boatswain Cornell, skipper of the 290, was afraid to board the Black Duck after Charles Travers, the wounded and sole survivor of her crew, brought her alongside the Coast Guard craft.

"Those men were left to welter and die in their own blood," he said.

It was the cook aboard the 290, he said, who finally, in response to Travers' pleas, went aboard the Black Duck to help him with the three dead or dying men. Crooker claimed that when Cornell finally took his craft the half mile through the fog to Fort Adams, two hours after the shooting, a naval surgeon there said Jake Weisman, one of the three killed, was still alive, and that he was not pronounced dead until half an hour after his arrival.

Delay Fatal, Is Charge.

Crooker asserted that if the guardsmen had taken the men to shore quicker, Weisman's life might have been saved.

Representative John W. Douglass said the rumrunners were "out rageously, feloniously murdered," and promised to forward an investigation at Washington.

John F. Fitzgerald, former Mayor of Boston, after attacking the Newport slayings, announced his intention of being a Democratic candidate for governor next year, with repeal of the State's enforcement act as a platform plank. He made of his announcement a challenge to Gov Frank G. Allen, who yesterday defended the State law.

William H. Mitchell, chairman of the meeting, said 1,100 men, women and children had been killed in the enforcement of prohibition. "When murder stalks abroad in the guise of law, in God's name repeal that law," he said. "Official murder is still murder."

Seven Heard at Inquest.

Newport, R. I., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Seven witnesses were heard today at the State's inquest into the deaths of three rum runners on the motor boat Black Duck off here Sunday. Federal officers were barred from the hearing by Attorney General Oscar L. Heltzen, who said he did not consider they had a right to be present to get information that could be used for a defense if an indictment should be brought against the crew of the Coast Guard boat 290, who shot the rum runners.

The inquest, conducted by Heltzen and Coroner Perry B. Dawley, was continued until next week, probably Monday, when, Heltzen said, he hopes to have the difficulties that have arisen between the State and Federal authorities sufficiently ironed out to get the testimony of the Coast Guard crew.

Heltzen said he intends to confer with Henry M. Boss, United States District Attorney, at Providence, tomorrow, and if unable to get the information he seeks will telegraph to the Treasury Department at Washington immediately. He explained the Treasury Department is in charge of the Coast Guard investigation from the Federal standpoint.

Testimony Kept Secret.

The inquest was private and nothing of the testimony was made known.

Final Tribute Paid To Charles P. Taft

Cincinnati Church Crowded at Rites for Benefactor of City.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Cincinnati today paid final tribute to Charles P. Taft, philanthropist and publisher, who died Tuesday at the age of 86. Mr. Taft, founder of the Cincinnati Times Star and its publisher until his death, had been ill for more than a year.

Funeral services were held at Christ Episcopal Church, with the Rev. Frank Nelson, rector, officiating. Bishop Boyd Vincent, of Cincinnati, pronounced the benediction. The church was crowded with those who paid their last respects to the city's greatest benefactor, and numbers of persons stood in a drizzling rain during the short service. Among those attending were city officials, numerous business and political associates and representative of Gov. Meyers Y. Cooper, who was unable to attend in person.

Following the church service the body was taken to Spring Grove Cemetery for burial in the presence of only members of the family and a few friends. The service at the grave was brief.

The Chief Justice, accompanied by his wife and several relatives, arrived here this morning to attend the funeral. The Chief Justice and his party will return to Washington tomorrow.

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY CIRCLES OF NATION'S CAPITAL

Colors Blend In Brilliance At Navy Ball

Annual Event at Willard Proves Colorful Spectacle.

By JEAN ELIOT.

"LET'S meet under the flag at supper time," said a one time "Navy file" arriving at the Navy relief ball last night—to be answered with merry accusations of trying to shake his party. For flags were everywhere. The Stars and Stripes glowed at one end of the long Willard ballroom. Pennants and signal flags were strung from the ceiling, with only room for the chandaliers to peep through. And above the box reserved for guests of honor were the flags of the Secretary of the Navy, the two assistant secretaries, the Chief of Operations, the Major General Commandant of the Marine Corps and a two-starred rear admiral's flag in compliment to Rear Admiral Arthur Willard, commandant of the navy yard, whose wife "commands" the Washington branch of the Navy Relief Society.

Postponed from Thanksgiving eve, its time-honored date, because of official mourning for the late Secretary of War, the ball last night lost none of its brilliance by the postponement. Most of the high ranking Navy officers stationed in Washington seemed to be present—all in full dress uniform—with hundreds of their juniors. And the naval attaches of the foreign embassies and legations, serving as honorary aides to Rear Admiral Andrew Long, chairman of the floor committee, gave an added note of color to the assemblage.

Dashing Admiral Long made the presentations to Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, who stood at the head of the receiving line, with Mrs. Charles F. Hughes, Mrs. Henry Fuller and Mrs. Willard.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Everett Gann were among the guests, arriving with a party which had apparently dined together and which included among others Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose and Brig. Gen. William E. Horton. Brig. Gen. Charles Krauthoff was another distinguished Army officer doing honor to a sister service. He was with Rear Admiral and Mrs. Luke McNamee in their box, with a group which also included Commander and Mrs. Theodore Wilkinson.

Mrs. Gann wore a becoming gown of green chiffon, its skirt cut in uneven points, which fell below panels of gold embroidery. She carried a great fan of green feathers. Mrs. Adams had chosen a gown of gray blue flat crepe, its tired skirt dipping gracefully, which was untrimmed save for a buckle of brilliants clasping its narrow belt. She had a scarf of blue tulle about her shoulders.

Mrs. Andrew Long was conspicuously charming in lacquer red her gown fashioned of lace in the new silhouette flaring gracefully below the knees. Mrs. Luke McNamee sponsored a flowered taffeta clusters of blossoms splashed over a black ground and one of the smartest gowns noted—a severely plain green crepe trimmed with broad fringe was worn by Mrs. Alfred W. Johnson.

For a little while Admiral Charles F. Hughes chief of naval operations, sat in lonely state beneath the admirals' flag, but he was joined shortly by an animated group. Others glimpsed at the ball were Rear Admiral Hilary Jones, Maj. Gen. Wendell C. Neville, commandant of the Marine Corps; Commander and Mrs. Joel T. Boone, Mrs. Delos Blodgett and Mrs. Charles G. Matthews, squired by the Rev. Meade Bolton MacBryde; Mrs. Geneva Dunham, Mme. von Lewinski and her guest, Mas Constance Drexle; Mr. and Mrs. Delos Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Freyer, Col. and Mrs. Charles B. Drake, Col. and Mrs. George Thorpe and Mr. John W. Belt.

Mrs. George T Marye entertained a box party, having among her guests her son-in-law and daughter, Commander and Mrs. William D. Thomas, who are making her a holiday visit. Their present home is in Paris, Commander Thomas being air attache of the United States legation. Mrs. Thomas was formerly Miss Helen Marye.

With Miss Virginia Hunt in her box were Gen. and Mrs. McKinley, Miss Alys Downing, Col. and Mrs. Lacy Hall and Commander George Pigman. Rear Admiral William L. Rodgers and his sister, Mrs. Giles, had with them Admiral Staunton, Mrs. Edward P. Wood and Miss Lydia Biddle, who had earlier been their guests at dinner. Capt. and Mrs. Alfred W. Johnson entertained at dinner before the ball for 40 young guests, friends of their daughter, Miss Elvira Johnson, who was chairman of the girls' floor committee.

Dinners were also given by Rear Admiral and Mrs. Joseph Strauss, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Ridley McLean and Rear Admiral and Mrs. Robert Kennedy, all of whom took their guests to the dance.

University Women To Meet in Capital.

The American Association of University Women is extending welcome to a small group of interesting women educators this week at the clubhouse on I street. From the Pacific Coast comes Dr. Katherine Adams, dean of Mills College, who is serving on the committee of membership, which this week will act upon a number of applications submitted from all parts of the country.

Dr. Irma Voigt, dean of Ohio University, is here from Athens, Ohio, and Dr. Margaret Justin, of the Kansas State Agricultural College, at Manhattan, Kans., also joins the group already arrived from the West and staying at the clubhouse. Dr. Ethel Brewster, of Swarthmore College, Swarthmore, Tenn., constitutes a fourth in the distinguished quartet registered there this week.

Mr. Harry Warner will be the honor guest at a Coffee House talk arranged by Mrs. William Wolff Smith on Friday, January 10, at 4:30 o'clock in the auditorium of the National Press Building. The talk is given under the auspices of the District of Columbia League of American Pen Women.

Mr. and Mrs. Karl E. Farrell entertained at a New Year's eve party at their home in Wynnewood Park, Md., their guests including Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Jackson Somerville, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Somerville, Mr. and Mrs. J. Reginald Conard, Miss Margaret Somerville and Mr. Michael McInverney.

Mrs. Alice E. Ross, of the Grove Park School faculty, Asheville, N. C., is passing the holidays with her daughter, Mrs. Albert Manly.

Miss Jean Peeples, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howell Peeples, is again able to be with her young friends after convalescing from an operation.

Mr. Benjamin R. Andrews, professor of household economics at Columbia University, has been at the Dodge Hotel for several days.

Miss Ethel Bagley, chairman of the Women's City Club group, which is sponsoring a tea to be given Saturday afternoon at the clubhouse, announces a postponement to a later date, when Mrs. Gifford Pinchot will give a travel talk, with an initial showing of pictures, taken on a recent trip to the South Sea Islands.

Business Women to Fete Conference Delegates.

The Business and Professional Women of the District of Columbia have issued invitations for a dinner at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women on Thursday, January 16, in honor of the national officers and delegates of the business and professional women from various States who will attend the conference on the cause and cure of war. Besides the members of the local group, who are the hostesses, members from the Baltimore, Alexandria and Clarendon Clubs are invited to participate.

Miss Margaret Lamble is chairman in charge of the committee for dinner, assisted by Miss Effie M. Ross, Miss Elizabeth Haney, Miss Penelope W. Cobb and Miss Toussaint Dubois.

Under the auspices of the Ladies Auxiliary of Southeast Talmud Torah, a bazaar will be held at Fellowship Hall, 1502 Fourteenth street, on Sunday at 6 o'clock. Music and dancing will be a feature of the entertainment and there will be refreshments. Mrs. E. Silver is president of the auxiliary and Mrs. A. M. Baker, secretary.

French Naval Attache Sails for Conference.

Commander Louis Sable, Naval Attache of the French Embassy, who sailed yesterday for Europe, will go first to Paris to meet Mme. Sable and will go then to London to attend the naval arms conference. He will be attached to the French delegation as a naval expert. Commander Sable will return to Washington when the conference closes. Mme. Sable, who has been abroad for several months, has recently been the guest of Capt. and Mme. Emmanuel Lombard, at Grenoble, France. Mme. Lombard was formerly Miss Helen Carusi, of Washington.

Mrs. Martha Macatee announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Martha Charlotte Macatee, to Mr. Theodore Silkman Repplier, of New York. The wedding will take place in the late spring. Mr. Repplier is the son of Mrs. Francis Arthur Repplier, formerly of Washington, but now living in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Depart for Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis left Washington yesterday for Florida and will be absent for a week or ten days. Mr. and Mrs. Ellis sponsored an engaging innovation when they made the round of official reception on New Year's Day by leaving New Year greeting cards, featuring scenes at Rippon Lodge, instead of the usual visiting cards. Built in 1725, Rippon Lodge is now the country home of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis. Their cards show a charming picture of the old house in a setting of snow-covered lawns, a photograph of the fine colonial doorway, an enchanting view of the Potomac and other picturesque views.

Mrs. James Ellwood Jones entertained at luncheon yesterday for Mrs. Thomas Patten Cheeseborough, jr., of Bronxville, N. Y., who is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, and for Mrs. William Mann. The other guests were Senora de Melo, wife of the Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy; Mrs. Robert Ash, Mrs. Jasper DuBose, Mrs. Robert Longyear, Mrs. Chester Snow, jr., Miss Evelyn Gordon, and Miss Rahel Davies.

Mrs. Joseph Stiles Wall is spending a few days in New York and will not be at home today, but will receive informally the first Friday of the succeeding months.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Sanders have returned to their apartment at the Mayflower, having passed the holidays in Miami, Fla.

Mrs. Sidney Taliaferro will receive on Tuesday, January 7, and on Tuesday, January 14, from 4 until 6 o'clock.

Mrs. S. Stokes Halkett has opened her house on Sheridan Circle and will occupy it for the remainder of the season. The charming house which Mrs. Halkett purchased last spring has been altered and decorated during the summer and forms one of the attractive houses in the group near the circle.

Mr. and Mrs. Jouette Shouse will be the guests in whose honor Mrs. Mark Reid Yates will entertain at dinner this evening in the Chinese Room of the Mayflower preceding the ball for Miss Katherine Taliaferro Yates.

Owing to illness, Mrs. Bernard B. Jones has canceled all engagements while she is recuperating at her home, 2201 Wyoming avenue.

Mrs. David S. Ingalls, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Aviation, will not be at home on Monday as she had announced, on account of the death of Mr. Ingalls' grandfather, the late Mr. Charles P. Taft.

Prof. and Mrs. Dean End Capital Visit.

Prof. and Mrs. Alexander Dean, who have been passing the holidays with the latter's parents, Assistant Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Joseph M. Dixon at Wardman Park Hotel, have left for New Haven where Prof. Dean is assistant director of drama at Yale University. They will stop in Baltimore on their way north for a short visit with Mrs. Dean's brother-in-law and sister, Dr. and Mrs. Ralph G. Hills.

Count and Countess Arnad de Tomeren, of Paris, have arrived at the Carlton, where they will remain for several days.

Count Henri de Mun, of Paris, is also at the Carlton for several days.

Miss Katharine Wilkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Wilkins, will give a dinner for younger people tomorrow evening preceding Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Leiter's dance.

Representative and Mrs. Lloyd Thurston have returned to their apartment at the Hotel Roosevelt after a short visit in New York.

Mrs. Samuel Willets and her daughter, Miss Betty Willets, of New York, arrived in Washington yesterday and are at the Willard during their visit here.

Maj. Remington to Talk At India Film Showing.

Honoring the British Ambassador and Lady Isabella Howard, the Bureau of Commercial Economics has issued special admission cards to the film on "India" which will be given under the direction of Dr. Anita Maria Boggs and Mr. Randolph Boggs, who will be hosts of the evening at the Carlton on Sunday. The pictures, beginning at 9 o'clock, will be supplemented by a talk by Maj. George Remington, of the Indian government.

Maj. Remington, who served as a member of the Bombay India Railway Regiment, lived for 20 years in India, traveling extensively throughout that land of mystery and making an exhaustive study of the various races living there. He will illustrate his talk by a series of excellent slides.

Oriental music, including some of the lesser known works of Amy Woodford Finden, will supplement the lecture. The debutantes of the season will act as pages at the series of films which will be presented during the winter. On January 12 Mr. John George Bucher will speak on "Modern Germany" when the German Ambassador and Frau von Prittwitz und Gaffron will be honor guests.

The New Year was celebrated by a small gathering of boys and girls at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Moffatt Bradley. The following attended: Miss Beverley Emmert, Miss Mary Davies, Miss Peggy Lynch, Mr. Walter Shelton and Mr. Russell Keffover and Mr. John Bradley.

Curtiss Firm Wins Guggenheim Prize

$100,000 Award in Safety Competition Will Be Made Monday.

Capt. E. S. Land, vice president of the Daniel Guggenheim Fund for the Promotion of Aeronautics, yesterday announced that the prize of $100,000 in the international safe aircraft competition has been awarded to the entry of the Curtiss Aeroplane & Motor Co. Formal award of the prize will be made Monday at Mitchel Field, New York.

The Curtiss entry passed all the qualifying tests in this competition designed to have planes demonstrate the greatest advance in aerodynamic safety without the loss of efficiency.

Twenty-seven manufacturers entered planes in the contest, but only fifteen presented their aircraft at Mitchel Field for testing. In view of the fact that the Curtiss entry was the only one to pass all the qualifying tests, finals were dispensed with and the prize awarded to that firm.

Engagement Is Announced

MISS MARTHA CHARLOTTE MACATEE, whose engagement to Mr. Theodore Silkman Repplier has been announced by her mother, Mrs. Martha Macatee.

Bolivian Flag To Be Borne by Miss de Medina

Envoy's Daughter Will Take Part in Pageant by Assembly.

Senorita Maria Hortensia Diez de Medina, daughter of the Minister of Bolivia and Senora de Diez de Medina, will carry the Bolivian flag in the "March of the Nations" with which the costume ball of the Washington International Assembly will be formally opened Monday night at the Willard Hotel. Brig. Gen. William E. Horton is chairman and leader of this feature of the evening's entertainment and a large number of the prominent debutantes of this season and last will take part, carrying flags of all natoins at the head of the grand march, in which guests in costume will take part.

The flag of the United States will be borne by Miss Elise Alexander, whose mother, Mrs. Edward R. Alexander, is a member of the board of governors of the assembly. The flags of foreign countries will appear in the order of precedence of these countries in their diplomatic representation here.

Among other prominent members of the younger set who will take part in the march are Miss Anna Parknurst, Great Britain; Miss Engracia Freyer, Peru, an appointment particularly appropriate because of her mother's great interest in that country; Miss Helen Walker, Mexico; Miss Vittoria Catalani, Italy; Miss Bina Day Deneen, Chile; Miss Emiscah Gale Davis, Belgium; Miss Janet Ball, Turkey; Miss Katharine Lowman, Germany; Miss Clara Bolling, Japan; Miss Star Eaton, Argentina; Miss Mildred Huston, Switzerland, and Miss Katharine Phillips, Hungary.

Now that the holiday festivities are over, plans for the bal boheme of the Arts Club are being rushed to completion by Mrs. John Otto Johnson and the executive committee of well-known artists who have charge of the fate of this year's ball, the "lucky seventh" in the history of the club.

Known as the "ball of the Americas," the event will take place on the evening of Monday, January 27, at the Willard. The development of the Western World, with all its wealth of atmosphere and drama, will be aptly epitomized in the "Masque of the Adventurers," which is to be the "piece de resistance" of this carnival.

For the last three or four seasons this ball has attracted the attention not only of local artists but artists from all over the Eastern part of the United States, as well as leading representatives of official, diplomatic and society circles in the Capital. It has become the custom for many outstanding hostesses of official and diplomatic importance to accept the invitation of the Arts Club as patronesses of the bal boheme and to attend the ball.

This season Mrs. Fulton Lewis, vice chairman of the ball executive committee, is chairman of patronesses.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Whitla Stinson will entertain at dinner at the Carlton Hotel this evening when the guests will number 28.

Commissioner Jefferson Myers, of the United States Shipping Board, and Mrs. Myers have as their guest Mrs. William G. Thomas, of Wrangell, Alaska. Mrs. Thomas, who is wife of the United States Commissioner of Alaska, is returning to the West Coast after spending the holidays in Hartford, Conn.

Mrs. C. H. March, wife of the Federal Trade Commissioner, will receive on Mondays in January and February at 2101 Connecticut avenue.

Mrs. Royall McKenna and her mother, Mrs. David Stewart Hendrick, will not be at home on Fridays in January, as announced, because of the death of Mrs. Hendrick's son, Mr. Cypret Hendrick.

Miss Croissant is Wed To R. W. Noyes.

The marriage of Miss Eula Lucille Croissant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor G. Croissant, to Mr. Richard W. Noyes, of Hampton, Va., took place at the home of the bride's parents, 4913 Forty-seventh street northwest, at noon, January 1. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. W. Shearer, of St. Columba's Episcopal Church. The wedding was attended by the immediate families and by a few close friends. Mr. and Mrs. Noyes will make their home at Hampton.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Norment returned yesterday from New York, where they spent the early part of the week and New Year's Day. They will entertain at dinner Monday evening preceding the assembly, when their ranking guests will be the Minister of Norway and Mme. Bachke. Later they will attend the ball, for which they have taken a box.

Lieut. and Mrs. Reginald F. C. Vance, of Langley Field, are at the Carlton for a few days.

Mrs. Harry N. Rickey will leave today for Palm Beach, where she will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Diebold at their place on Gulf View Road.

Mr. John Mason Rickey 2d, who has been passing the holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rickey, in their apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel, has left for a visit in Portland, Me., and Springfield, Mass., before returning to Williams College.

Mrs. Alvin Dodd entertained at luncheon Wednesday at her residence in Georgetown in honor of the Hon. Rennie Smith, M. P., who has just arrived from London.

Senator and Mrs. Patrick J. Sullivan, of Wyoming, have returned to Washington from their home in Casper and are at the Mayflower. Their daughter, Miss Margaret Sullivan, is making a brief visit in Pittsburgh and will join her parents at the hotel on Saturday.

The newly appointed Chilean Ambassador to Mexico and Mme. Pedro Leteller are passing a few days in Washington at the Mayflower, en route to Mexico.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Herbert B. Crosby will be at home on Sunday at 5 o'clock to the Cavalry officers and their wives.

Miss Vera Bloom, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom, will entertain on Sunday evening at the first of a series of informal supper parties planned for Sundays through the season.

In Debutante Array

Underwood & Underwood.

MISS CLARA BOLLING, in the quaint gown worn at her coming-out party. Mr. Allan Hoover attended her debut tea in Christmas week and she was a guest at the White House dance. Miss Bolling is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Wilmer Bolling, and a niece of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

Stimsons Give Final Dinner Before Sailing

Secretary of State and Wife Entertain at Woodley.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry L. Stimson entertained at dinner last evening at Woodley when their guests were the French Ambassador and Mme. Claudel, Mlle Reine Claudel; the Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Davila, the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter, the Minister of Canada and Mrs. Vincent Massey, the Minister of Poland, Mr. Tytus Filipowics; the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Ray Lyman Wilbur, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Arthur M. Hyde, the Secretary of Labor and Mrs. James J. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Kellogg, Miss Elizabeth Patterson and Mr. Arthur W. Page.

This will be the last official dinner which Secretary and Mrs. Stimson will give before starting for London. With other members of the American delegation to the naval arms conference, Secretary and Mrs. Stimson will leave Washington by special train for New York next Thursday morning and will sail that evening for Europe on the George Washington.

Mr. Allan Hoover Returns to Harvard.

Mr. Allan Hoover has left for Cambridge to resume his studies at the Harvard School of Business Administration, after spending the holidays with the President and Mrs. Hoover at the White House.

The Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter will go to New York next week to be honor guests at a banquet to be given by the Swiss colony in celebration of the tenth anniversary of the Minister's arrival in this country. Delegates representing Swiss colonies of other towns will attend, Washington being represented by Mr. Godfrey L. Munter, president of the "Grutli Verein," and vice president of the Swiss Club.

In the course of the years spent in Washington, M. and Mme. Peter have become outstanding personalities in official and social life of the Capital.

Minister Peter, a prominent leader in the Swiss Parliament, was sent to America in January, 1920, as successor of Dr. Hans Sulzer, who was Switzerland's representative from 1917 to that date.

The Hungarian Minister, Count Laszlo Szechenyi, with his two oldest daughters, Countess Cornelia Szechenyi and Countess Alice Szechenyi, will go to New York tomorrow preparatory to sailing on January 9 for Europe. Countess Szechenyi, with the other children, will join them in New York in time to sail with them.

Minister of Colombia Is Luncheon Host.

The Minister of Colombia, Dr. Enrique Olaya, entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower in compliment to Gen. Manuel T. Quinones and Capt. Benjamin Mandez, members of the Colombian military aviation commission.

ROTHSTEIN MURDER DETECTIVE DEMOTED

Naive Invesvtigation Method Causes Whalen to Take Action.

SALARY IS CUT $1,000

New York, Jan. 2 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—After giving, under cross-examination, an almost incredibly naive account of his investigation of the murder of Arnold Rothstein, Detective Patrick Flood, on trial for dereliction of duty in that case, was broken tonight by Police Commissioner Whalen from first grade detective to patrolman.

Aside from the stigma attached to it, his demotion brings him a salary reduction of $1,000 a year under the new rates. No active duty will be assigned to him until after the conclusion of his trial.

Mr. Whalen's action was not unexpected, for several times during the trial, over which he is presiding, he expressed astonishment at Flood's procedure in the Rothstein investigation and dissatisfaction with the detective's attempted self-justification.

The chief alleged dereliction for which Flood was raked over the coals was his failure to hold as material witnesses two brothers of George McManus and Nymie Biller, who is still missing, when they visited room 349 of the Park Central Hotel on the early morning of November 5, 1928, a few hours after Rothstein had been shot.

They asked him, he said, what was the matter, and he replied that Rothstein had been shot. Flood told them he would like to question George McManus because his overcoat had been found in the room. The three men promised to go out and find George, so he let them, without even having them trailed, Flood admitted.

He also allowed the hotel detective to answer the telephone in the room, thus obliterating possible fingerprints, left the room unguarded save for the hotel manager when he departed for the night and failed to exercise other necessary precautions, the detective avowed. And his explanation was that he believed what these people told him and trusted them.

Flood's trial will be followed by the trial of Detective John Cordes on similar charges.

Dawson Speaker At Iowa Function

"Tall-Corn State" Socieyt Holds January Ball at Wilard.

Albert F. Dawson, executive secretary of the national Republican committee and former Iowa Representative, last night delivered an address at the January ball of the "State Where the Tall Corn Grows" at the Willard Hotl. Dr. Harold M. Dudley, professor of history at the American University, accompanied on the piano by Miss Lucy Clark Street, rendered two solos. Miss Doris Willis and Miss Helen Tucker, also accompanied by Miss Street, sang two duets.

Karl E. Hoffman was unanimously elected president to complete the unexpired term of P. R. Baldridge, Deputy Commissioner of Internal Revenue, who resigned because of ill health.

Following a short business meeting the remainder of the evening was spent in dancing. Among those present were former Representative and Mrs. Albert F. Dawson, Representative and Mrs. Lloyd Thurston, Judge and Mrs. F. Dickson Letts, Representative and Mrs. Ed H. Campbell, Representative and Mrs. C. William Ramseyer, Representative and Mrs. C. E. Swanson, Representative and Mrs. T. J. B. Robinson, Representative Cyrenus Cole and William G. Ladd, president emeritus of the Iowa Society.

Columbia Alumni Hear Dean Smith

Modern Teaching Methods in Law Are Described by Dinner Guest.

The Columbia University Law School is breaking away from the cut and dried methods of teaching law and is more and more recognizing the human element, Dr. Young B. Smith, dean of the school, last night told 35 Washington alumni of Columbia at a dinner in the University Club. Dean Smith, one of the youngest and reputed to be one of the most brilliant law teachers in the country, was guest of honor at the meeting.

Justice Harlan Stone, a graduate of the Columbia Law School, and at one time dean of the institution, also spoke. He recalled his student days and his teaching experiences at Columbia.

All departments of the university were represented among the alumni. Lester G. Wilson, president of the club, presided. Among others present were E. C. Ropes, treasurer; Alfred Anthony, secretary; Dr. Marcus Benjamin, honorary president of the club, and Ernest H. Van Fossan.

fendants concerned in the sale of rugs. He declared that it was possible that the December grand jury would hand these up tomorrow.

To Shock Public.

"We expect to show how sinister was the influence of Arnold Rothin this drug racket," Mr. Blake d. "The facts will surprise and ock the public when it learns of em. Some of those persons involved are very important."

The assistant United States attorney added that he was firmly convinced members of the bar were involved in the conspiracy, as well as men in other branches of professional life.

Jacob Soloman and a woman who gave her name as Miss Andree DuBois were arrested at a hotel near Union Station, February 7, 1927, when Federal Revenue Agent Sam L. Rakusin seised a quantity of narcotics in their room. Miss DuBois said she was an actress, and was 28 years old. She gave an address on West Forty-eighth street, New York City.

Soloman was held on two charges of violation of the Harrison narcotic law, and Miss DuBois on one, that of possession "of smoking opium." Both were convicted. Soloman getting a sentence of not less than ten years and Miss DuBois was placed on probation.

Cruikshank, of Birmingham, Ala., are in Washington for the services.

The body reached the capital Wednesday accompanied by Mrs. Cruikshank. The father formerly was editor of the Birmingham Ledger.

Poplars Pay Toll In Pageantry Path

Trees on B Street Felled to Widen Avenue of Ceremonials.

In launching the ambitious program for developing B street into a great ceremonial avenue extending from the Capitol to the Arlington Memorial Bridge, the office of Public Buildings and Public Parks yesterday started workmen cutting down poplar trees between Fourteenth and Seventeenth streets. These trees are being removed preparatory to widening the street the maximum width of which will be between the Senate Office Building and Pennsylvania avenue and from Virginia avenue to the Potomac River.

It is explained that the widths are necessary for military parades and funeral processions from the Union Station and across the Memorial Bridge to Arlington National Cemetery.

The street will be closed while the trees are being felled.

Glider Club Will Meet Tonight.

The Washington Glider Club will meet tonight at 8 o'clock in the Thomson School Building, Twelfth and L streets northwest. The meeting will be open to the public.

7,843 AUTO OWNERS STORM TAX OFFICE

ty received the set of tags numbered "E-1," the lowest number issued to private owners in the District. This is the second year he has had the same number.

By the time the two extra clerks assigned to the emergency counters were ready to start work, at 8:30 o'clock, the line had grown to more than 200, and from that time on the crowd grew constantly, until long before noon there were overflow lines half a block long extending down from the Fourteenth street and Thirteen-and-a-half street entrances of the building, supplementing the double line that wound in and around and back and forth inside.

Considering the fact that this was the first time the new system of prior collection of personal taxes has been in practice, there was very little confusion.

Wide publicity had been given to the instructions issued by the tax and license officials for obtaining tags, and apparently most owners had memorized these thoroughly.

The greatest difficulty appeared to result from a paucity of clerks at the cashiers' desks, although addition of a third cashier shortly after the rush started relieved the congestion somewhat.

The fact that the results of the day's activities showed that tags had been issued at an average rate of more than 17 each minute for 7½ consecutive hours was proof of the smooth working order of the distribution machinery.

Of total automobile receipts yesterday, $16,205 was in tag fees, while the amount of taxes collected was $28,195. The lowest tax payment was 13 cents, collected from the owners of several decrepit vehicles which the appraisal lists value at $15 and recommend as candidates for the junk pile.

Private pleasure automobiles numbered 4,509, while tags were issued also for 3,334 trucks, buses, hacks and rental cars. Although the fee for gasoline vehicles is $1 each, tags for electric automobiles cost $12.50 each, and the fees for several hundred such cars swelled the tag receipts materially.

Commissioner Favors Mail Order Division

After he had spent several minutes trying to plow a course through the milling mob that jammed the ground floor of the District Building in quest of 1930 automobile tags yesterday, Commissioner Sidney F. Taliaferro came to the conclusion that establishment of a mail order division of the license bureau would do much toward relieving the congestion.

Laws of the District at present require automobile owners to apply for tags in person, or to send personal representatives to the District Building with their application forms properly filled out, and with the necessary cash to pay the personal tax and $1 license fee. The Commissioners, however, are confident that the necessary legislation can be obtained to permit distribution of tags by mail.

Such a change in operation of the tax and license departments, Commissioner Taliaferro pointed out, would result in material savings in time, labor and money to automobile owners who now are required to waste as much as three or four hours standing in line. It would also greatly simplify the activities of the departments, as work which now is concentrated within a few days could be distributed over a longer period.

RESTRAINING ORDER SOUGHT BY AIRPORT

Petitioner Avers Department of Agriculture Wall Hurts Holdings.

OBSTRUCTION IS HINTED

The Washington Airport, Inc., yesterday requested the District of Columbia Supreme Court to restrain Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde from doing any act which "might impede or obstruct" access to its property to the Potomac River.

In addition, the plaintiff asks that the Secretary of Agriculture be compelled to remove from the bed of the Potomac River in front of its property al lstructures, rock walls, retaining walls, mud fills, banks or dumps, refuse and "any and all obstructions of any kind or nature whatsoever placed in front of the plaintiff's property by the defendant, his agents, servants, employes or subordinates."

It also asks that the Agriculture Secretary be restrained from "further dredging, filling, constructing, or erecting any wall, dump, fill, roadway or other structure" in front of the plaintiff's property.

Site Bought in June.

The Washington Airport, Inc., purchased a tract of land for an airport site on June 29, last, which is adjacent to that now occupied by the Department of Agriculture's experimental farm.

Charge is made that on October 24, last, the defendant through his agents or others "wrongfully and without the consent or knowledge of the plaintiff, proceeded by means of dredging boats or other appliances to make excavations from the bed of the Potomac River" and to erect a large rock wall.

This wall, it is charged, obstructs and completely destroys the plaintiff's property.

Allegations Set Forth.

The plaintiff asserts that it purchased its property, which has 1,800 feet frontage on the south bank of the Potomac, for the purpose of operating a landing field for airplanes and seaplanes and for constructing terraces and docks from which swimming and boating could be enjoyed. It asserts that the rock wall has destroyed its seaplane facilities and that its chances of inaugurating a bathing and boating resort have been minimized.

It also asserts that the wall has destroyed the unobstructed view of Washington and the river which was enjoyed from its property prior to the construction work.

C. Bascom Slemp, former secretary to President Coolidge, Louis Titus and George V. Tripiett, jr., appear as counsel for the company. The suit is filed through Howard Sutherland, president of the corporation.

St. Stephen's Club Puts Two Teams on Court

The St. Stephen Club, with the Capital City senior football title of 1929 tucked away, will place two basket-ball teams in action. Although late to start, the Saints will have formidable combinations.

In the unlimited line-up will be such stellar performers as "Pewee" Walker, former star of Western High; "Ham" Salts, former guard at Wisconsin; "Huck" Hilleary, also from Western; "Tuck" Gaglish, one of the best sandlot products produced in the District; Buddy Flanigan, former star of the Baltimore Mount Vernons; Eddie Nealon, Jack Sly, Eddie Shore, Fax Taylor, Charlie Meany and Joe Bush.

A meeting will be held at the St. Stephen's Club, 2421 K street northwest, Monday at 8:15. All others wishing to join are welcome to attend the meeting. The St. Stephen Juniors will meet on Wednesday at 8:15.

COLONIAL STATUTE CITED IN BUCK CASE

Law of Revolution Is Called Upon to Uphold Legality of Grand Jury.

FEUDALISM IS RECALLED

United States Attorney Leo A. Rover and Assistant United States Attorney Neil Burkinahaw yesterday invoked a Maryland colonial statute enacted during the Revolutionary War to defend their allegations that a grand juror does not have to be a freeholder.

The old statute was cited in a memorandum of authorities filed with Justice Peyton Gordon, before whom pleas in abatement, attacking the legality of the October grand jury, in connection with the indictment of Benjamin R. Buck and others on a charge of conspiracy to violate the bucket shop laws, were argued a week ago. At that time counsel for Buck and his codefendants argued that the common law requirement that grand jurors in the District of Columbia be freeholders still prevailed and that the October inquisitorial body was therefore illegal.

The statute cited sets out that "no challenge shall be allowed to any person for the want of a freehold."

Ancient Feudalism Recalled.

In addition the Government's memorandum says: "The ancient requirement that a grand juror be a freeholder is a relic of feudalism. It has no part in the institutions of the United States of America. It is very true that much of the criminal branch of our common law has either become obsolete or has been obliterated by statutory enactment upon the same subject.

"Nevertheless, it is true that where it has not been repealed by express statutory provision, or modified by inconsistent legislation, or where it has not become obsolete or unsuited to our republican form of government, the common law of England in all its branches, both civil or criminal, remains today the law of the District of Columbia, and it has been repeatedly held."

Citations regarding the right of women to sit on grand juries and the provisions of the law that allow women to serve or refuse to serve at their option also were concluded in the memorandum.

Women's Right Upheld.

The Government upheld the right of women to serve on juries, contending that the law makes no restrictions as to sex but makes service optional to women.

U. S. and Illinois Take $2,006,856 Estate Tax

Waukegan, Ill., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The United States Government and the State of Illinois will realize $2,006,856 in inheritance taxes on the estate of the late Reuben H. Donnelley, Chicago publisher, who died February 25 last.

The tax figures, fixed by agreement of Government, State and county authorities, were approved today by County Judge P. A. Persons. The Federal tax was estimated at $530,608 and deposit to that amount was made. The State collected $1,476,248. The total was one of the largest on record in Illinois.

Donnelley's estate was given a final valuation of $13,387,131, of which the largest item was 88,000 shares of Montgomery Ward common stock worth $9,856,000 at an agreed value of $112 a share.

The bulk of the estate was left to relatives in Chicago.

Pleas of a similar nature were made in the case of Dexter Dayton, charged with first degree murder, and Representative Frederick N. Zihlman, chairman of the House District committee, and other officers, directors and former directors of the F. H. Smith Co., who were indicted on a charge of using the mails to defraud.

Rover hopes to be able to dispose of all these pleas with his argument in the Buck case, although it is likely that in case the court upholds the Government that an appeal will be filed in each of the other cases.

Young Woman May Die After Turning On Gas

Opening a gas jet in the bathroom of her L street residence near Ninth street northwest and gulping down three poison tablets, Mrs. Louise Easton, 24 years old, attempted to commit suicide at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, according to Second Precinct police.

Taken to Emergency Hospital in its ambulance, she was reported in a "very serious" condition. She was reported to have been found unconscious on the floor of the bathroom, with the door shut and the window down, by a sister, who immediately summoned police and hospital aid.

THE NEUTRALITY ENIGMA.

Secretary Stimson has directed public attention to an important and far-reaching matter of international policy by his interpretation of the British white paper which deals with the elimination of neutral rights in any future war. The Secretary of State has officially announced that the British argument respecting the elimination of neutrals is not meant to apply to the United States.

According to Mr. Stimson's statement, issued to the press on Monday, the British government has confined its observations as to the absence of neutrals in future wars to nations which are members of the League of Nations. Thus the frequently reported British opinion that America is bound to join with other nations against a violator of the Kellogg pact and therefore can not remain neutral under the "new order" is directly challenged. By explaining what the British really meant to say in the white paper, Mr. Stimson may be indirectly setting forth the only viewpoint which America would accept. So long as the British government understands that America has not abandoned her neutral rights and does not propose to do so under the Kellogg pact, the method by which this information is conveyed to the British government is relatively unimportant.

The ambiguous text of the British white paper lends itself to varying interpretations. It is fair to infer from one paragraph that Great Britain does regard American neutrality as a thing of the past because of the Kellogg pact. Leading members of the Senate foreign relations committee construe the following paragraph of the white paper as clearly indicating an intention to include signers of the "peace pact," of which the United States is one, among the nations whose neutral rights are to be no more:

> Public opinion in this country is naturally sensitive as regards any action which might be considered as unduly limiting the exercise of British sea power in time of war. But the whole situation has been built up on the assumption that there is nothing illegitimate in the use of war as an instrument of national policy, and, as a necessary corollary, that the position and rights of neutrals are entirely independent of the circumstances of any war which may be in progress.
> This assumption is no longer valid as regards states which are members of the league and parties to the peace pact.

The Kellogg pact is mentioned frequently in the British white paper, which ostensibly deals with the optional clause of the world court protocol and the reasons for Britain's acceptance of it.

In the paragraph dealing with the Kellogg pact the British government virtually declares that no signatory of this pact can remain neutral in any future war. The paragraphs in the white paper dealing directly with the mutual duties of members of the league reveal that Great Britain desires to apply the new doctrine of neutrality—or absence of neutrality—to them also.

Respecting the British paper Mr. Stimson has said:

> Their argument thus does not apply to the position of the United States as a signatory of the Kellogg-Briand pact. As has been pointed out many times, that pact contains no covenant similar to that in the covenant of the League of Nations providing for joint forceful action by the various signatories against an aggressor.

The true meaning of the British government may long remain an enigma respecting the elimination of neutrals in any future war. But Mr. Stimson's statement, above quoted, is easily understandable so far as it concerns America's refusal to be committed to join other powers against a violator of the Kellogg pact.

FOREIGN TRADE IN 1929.

New records to the credit of the United States mark the close of 1929 in the annals of world trade. Both exports and imports reached unprecedented figures. The Department of Commerce estimates that American goods shipped abroad during the year were valued at $5,300,000,000, an increase of 3 to 4 per cent over 1928. An increase of 8 per cent in imports brought the total to about $4,450,000,000, leaving a huge trade balance in favor of this country.

American export trade was featured by a 10 per cent growth in shipments of manufactured goods. Machinery sent abroad was valued at $600,000,000 and took rank next to cotton, which is the largest export item. In spite of a falling off in the foreign market for automobiles in recent months, the total value of motor exports stands at about $550,000,000. The United States has become the leading exporter of factory products in the world.

Agriculture did not fare so well in the foreign markets. The total value of exported farm products fell somewhat below that of 1928, chiefly due to a smaller volume of cotton and tobacco.

One remarkable thing about the year's trade record is that the idle talk that has been going on in connection with revision of the tariff seems to have had no effect. The steady expansion movement which has been in progress ever since 1921 was continued without the slightest interruption. It should be comforting to those alarmists who feared that the bottom was going to fall out of American international trade because Congress undertook to bring the tariff law up to date, to note that their fears were quite unfounded.

It is obvious that American trade has continued to grow because of the efficiency of American factories and the gradual improvement of conditions in customer nations. As long as these tendencies are in evidence expansion of trade may be expected. Each nation will adjust its tariff according to its domestic needs, and the prosperity of each will in turn stimulate greater international trade.

"VALORIZATION" OF FARM CROPS.

Two statements, one issued by Senator Capper and the other by C. W. Lonsdale, prominent grain dealer of Kansas City, evidence the fact that no wide gulf separates the proponents and the opponents of farm relief as it now is being put into effect by the Federal Farm Board. Senator Capper's statement was in the nature of a defense of the board. Mr. Lonsdale made his pronouncement in declining the general managership of the Farmers' National Grain Corporation, which had been tendered to him by Chairman Legge. The statements assume increased importance because of the fact that Senator Capper is looked upon as one of the more conservative members of the farm bloc, whereas Mr. Lonsdale is an outstandingly successful grain operator.

Senator Capper believes that the Farm Board is carrying out the "spirit and the letter" of the farm act. Carried out intelligently and energetically, he says, "the program of marketing farm products through farmer-owned and farmer-controlled cooperative marketing agencies will enable both the farmer and those who eat what the farmer produces to profit in the long run." He admits that "the boys who trade in pink slips of papers," meaning the speculators in futures, will be put out of business as the program begins to function, and he adds that the entire project is in the nature of an experiment that may, conceivably, be proved impracticable. But, he concludes, if the present system should prove ineffective, "there are the equalization fee and debenture plan in the background."

Mr. Lonsdale, on the other hand, believes that "certain fundamentals are being violated." The agricultural marketing act, in his opinion, is an indictment of the efficiency and economy of the present competitive system of grain handling. He continues:

> It proposes ultimately to destroy this system and to set up in its stead cooperative grower-owned control with the dual objectives of accomplishing economies in handling and bringing about price "stabilization" by what is called "orderly marketing." As for the first of these objectives, while it is possible that there may be wastes in the country handling of grain, cooperative country elevators have not convincingly proved their efficacy in reducing these wastes. On the contrary, they have failed in large number through inability to compete with commercial buyers and shippers.
> The second objective, that of influencing or controlling the price, is to be attained through ultimate scrapping of present marketing machinery, including the price insurance provided by hedges in future contracts, and retaining the grain, without price protection, in the hands of "stabilization corporations" or "pools" for gradual sale. All experience in this and other countries proves that such a scheme can not ultimately be profitable to the grower in the price received by him, while quasi-government direction is almost certain to be enormously more expensive than commercial methods with their competitively-enforced economies.
> We have given the name "stabilization" to what actually contemplates an attempt at "valorization" or price enhancement through withholding and forestalling.

The two statements agree upon the procedure of farm relief, upon the legality of the tactics adopted, and upon the effect the plan will have on the present grain dealer. They disagree only upon the practicability of the plan, and although Senator Capper admits that the present experiment may fail, he parades forth the greater bogeys, namely, equalization fee and debenture. Under any circumstances the country will probably agree with Mr. Lonsdale that what has been termed "stabilization" will turn out to be no less than "valorization."

THE ROAD TO PEACE.

Making war "impossible" is a favorite pastime of theorists and dreamers, and even of some men who consider themselves practical. A few weeks ago it was suggested that Mars be put out of commission forever by controlling the mineral resources of the world, now largely in the hands of Great Britain and the United States. This was followed by a naive plan by which the great commercial interests of the world would bring their governments to account by denying them the materials of warfare.

Two recent public statements on the subject deserve attention. Gen. Smuts, former premier of South Africa, who is visiting this country, declares that future international conflicts on a world-wide scale are impossible because poison gases, bacteria, &c., would make war so horrible for civilian populations that the people would not be so "lunatic" as to indulge. On the other hand, Dr. Robert A. Millikan, noted physicist, says that science is making war impossible. He was not so explicit as Gen. Smuts, but his theory seems to be that science is more productive in the means of maintaining peace than in means of making war.

The League of Nations undertakes to outlaw war by making war on any nation that violates its covenant. This is a case in which war is used to end war, as it has been in many instances in the past with the most frightful results. The United States stands out as leader of the movement to end war by the cultivation of good will and the promotion of international agreements to settle all difficulties by peaceful means. This country has not been deluded by belief that war can be ended by a business alliance, a mineral monopoly, scientific discoveries, armed force, or by any amount of argument as to its stupidity or its horrors.

Experience shows that people will go to war in spite of all dangers and costs when their homes are threatened with invasion and their rights ignored. The materials with which they will avenge themselves is a secondary consideration. Attempts to cork up the bottle will never be effective as long as the contents are effervescent.

Projects to put teeth in the Kellogg pact are still being considered in various parts of the world. Their purpose, like the aim of most other remedies to make war impossible, is to enforce peace by a tyranny that might prove more dreadful than war. The way to peace does not lead to a superstate or the suppression of liberty, but in the development of self-governing nations which can have no incentive to fight except in self-defense.

"SELECTIVE LAWLESSNESS"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post's editorial, "Selective Lawlessness," of December 29, you remark, "But when he (Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler) declares that lawlessness is selective, he goes too far." Maybe he does: but certainly he goes no farther than does our national Government in selection of lawlessness which the laws force it to make.

Let us consider a concrete case of selection of lawlessness by the administration. The rum-pact treaty laws legalize the importation, under certain conditions, of alcoholic beverages into the United States. The Supreme Court has found that that importation, under those certain conditions, is in nullification of the eighteenth amendment and in violation of the Volstead law. The last administration was forced to choose which set of these laws it would disobey and which set obey, since the enforcement of either set of laws was disobedience to the other set.

The Government could disobey both sets, disobey all prohibition laws, or make its selection in lawlessness. There was no other possible way to proceed.

Mr. Coolidge chose to obey the rum-pact laws and thereby to nullify the prohibition amendment and the prohibition enforcement law. It is apparent that he made this patriotic selection of lawlessness for the reason that, had he chosen the other side and tried to enforce the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead law, he would have had the difficult job of practically abolishing our foreign trade, flooding our markets with confiscated foreign ships and otherwise clogging the wheel of progress in our onrushing prosperity.

The present administration made the same choice in selective lawlessness as did the last one, and for the same reason.

Mr. Mitchell, of the Department of Justice, and Dr. Doran, of the Treasury Department, nullify the eighteenth amendment and violate the Volstead and the Jones laws every day while making a show of attempting to enforce those parts of the amendment and the laws which they do not nullify and violate in enforcing the rum-pact treaty laws.

It is a case of "selective lawlessness." I invite refutation of any or all of my statements by any one who will kindly, or unkindly, refute. W. W. KIMBALL.

AN INTERVIEW WITH TIME.

By COLUMBUS BRADFORD.

"Hail Nineteen-Thirty—say, why art thou here?"
Asked I of Time at the dawn of the year.
"What hast thou brought me of woe or of weal?
This is the secret I'd have thee reveal."

This was the answer old Time gave to me,
Eager and wondering what it would be:

"Naught have I brought you but pages pure white,
On which your thoughts and your doings to write.
Dip your pen into the infinite blue;
What you will write is the essence of YOU.

"Write your own weal, or you write your own woe,
Always you reap whatsoever you sow.

"Blame not your fellows, whatever your lot;
You are your drama, your stage and your plot.
Play your part wisely and all will be well—
Make your own heaven or make your own hell."

It's a Great Life if You Don't Weaken.

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

THE WAYWARD ONES.

I have pity for the man who can never understand
That crops are gathered only by the men who till the land,
For dreams of luck and fortune are empty things and vain,
The house which shelters laughter has been builded out of pain.

For empty is our wishing and vain
our sweet desires,
The price of all man gathers is sweating at the fires,
The price men pay for gardens where
June-time blossoms blow
Is working round the little beds with rake and spade and hoe.

And yet there dwells the dreamer who visions lovely things
And longs to own the mind's content which only labor brings.
He shivers in the wintry blast and hungry goes to bed,
Because he can not walk the path which all the toilers tread.

Oh, men there are despise them, and pass the beggars by,
They think of them as lazy men, but seldom question why.
Perhaps they were ill-fashioned for the labor of the land
And what to many is so plain, they can not understand.

No One But the Comrade of Thieves Will Count the Spoons After a Party.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

OCCASIONALLY the newspapers print a story concerning some rogue who has tricked men of greath wealth, and the public is more amused than shocked.

"He must have been a shrewd one," people say. "No ordinary crook could beat those big fellows at their own game."

But the rogue's ability to rob men who deal in millions is not a proof of shrewdness; it is an eloquent commentary on the quality of honor essential to great commercial success.

No shrewdness is required to defraud a friend or steal a host's silver. The successful violation of a trust is not an evidence of sharp wits.

Big men of business are easily robbed by treachery because they do not expect treachery. They are accustomed to dealing with men whose word is good. They feel no suspicion because they do business with men of honor.

When a rogue wins their confidence and is accepted as one of them, he can fleece them as easily as an honored guest can steal the bath towels.

Big business could ask no finer tribute.

There is a common and cynical belief that the big men of industry and commerce won their fortunes and their power by means of sharp practice and knavery.

Nothing could be more obviously absurd. Does anybody enjoy doing business with a rogue? If a man is not trustworthy, the fact is discovered quickly. And is it reasonable to suppose that big men of business, knowing a certain climber to be a knave, would patronize and assist him and accept him as an associate?

Big men, even more than small ones, abominate dishonor. They can not waste time with men who need watching.

A certain buyer, explaining why he had quit trading with an importer of rugs, said to me recently: "I don't enjoy dealing with a man if I must count my fingers after shaking hands."

That is the attitude of all men who do business in a big way. They have too much at stake and their time is too valuable to risk conflict with untrustworthy men. Honor among them must be taken for granted.

Small caliber men never will believe that is true. That is one reason why they are small caliber men. The clerk can't be trusted as a manager if he thinks all managers steal.

Where a spoken work pledges millions of dollars, the speaker's honor must be sound security for millions.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

FIRST WEEK OUT ON THE NEW YEAR RESOLUTION FLIGHT.

(In the Byrd Expedition Manner.)

Well, here we are somewhere above the first week in January and all trying to hold our altitude, although it is no easy matter, I can tell you. Every time I feel like abandoning the trip I just turn to Gus Willpower—good old Willpower!—and he gives me new courage. I don't know what I would do without him. We took off on this flight, as you know, New Year's Eve, determined to stay up at least six months, but we had no idea what hardships it would involve.

Before we had been up 24 hours we encountered terrific obstacles. Directly ahead we saw enormous Mount Tobacco and just beyond it the formidable Cocktail Range mentioned by others who tried to do what we are doing. We are all pretty well shaken. Dannie Conscience and Freddie Determination—I call him "Grim" Determination—are busy taking observations. What would I do without them?

* * * *

Unable to scale Mount Tobacco and dangerous Cocktail Range, we turned east and just when we figured we had clear sailing what should loom up ahead but Thriftless Glacier—old Thriftless—which has been the grave of so many New Year resolutions fliers! I called to Charlie Courage, but it was unnecessary, as he had seen the danger and was tossing out ballast. What a man! Over went four sacks of our very best intentions and two barrels of promises we had made to mother and the girls.

* * * *

We were then up 15,000 feet and going good, although it was pretty misty and it seemed to me the motor kept humming, "What's the use? What's the use?" Suddenly right in our path we saw an enormous mountain range. It was the famous Gluttony Range. Mount Intemperance loomed just behind it and looking down we saw we were over the great ice pack known as Backsliders Land. We had to act quickly. I looked around for Willpower, but he had swooned. Dear old Willpower! He means well, but he doesn't seem to have the stamina.

* * * *

I called quickly to Determination—good old "Grim"—but he was nowhere to be seen. Climbing back, I saw he was missing. He had jumped out of the plane. I was now without two of my most valuable assistants. Should I attempt to go on or turn for home and make a landing, admitting the flight to be a failure. It was a terrible moment. I resolved to ask Charlie Courage! He would know. "What'll I do?" I called. "I don't know what you are going to do, but my mind's made up," he answered, leaping overboard, too, and taking my last twelve bales of resolutions with him.

THE TEST.

"Is this real Scotch?" asked Cavendish Quirp, the careful scofflaw.

"Lissen," confided the bootlegger, who had been reading of the activities off New London, "I got it right out of a coroner's inquest."

DO YOU REMEMBER—

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Washington in Old Days Was Becoming Temperate—A Question Whether the Present System Is an Improvement.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: I have been familiar with Washington dating back to the seventies and can testify, with a recent contributor to your letter column, that the city was continually becoming more temperate during that interval.

The custom of keeping open house on New Year's was then quite general. On that day the dudes of Washington, each one dressed in his best suit of clothes, silk hat, swallow-tail and all, called from house to house, passing the compliments of the season and renewing old acquaintanceships. Drinks were dispensed everywhere, and in many homes the standing invitation was to help yourself, the sideboard being loaded with wines and other intoxicants.

Many fell by the wayside, and by midafternoon wobbly and more or less disheveled pedestrians were much in evidence.

There was not much dry-talking, wet-drinking in those days, and on this particular holiday a wet was not in good standing among his fellows of the wet set if he was not wetter than usual.

This description is not very extravagant, but it may be said in extenuation that, generally speaking, New Year's was the only day on which the limit of sobriety was exceeded, while in many instances the celebrants never drank a drop on any other day the year round.

Came a time while I was still a child when public opinion in Washington frowned on this unseemly observance of New Year Day, and within a few years it was a thing of the past.

And that is not all. Owing to the good sense of the public at large and the activity of numerous temperance organizations we continued to improve.

It is a question now whether there has been continued improvement under the prohibition amendment with its Volstead law.

We have been fed up on dry and wet talk until it is fast becoming, if it is not already, a painful bore, and our hope is that the President's enforcement commission may furnish essential facts on which we middlegrounders can hang lucid conclusions. MODERATE.

Stove League Deep in Conference in 1930 Baseball Dope—Important Questions on the Agenda.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: About this time of year one of the most interesting, if not the most peculiar organizations in the world, begins to show signs of life. It is the association of baseball "fans," known as the Stove League.

With the frequent appearance of baseball items in the daily papers, following the calm which begins to settle over the baseball world with the last crack of world series bats, the animated sessions of the Stove League commence.

With no fixed meeting places, no rules and regulations, no officers to be elected, wherever two or more fans foregather its activities extend over the whole of the United States.

It is the truth to say that it is a spontaneous growth. Even its name was wished on it, no one knows when or by whom.

In its membership are veterans here and there who can speak from personal knowledge of the prowess of Anson, Brouthers, Buck Ewing, Kelly, Silver Flint, Cy Young, Matthewson, Paul Hines and other ancient stars. These old timesrs join with the modern fans in consideration of the possibilities of next year's local club.

The exchange of views is seldom overheated. Gone are the embattled shouts, the raucous razz, the belligerent wisecracks of the playing season.

Now and then may be heard the discordant note of some gloomy fan recalling past disappointments. But as a general thing the views of the Stove League are more or less roseate with optimism.

Will Liska renew his early starting form of last spring? Will the pitching corps, as a whole, round into winning shape? Will the Goose hit with lamps undimmed? Will southpaw pitching be the puzzle of last year? How about Bluege's bum prop? Questions like these keep the fans on edge to thoroughly enjoy the coming season's fight.

Believe me, Kenesaw, the Stove League is an organization of which we should all be proud. Eager and earnest, and, withal, judicious, a choice and unique by-product of the American Commonwealth, following the fervent guesswork of the spring-training season, it gathers well-informed and enthusiastic in answer to the official slogan, "Play ball!" OLD FAN.

If Eve Had Passed Through Flapperhood the Serpent Wouldn't Have Had a Chance.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am not at all in sympathy with the moralists who worry about the short skirts and bobbed hair and alleged undue independence of the "flapper," a term, by the way, which I detest. As it seems necessary to be continually pointing out, the flapper, so called, has always been with us, though in other environments, and has not always been quite so free from restraint as at present, yet, the young female of the species just beginning to get acquainted with life, she has been the same in every civilized generation, notwithstanding the trivialities that worry the moralists, such as the way she has dressed her hair, the raiment she has worn, or her lack of raiment.

Do not forget that the bright-eyed, self-respecting flapper of today is the comely character-building mother of tomorrow. It was Mother Eve's great misfortune that she was never a flapper. If she had developed through flapperhood to matrimony Satan would have worked his confidence game in vain. LIGLATH PILESER.

NEW ELECTION PLAN OUTLINED BY PRIMO

Spanish Dictator Submits to Country His Program of Reorganization.

PATRIOTIC UNION FACTOR

Madrid, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Gen. Primo de Rivera, the Spanish premier, in what many believe is part of his political testament, today laid before the country a plan providing for a return to constitutional guarantees and parliamentary government by next September. That would be just seven years after the suspension of parliamentary government following upon the bloodless coup by which Primo de Rivera seized the reins.

At the same time the premier decided that any immediate governmental changes were contemplated or that a crisis existed in his cabinet. He said King Alfonso approved the plan today after studying it since its submission to the monarch on Tuesday.

The plan calls first for reorganization of "the patriotic union." This is the political organization which was called into being at the behest of Primo de Rivera early in his dictatorship. It has been carefully nurtured by him ever since and its various committees have been virtually carrying on municipal and other local administrations.

Election Program Outlined.

In the attempt to get new blood into the administration of the party, elections for provincial delegates to its central body will be held in February. If these turn out in a manner approved by the dictatorship the next step will be popular elections for municipal councils and provincial legislatures. But only about one-fourth of the present membership of these latter bodies is to be changed.

The ultimate fate of the present national assembly is undecided. It has a legal life until September 12, 1930. Whether it is to continue in its present capacity of being purely advisory, or whether it is to be given at least a modicum of true parliamentary powers, will not be determined until after the elections in the provinces and cities have shown the trend of popular choice for public officials.

Meanwhile the national assembly is to discuss a proposed new constitution. This debate is likely to continue well into the summer.

Opinion Divided on Plan.

The censorship prevented a full discussion of the much heralded "political plan" and it was received with mixed feelings in authoritative quarters.

Enemies of the government, including the intellectuals and politicians of the old Liberal, Conservative and Republican parties, were frankly disappointed with the premier's scheme. They predicted that the promised elections would show little because opponents of the dictatorship would abstain from voting, just as they did in the plebiscite held several years ago to determine Primo de Rivera's standing with the populace.

Those who are friendly to the government expressed much satisfaction with what they called the premier's solution of the governmental problem.

They were sure that the coming elections would show clearly whether the present government enjoys the confidence of the people.

Slacker Ouster Urged.

In a letter addressed to the Patriotic Union tonight, the premier urged all members of that body to purge "slackers" from the organization. He said that workers and women should be encouraged to join so as to make the union representative of a true cross-section of the country as a whole.

He also referred to the provincial committee elections next month. He said these committees would have the task of preparing the masses to vote in the town, city and province elections to be held later.

He suggested that these later elections ought to show the organization supporting the government in all sections of the country.

Theater Manager Held After Panic

Two of 72 Victims of Fire Buried in Stricken Scotch Town.

Paisley, Scotland, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Charles Dorward, manager of the Glen cinema, where 72 children perished during a fire panic on New Year's Eve, was arrested today charged with "culpable homicide or culpable negligence."

Dorward's arrest followed lengthy official inspection of the theater by Chief Officer A. R. Dyer, of the London Fire Brigade; Maj. T. H. Crosier, chief inspector of explosives at the home office, and J. T. Watson, solicitor general for Scotland. He will appear in the sheriff's court tomorrow morning.

The first funerals for the child victims of the disaster were held today. John and William Pinkerton, brothers aged six and twelve, were buried with an impressive public tribute. The crowd lining the route from the Pinkerton house in the working class district of North Paisley to the cemetery was so dense that the police had to be summoned to regulate traffic and enable the funeral party to reach its destination.

Representatives of the town council attended simple services for the dead children. Special services will be held in the Paisley churches tomorrow when most of the other children will be buried.

Ortiz Rubio Hears Apology of Mayor

President-Elect of Mexico Treats Detroit Hissing as Trivial.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Pascual Ortiz Rubio, president elect of Mexico, today accepted the apologies of Mayor John C. Lodge for the communist demonstration which marred his welcome to Detroit last night and passed the incident off as of no consequence.

"One finds that sort of people everywhere," he remarked. At the time of the demonstration, he had willingly declared of the milling communists that "they have a right to their opinion."

Fifteen years ago Ortiz Rubio visited Detroit as an obscure colonel and engineer on the staff of President Carranza, of Mexico, and spent a month studying methods in the automobile factories that production principles might be applied to Mexican industry.

The party will leave tomorrow for Chicago.

They Call It Politics

By CARTER FIELD

THE religious issue is hard to kill. It keeps bobbing up all the time despite the most earnest efforts by leaders of both parties to consign it to history. Right now it is raising its head in Maryland, threatening to make Rome and the Pope questions of acrimonious discussion during the approaching gubernatorial campaign.

Strangely enough this is true despite the fact that no Catholic is being mentioned as a candidate. After having served three terms as governor—the first man since the Civil War to serve more than one—Albert C. Ritchie is expected to be a candidate for a fourth term. Ritchie has always been anathema to the drys, and during the presidential campaign he supported Alfred E. Smith.

Since that time the more bitter of the anti-Catholics have been annoyed apparently by newspaper photographs of Gov. Ritchie taken with Archbishop Curley of Baltimore, at cornerstone layings, and the cry is all over the counties that "Ritchie is playing with the Catholics."

THIS has already cropped out in the maneuvers for running a candidate against Ritchie in the primary, but it is in the main campaign that apparently it will burst into full flower. Added to the strength of the drys in western Maryland, southern Maryland and Eastern Shore, it appears that Ritchie may have the hardest fight since his first election as governor.

His majority on that occasion was just 165, and there be those in Maryland who say it was really a minority and not a majority. Be that as it may, his majority the next time he ran was 40,000, and the last time 60,000, which for a State of only eight electoral votes is quite some lead to have over an opponent.

It is rather interesting that although the Baltimore Sun has invited discussion of the "fourth term issue" there seems to be no interest in it whatever. It was all wet and dry until the last few weeks, when the religious issue has been fanned up by resentment over these photographs, adding to the feeling engendered because of Ritchie's support of Smith.

IT is not accurate, of course, to draw any deductions from the size of Hoover's majority over Smith. In the first place the Maryland wets were never as enthusiastic about Smith as they were about Ritchie. Maryland is a very conservative State, as it has repeatedly proved. It did not like Smith's views on Government ownership. It did not like the brown derby. It preferred the old Virginia family of Gov. Ritchie to the sidewalks of New York origin of Gov. Smith.

In addition Hoover was tremendously popular in Maryland. There was no opposition worthy of the name to Hoover in the preconvention campaign. He was Maryland's candidate. This has been reflected in the editorial and news attitude of the leading Democratic newspaper of the State, which was so distinctly friendly to Hoover as to annoy excessively ardent Smith supporters.

But it comes as somewhat of a surprise, especially in view of what happened in Virginia last November, to find the religious issue cropping up in Maryland. In spite of the best Bishop Cannon could do the regular Democratic organization, which had supported Smith as warmly as it could, won an overwhelming victory in Virginia.

* * * *

ONE explanation of the difference is that the anti-Smith movement in Virginia last fall was all at the top. Bishop Cannon and other anti-Smith leaders overestimated the importance of their contribution to the fight against Smith the year before. They tried to exert that influence against men who were neither wet nor Catholic—whose only offense was that they had been for Smith.

In the Maryland case the trouble is boiling up from the bottom. No leaders are encouraging it. There it is. The candidates being mentioned for the Republican nomination are A. G. Towers, formerly of the Eastern Shore, and Mayor Broening, of Baltimore, a power in fraternal circles. Broening was elected mayor on an anti-Catholic wave, but he has certainly been moist. Towers has never said anything on prohibition, but he would probably run dry.

HOOVER CHOICE OF DELEGATES TO LONDON PARLEY DEFENDED

said that if Mr. Shearer was paid $3,000,000 he would be still underpaid.

"In addition, the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and many other officers of the Navy knew of this unholy combination, yet not a word was ever given to the public until Shearer squealed. In fact, every one knew this except Admiral Hilary P. Jones and, although it is claimed he did not cooperate with Shearer, there are but few people in the United States that will believe that he assumed a different attitude than that which was put forth by all of the other naval officers that cooperated with Shearer."

McClintic said, in explaining his statement, that the Assistant Secretary of the Navy to whom he referred was "Theodore Douglas Robinson, under Secretary Wilbur."

Shearer Lecture Is Called Out-and-Out Business Deal

New York, Jan. 2 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—William B. Shearer, propagandist for a big navy, in a statement made to the New York World News Service today declared that the shipbuilders were prepared to keep him on their pay rolls after the beginning of the Senate investigation last fall, but were told not to by former Secretary of State Kellogg and acceded to Mr. Kellogg's request.

"The shipbuilders," Mr. Shearer said, "were perfectly satisfied to continue on with me, but former Secretary Kellogg protested against my employment by them, and as a result my income was cut off.

"I did not feel that I could go on unless I received some sort of compensation, because for ten years I have given all that was in me to this cause."

These were the reasons Mr. Shearer said why he had decided to lecture in Carnegie Hall next Sunday evening, his subject being "The inside story of ten years of international intrigue against United States sea power." He will also comment on the approaching London conference.

"Mr. Shearer made it clear that his public appearance was purely a business arrangement between himself and F. J. Emmerich, of Celebrities Management, Inc., of this city. This was verified by Mr. Emmerich, who added, "We sought out Mr. Shearer and induced him to undertake the New York lecture, feeling that the public wanted to hear what Shearer had to say, and we make our living catering to the public."

Eielson Search Plane Cracks Up

Crew Escapes Unhurt When Craft's Motor Stalls During Take-Off.

Fairbanks, Alaska, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—One of the Fairchild cabin planes sent here for the Eielson search was cracked up today as Gifford Swartman and Capt. Pat Reid were taking off for Nulato, the first stopping place between here and Nome.

Swartman, at the controls, was forced to land his ship in a small slough when the engine stopped just after taking the air. The plane was believed badly damaged, but Swartman and his mechanic escaped without a scratch. Capt. Reid got his plane into the air without difficulty for the first hop in the Canadian fliers' search for Ben Eielson, missing since November 9.

Snow, which had been falling several hours, stopped just before Reid decided to hop for Nulato, a trading center and wireless station on the Yukon River, about 250 miles from here and on a direct line to Nome.

Until mechanics are able to make a thorough examination of the ship, they would make no estimate as to the extent of damages or time needed for repairs.

LAWYER WILL FIGHT FOR SIMMONS SEAT

Representatives R. L. Doughton and William C. Hammer, can be counted for Simmons at the present time.

Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Furnifold M. Simmons, North Carolina's veteran Democratic senator, who has been unopposed in Democratic primaries in this State since 1912, will face the opposition of Josiah William Bailey, Raleigh attorney, prominent in Democratic circles of the State for 25 years, when the voters go to the polls, June 5.

Mr. Bailey was defeated in the Democratic primary for governor in 1924 by Angus W. McLean.

Mr. Simmons has been a leader in the Democratic party of North Carolina for 50 years and has been one of its senators since 1900. He will be 76 years old January 20.

Senator Simmons, notified by the Associated Press at his home in New Bern of the announcement of Mr. Bailey, said he had nothing to say. He has not yet formally announced his candidacy for reelection but on more than one ocasion, including an anti-Smith address here in 1928, he said he would be a candidate in 1930.

In 1924, when Senator Simmons was reelected for his fifth term, he received a majority of 111,011 votes over his Republican opponent, which was the largest majority ever given in North Carolina to a senatorial candidate.

Pilot Lives to Tell Of 2-Mile Drop

Oxygen Supply Fails at 25,000-Foot Altitude, but Man Recovers.

(Associated Press.)

A routine report reaching Army Air Corps headquarters yesterday told how an Army pilot had fallen, while unconscious, more than 2 miles in a tailspin and recovered in time to live and tell the tale.

Lieut. D. D. Graves, of the Ninety-fifth Pursuit Squadron at Rockwell Field, Calif., lost consciousness at an altitude of 25,000 feet in an airplane he was testing. A fitting on his oxygen tanq failed.

The plane lurched into a spin and he did not egin to recover until passing the 15,000-foot altitude. So fast was his drop that he had fallen 2,000 feet more before regaining his faculties sufficiently to bring the plane into control. He landed without damage to the ship.

REMOVAL OF OLD TREES IS HALTED

tree or any shrubbery whatever from a lot in the cemetery has been asked of City Attorney R. Bolling Wilcox of Petersburg and later may be sought from hustings court.

In the meantime the trees are to be replaced. According to available information, one of the Morton heirs who lives in Richmond is responsible for the sale of the trees. It is stated that they were sold for $1,500.

Petersburg officials said yesterday that the law on the subject is not altogether clear. The trees stand in a part of the cemetery that is oldest and among the most historic and sacred spots in the city. They are not far from historic Old Blandford Church itself and long have been objects of great interest to tourists and persons who love history of early Virginia.

It is believed that the removal of the trees from the earth and their return yesterday will not affect life, as they were taken up with great care and by men well versed in such work.

Efforts to determine definitely and finally just whether the trees legally can be removed by any one are to be made immediately. It is intended that the question shall be answered today if possible, but it may not be able to settle it for a few days. Until the question is settled City Manager Morton has issued orders, on authority from the city council, that no tree or shrub is to be removed from the cemetery or any lot without authority in writing from him.

THIRD REPARATIONS CONFERENCE LOOMS

Advance Guard of Delegates to Second Session at The Hague Arrives.

PROCEDURE IS PROBLEM

The Hague, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The advance guard of the second conference of the Young plan for reparations had scarcely arrived here today when talk began of the necessity of a possible third meeting to stabilize the peace of Europe.

The normal work ahead of this second conference has been definitely outlined, but the proposed trust agreement between the central banks of the creditor powers and the new bank for international settlements which is to handle collections and distributions under the Young plan, seems destined to meet with some critical opposition.

Another question that may prove bothersome embraces the reparations payable by Hungary, Bulgaria and Austria to the "succession states"—Roumania, Czechoslovakia, Jugoslavia and Greece. A subcommittee appointed by the first Hague conference has been unable to reach a unanimous agreement regarding the reparations obligations of Bulgaria and Hungary.

Other Agenda Outlined.

Aside from these subjects the new conference is to adopt statutes for the bank of international settlements and consider reports from committees appointed last August to find methods for liquidating all the hangovers of the past between Germany and the creditor nations.

The impression existed among earlier arrivals that the principal creditor nations will decide to go ahead with the Young plan, adopt statutes for the new bank and arrange for commercialization of the unconditional part of Germany's payments. The smaller creditors of Bulgaria and Hungary will be asked to arrange their matters separately.

But those who hold that a third conference will be necessary argue that this last section of the proposed procedure will be the ultimate cause for the later gathering.

Third Conference Looms.

They assert that the little entente powers will not be satisfied at being left alone to deal with Bulgaria and Hungary and will demand the backing of a third full session unless the larger creditors are willing to remain here until the recalcitrant debtors of southwest Europe are brought to terms.

The French delegation, headed by Premier Tardieu, Foreign Minister Briand, Finance Minister Cheron and Louis Locheur, minister of labor, arrived this evening. The Germans and British are expected to reach here tomorrow morning.

The opening session will take place in the Binnenhof at 5 o'clock. It probably will be called to order without ceremony. Later, however, Queen Wilhelmina will give a huge reception in honor of all the delegates.

Moody to Inquire Into Valls Charge

Texas Attorney General Is to Conduct Quiz of Laredo Official.

Austin, Tex., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Gov. Dan Moody will take no action on a petition of Laredo business men to remove District Attorney John Valls from office until Attorney General R. L. Bobbitt investigates charges brought against Valls.

The governor late today announced his intention to withhold action after his third conference with O. W. Killam and Hal Brennan, of Laredo, who brought here petitions containing the signatures of 1,900 persons, requesting that the prosecutor's appointment to the office be withdrawn.

Valls has not been confirmed by the Texas Senate, and under the law Gov. Moody could withdraw the appointment and send the name of another to the Senate for confirmation.

56 Tunis Arabians Killed by Plague

Drastic Measures Enforced by City to Stamp Out Epidemic.

Tunis, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The terrible bubonic plague, which is often fatal in 24 hours, has broken out among Arabs in the native quarter of the City of Tunis. Fifty-six persons have died from it and 600 have been segregated. All the victims were Arabs.

The authorities believe that they have prevented the spread of the plague by taking drastic measures. Many houses were evacuated and their dwellers isolated in pest houses. Vaccination has been enforced in all areas suspected of contamination.

The European quarter has not been affected by the plague, and an official statement today said that no new cases had developed in the native quarter during the past two days.

Parley on Boulder Dam To Be Reopened Jan. 20

(Associated Press.)

Governors of the three lower Colorado Basin States—Arizona, California, and Nevada—together with members of the Colorado River Commission and William J. Donovan, representing the Department of the Interior, have agreed upon January 20 as the date for reopening Boulder Dam discussions.

The place for holding the meeting has not been definitely determined. Secretary Wilbur, in his request to the governors to hold the meeting, with a view to ironing out their difficulties, suggested Phoenix, Ariz., which was tentatively agreed upon. But Gov. Young of California has suggested El Tovar Hotel, at the Grand Canyon, looking down upon the Colorado River, as a more appropriate and convenient place. This proposal has been referred to the other governors and the commissioners.

Lindberghs in Wichita On Tour of Air Lines

Wichita, Kans., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, on a tour of Transcontinental Air Transport Lines, landed at Municipal Airport here at 3:12 p. m. today after a flight from Kansas City.

The Lindberghs indicated they would spend the night here, going tomorrow to Waynoka, Okla., the next stop on their westbound flight.

Ordeal of Hand-Shaking Lames Hoover's Fingers

President Hooter did not escape unscarred from his New Year's Day ordeal of shaking the hands of 6,348 persons, it was learned yesterday, following a visit to the White House of Senor Don Carlos G. Davila, the Chilean Ambassador.

"The President showed me his right hand, which was quite swollen," Senor Davila declared. "He laughed about it and said that it was of small consequence."

White House secretaries said that they had not noticed any swelling of the presidential right hand. They added, however, that Mr. Hoover has not scheduled any hand-shaking parties for some time to come. Two years ago, after the White House New Year's Day reception, President Coolidge carried his hand in a sling for several days.

BIRMINGHAM PARTY FIGHTS HEFLIN BAR

Resolution by Alabama Body Raps State Committee for Bolter Action.

INDEPENDENTS SIT TODAY

Birmingham, Ala., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The Democratic executive committee of Jefferson County, where more votes were cast in the last general election than in any other six counties in Alabama, today passed a resolution censuring the State executive committee for barring party "bolters" from becoming candidates in the August primary.

The resolution was introduced by C. D. Comstock, of Birmingham, and was passed by a vote of 45 to 24.

Another resolution passed by the committee and adopted without argument or a dissenting vote invited all qualified electors to become candidates in the primary regardless of their vote in the general election. The resolution prescribing qualifications of candidates required only that they support the party nominees in the general election.

Heflin Ranks Gather.

The county committee's action was taken on the eve of a meeting here to formulate plans for the independent campaigns in the November general election of United States Senator J. Thomas Heflin, seeking reelection, and Hugh A. Locke, Birmingham attorney, gubernatorial candidate, both of whom were barred from the primary by the State committee because they supported President Hoover.

Immediately after the State committee met at Montgomery on December 16 and voted to raise the bars against the bolter candidates for Federal, States, district or circuit offices, Heflin followed Locke in announcing that he would be an independent candidate.

Likens Rule to Mussolini's.

Senator Heflin, who is here to address the organization meeting of the independents tomorrow night, in a statement today likened the action of the State committee in barring bolters to Mussolini's rule of Italy.

"The committee agreed to let all Democrats vote in the primary," Heflin's statement said, "but like Mussolini, told them for whom they must vote."

Expresing the conviction that the "real Democrats" of Alabama are opposed to the action of the committee, Senator Heflin said, "I would be highly pleased if the committee would assemble again and rescind its action. I believe that 85 per cent of the Democrats are opposed to what it has done."

Chilean Steamer Pounded to Pieces

Passengers Are Saved After Ship Hits Rocks North of Peruvian Port.

Lima, Peru, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The Chilean steamer Mapocho was pounded into a total wreck tonight after going aground early in the morning near Samanco, about 200 miles north of Callao. All passengers were landed safely by the ship's boats.

Local agents of the Companis and Sud Americana de Vapores, owners of the vessel, said tonight that a rough sea coupled with the swells of a high tide pounded the ship on the rocks and stove in her hull below the water line. Earlier advices from company sources had reported the disembarkation of the passengers but had denied that the vessel herself was in danger.

First word of the seriousness of the wreck came through dispatches addressed to the chief of the National Radio & Telegraph Service. These reported the damage to the hull and the fact that water was flowing into the steamer's cargo space.

The Peruvian cruiser Bolognesi left here at dusk to offer any assistance possible to the crew.

The correspondent of the newspaper El Commercio at Callao said that mariners there believed that the Napocho would be a total loss.

Hoover and Hines Discuss Veterans

Proposed Merger of U. S. Agencies Is Presented to President.

(Associated Press.)

Details of the proposed consolidation of all governmental agencies dealing with war veterans were discussed with President Hoover yesterday by Director Hines, of the Veterans Bureau.

Gen. Hines is scheduled to appear before the expenditures committee of the House next week to discuss the recommendations made by President Hoover in his message to Congress concerning the placing of the Veterans Bureau, the Pension Bureau and other veteran activities under one directing head. The Veterans Bureau head said that he was highly in favor of the consolidation recommended and believed that it would dispose of many of the difficulties now faced by the several agencies dealing with veterans.

The President's recommendations grew out of a report of a committee headed by Dr. Kenneth Dunham, of Ohio, and it is the intention of the committee to make further studies on the subject with particular emphasis directed toward the activities of the various States in caring for veterans.

PEACE AIMS OF NAVY STRESSED BY ADAMS

Secretary Tells Audience in Boston His Department Favors Parity.

PERSONNEL IS PRAISED

Boston, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The Navy is desirous of peace and would welcome any arrangement whereby competitive building of ships by nations could be eliminated, Charles Francis Adams, Secretary of the Navy, said today in an address before the Boston Chamber of Commerce. He will be one of the United States representatives at the coming London Naval Conference.

The Secretary was brief in his remarks on naval parity, which will be the chief topic of discussion at the London conference; for the United States Navy, he said, it "would be glad to have that parity a real, just parity."

He explained the necessity of maintaining the Navy with the statement that it was "but reasonable insurance" for the Nation's overseas commerce.

The Navy's personnel was praised by Secretary Adams.

He said the men in that branch of the Government's armed forces were "not pugilistic swashbucklers looking for war," but were "patriotic, high-minded citizens devoting themselves to their country."

He described the battleship as a very important and probably leading weapon of the modern navy. "It is fair to say," he said, "that the battleship is the far more economical way of throwing about high explosives."

Concerning the relative value of aircraft and battleships, Secretary Adams said every navy believed the battleship would continue to be an important part of national defense despite rapid development of aircraft. He pointed out that a ship could continue to remain at the scene of battle, whereas it would be necessary for aircraft to return to its carrier or base for fuel or ammunition.

After praising the men under him, Adams said "I want you to see the men as I see them and not as you see them on Boston Common; and perhaps all of those men are not Navy men; perhaps they are Coast Guards."

His reference to the Coast Guard produced an atmosphere of humor among his listeners.

Virgin Islands Governor Off on Inspection Tour

St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Capt. Waldo Evans, Governor of the Virgin Islands, will proceed to San Juan, Porto Rico, tomorrow on the U. S. S. Grebe to inspect the naval radio station and other American Navy establishments as district commandant. He will be the guest of Gov. Theodore Roosevelt for about a week.

At the New Year's Day reception here the chairman of the insular legislature requested Gov. Evans to convey to President Hoover and the people of the United States the thanks of Virgin Island residents for what the Federal Government and the local administration under Capt. Evans has done for the islands.

Troubled With Dandruff and Rash. Healed by Cuticura.

"My scalp began to itch and burn and I was troubled with dandruff. Later a rash broke out all over my scalp. I could not sleep on account of the continual irritation. My hair came out in combfuls and was dead and brittle. I usually wore a hat so that people could not see the condition of my hair and scalp.

"I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. After using it the burning and itching sensation left so I purchased more, and in about two months I was healed." (Signed) Miss Hattie M. Martin, Offerman, Ga., June 11, 1929.

INFRINGEMENT LAID TO RADIO CONCERNS

R. C. A. Files Suit Charging Patent Rights Have Been Violated.

ORDER SIGNED BY JUDGE

Infringement of patents involved in radio communications apparatus was charged in suits filed against the Universal Wireless Communication Co., Inc., in Buffalo, N. Y., and Newark, N. J., by the Radio Corporation of America on Friday and Saturday of last week.

The Universal Wireless Communication Co., Inc., is a New York corporation which was granted 40 radio channels for domestic radio telegraph communication by the Federal Radio Commission last spring. Under the terms of the grant the Universal Co. was to have a certain number of stations in operation between cities in the United States within certain specified time.

Three bills of complaint were filed in the United States District Court in the Buffalo case, the plaintiffs being the Radio Corporation of America and the General Electric Co., the Radio Corporation of America and the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., and the Radio Corporation of America and the Western Electric Co., Inc., respectively.

Patents Are Cited.

The Buffalo suits are based upon patents to Langmuir, Lowenstein, Cady, Schottky, Housekeeper and Stoeckle. These patents relate to vacuum tubes, crystals and their circuits.

In the New Jersey case, which is based upon the DeForest feedback patents, former Judge Thomas G. Haight, of Jersey City, appeared as counsel for the plaintiffs in the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey.

The DeForest Radio Co. was joined as a defendant with the Universal Co., but only on account of its interest in the DeForest patents, no charge of infringement being made against that company. The R. C. A. and the A. T. & T. are plaintiffs in this suit.

Judge Issues Order.

District Judge William N. Runyon signed an order to show cause why a preliminary injunction should not issue against the Universal Co., the order being returnable in Newark, N. J., on January 20, 1930.

Under the provision of the order to show cause the Universal Co. has until January 6 to serve its replying affidavits to the application for injunction and the plaintiffs have until January 13 in which to serve their affidavits, on which they intend to reply in rebuttal.

The main office of the Universal Co. is in Buffalo, N. Y.

Fifth Ave. Fashions NEW YORK

A CHARMING coat model in semi-sports styling that will instantly appeal to the woman with mature figure, for it just disguises overweight beautifully.

The panel front lengthens the line of the figure. The double-breasted effect of the surplice bodice, with button trim, minimizes the width. An inverted plait in lower part at center-front panel provides necessary fullness to hem without interfering with its straight, slim line. The open neckline, rolled into revers, is especially becoming and youthful. Sleeves are slightly full toward wrists gathered into narrow cuff bands. A narrow belt nips the normal waistline.

Style No. 8257 is designed in sizes 16, 18, 20 years, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust.

It combines printed wool crepe in rust-brown tones with plain crepe in the lightest tone of print. The buttons are covered with the plain crepe. In the medium size it takes but 3 yards of 39-inch material with 1 yard of 39-inch contrasting.

Featherweight tweed in new, rich plum tones in tiny, self-check pattern is most unusual and so entirely wearable, showing clever manipulation of the fabric, with panel front, belt and cuffs cut on the bias.

Black suede broadcloth is ultra-modish.

Dahlia-purple faille silk crepe, dark brown flat silk crepe, midnight blue wool crepe, black crepe satin, with reverse of crepe for contrasting effect, and wool jersey in new knitted weave, in bottle-green tones, smart.

For a Lucille Lorraine Pattern of this model send 15 cents to Style Bureau, The Washington Post, 259 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Man Goes on Trial In Triangle Killing

Wife of Defendant Rushes to Embrace Him in Courtroom.

Chicago, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Samuel Howard Dorr, insurance agent and apartment house owner, went on trial today for the slaying of William J. O'Brien, husband of his confessed paramour.

Motion for continuance was overruled and four jurors selected. The panel is not expected to be completed before tomorrow. Prosecutors in their questioning of veniremen indicated they will ask the death penalty.

Mrs. Dorr, wife of the defendant and mother of his two small children, injected emotional excitement into the trial when she rushed to her husband to embrace him.

More than 200 curiosity seekers followed her from the courtroom and saw her faint twice in the corridors of the criminal courts building.

Mrs. O'Brien, who at first tried to take the blame for the slaying, was granted a separate trial and is expected to face a jury when Dorr's case is finished.

Bankruptcy Ring Charge Leads to Search for Ten

New York, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Ten men, charged with having been members of a "bankruptcy ring" and with having engineered the $500,000 failure of the National Home Outfitting Co. in Pittsburgh and New York last July were sought today by United States marshals armed with bench warrants. The men are under indictment in Federal court charged with using the mails to defraud.

The ten men sought are Morris Sanford, Morris Maletsky and Michael Gellis, all of Waterbury, Conn.; Bertram Henes, of Pittsburgh; Jack Lerner, of Manhattan, and Harry Schachter, Abraham Lauterstein, Michael M. Kantor, Benjamin Elfand and Morris Chasis, all of Brooklyn. The bankrupt National Home Outfitting Co. had its principal offices in Pittsburgh and branch offices in New York.

Watchman and Deputy Die in Pistol Battle

Gonzales, Tex., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—J. E. Tate, city night watchman, and A. C. Strickling, deputy sheriff, were found fatally wounded after a gun fight in an alley here last night, by Deputy Sheriff Ruel Vasburgh, who said Tate told him that Strickling, apparently under the influence of liquor, approached him with the remark: "Stick 'em up!"

Tate said, according to Vasburgh, that the deputy opened fire without another word and that after he had fallen with three bullet wounds he shot Strickling five times.

Burning Toy Balloon Is Plane Wreck Sought

Sandusky, Ohio, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—An airplane "flare" that Sanduskians saw last night 4 miles out in Sandusky Bay, and which they thought marked an airplane tragedy, they learned today was only a burning Fourth of July paper balloon that had been used to celebrate the advent of 1930.

Before the explanation of the "flare" had been discovered Coast Guards had battled the ice-covered lake in an attempted search for wreckage, and an airplane had been used for a similar purpose.

Train Control Device Inventor to Be Buried

Montclair, N. J., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The body of Dr. Benjamin Wooding, inventor of an automotic train control device and credited with originating the system of balloting by mail, was en route today to Denver, Colo., for burial. Dr. Wooding died Tuesday night.

He was physician to the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad and the Colorado Fuel & Oil Co. and was associated with the Colorado State Board of Health. Galesburg, Ill., was his birthplace.

Farm Cooperation Is Plea of Legge

Initiates Plans for Arkansas Growers to Join Cotton Corporation.

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Alexander Legge, chairman of the Federal Farm Board, and Carl Williams, representing cotton on the board, left here tonight for Oklahoma City, after initiating plans today for the participation of the Arkansas Cotton Growers Association in the proposed $30,000,000 cotton marketing Corporation.

A plea for stronger organization of farmers to make possible success of the proposed corporation was made by Mr. Legge and Mr. Williams.

"The Federal Farm Board is eager to support cooperative marketing in every way possible, but we can not hope to succeed unless the farmers are willing to organize and cooperate among themselves," Mr. Legge said.

He told officials of the association that the poor marketing systems are the cause of the falling quality of American cotton but that poentially the American farmers are well able to compete with cotton growers elsewhere in the world.

Mr. Legge and Mr. Williams will confer tomorrow with Oklahoma cotton cooperative officials and at Dallas with Texas cooperatives January 6.

Alcoholism Kills Two More in New York City

New York, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Two deaths today swelled to eight the number of victims of alcoholism in New York City during the past eight days. During the holiday period, beginning Christmas Eve and ending today, Bellevue Hospital treated 228 cases of alcoholism. Twenty-eight of the number were women.

The deaths today were those of two unidentified men who were found unconscious on the streets.

New Plans Altitude Is Accepted by Army

(Associated Press.)

The War Department yesterday accepted the mark of 30,000 feet set by Lieut. Norman H. Ives, of Rockwell Field, California, as an unofficial altitude record for P-12 pursuit type airplanes carrying a full military load.

So far as the records of the Air Corps show, this elevation, which was attained in tests conducted at the California Field, is the highest attained for this type of plane when loaded.

Presidential Yacht Put on Block Again

Navy Department to Take Bids for Third Time on Mayflower.

(Associated Press.)

The Navy Department will attempt for a third time to sell the former presidential yacht Mayflower.

Secretary Adams announced yesterday that bids for the vessel would be opened at the department on January 25.

The first time the yacht was announced for sale only one bid, an offer by junk dealers of less than $20,000 was received. The second time a Florida company, controlled by Baron G. Collier, offered $51,000 for it, contemplating its use for regular passenger service between Florida and the Bahama Islands. A bid of about $20,000 less was received at the same time grom a group represented as interested in obtaining the Mayflower for the city of New York

Rabbi Simon to Talk On Law-Abiding Jews

Dr. Abram Simon, rabbi of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, tonight will speak on "Jewish Self-Criticism," at the temple in answer to charges made recently by Judge Nathan Cayton that many Jewish names are to be found in the lists of persons involved in crime waves over the country.

Rabbi Simon has announced that he will include in his address an opinion that no Jewish crime wave exists and that Jews have always done their full share in upholding the laws of the Nation.

University Trustee Is Dead.

Providence, R. I., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—John Carter Brown Woods, trustee of Brown University since 1884 and long prominent in Rhode Island politics, died at his home here last night of pneumonia. He was a direct descendant of the founders of the Brown University.

On the Rules of Traffic

By WILLIAM ULLMAN

The District of Columbia is one of the few jurisdictions in which a car the authorities deem unsafe may be removed from service. The regulations forbid the operation of an automobile "when, in the opinion of the director or his designated assistance, such motor vehicle is not in a safe mechanical condition."

When a car is found to be unsafe because of some mechanical weakness, the owner is notified to bring it in for inspection by the Traffic Bureau and he then must have it repaired satisfactorily or an order may be issued by the traffic authorities prohibiting him from driving that particular car.

Example: A driver is involved in a collision and it is found that his brakes are in such bad condition that it is impossible for him to stop within a safe distance. He can not continue to drive his car unless the necessary repairs are made. If he does, he is subject to arrest.

Fox Film Holders Talk Receivership

Stock's Price Falls to $17 After Threat of Class "A" Owners.

New York, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Stanley M. Lazarus, counsel for the class A stockholders of the Fox Film Corporation, announced today that unless the creditors immediately applied for a receivership, the holders of the "A" shares contemplated such action "for their protection."

The immediate effect of the statement was a drop of $5 a share in Fox Film class A stock on the New York Stock Exchange, carrying the stock to $17, a new low record, and depressing the market generally in sympathy. The peak price last year was $105.62.

The corporation's class B stock is controlled by William Fox, who a month ago offered to relinquish control of both the Fox Film Corporation and Fox Theaters Corporation. H. L. Stuart, of Halsey Stuart & Co., and John E. Otterson, president of Electric Research Products, Inc., a subsidiary of American Telephone & Telegraph Co., then agreed to act as trustee with Mr. Fox.

William Tell Overture on Radio Today

Contrasting Music by Damrosch at 11 A. M. Wilbur to Address Students — Post Brevities on WOL.

An excerpt from Rossini's celebrated overture to "William Tell" has been selected by Walter Damrosch as the first of three contrasting works by great composers demonstrating the power of music to evoke the varied moods of nature to be broadcast in the N. B. C. Music Appreciation Hour at 11 o'clock this morning. The second number presents a winter scene, depicted musically by Debussy in "The Snow Is Dancing," from his suite, "The Children's Corner." In the final selection summer returns again, as Tschaikowsky's "Waltz of the Flowers" conveys a fanciful conception of a ballet of blossoms.

In the second half hour, devoted to the study of the stringed instruments in the sixth concert of series Mr. Damrosch will exhibit the characteristics of the stringed instruments, first in solo and then in contrast with other orchestral instruments. The first illustration is the celebrated set of variations, for string quartet, occurring in the patriotic hymn which Haydn composed in 1797, and which was immediately adopted as the Austrian anthem. The second number represents a composer's contribution to science. In his "Perpetual Motion" Moszkowski comes as near to realizing that elusive ideal as did the philosophers of antiquity, and, in addition, produces a brilliant work of art.

Erva Giles, soprano, and Joe White, tenor, will be the soloists in the program at 12:10 o'clock in honor of Station WFJC, Akron, Ohio.

Marie Howe Spurr, pianist, will be heard in recital from WRC at 1:45 o'clock, and the Marine Band Orchestra is scheduled for 3 o'clock, with Capt. Taylor Branson conducting.

Tschaikowsky's "Capriccio Italienne," a concise tone picture of the Russian composer's impressions of that southern land, will be played by an orchestra under the direction of Max Dolin during the broadcast of the Pacific Feature hour at 4 o'clock from WRC. Other selections include "Coronation March" (Meyerbeer); "Wine, Women and Song" (Strauss); "Serenade" (Moszkowski); "Serenade" (Drdla), and "Ballet Russe" (Luigini).

Having just signed an exclusive contract at a figure said to be one of the highest ever paid a woman artist as a regular radio feature, Jessica Dragonette will become the star of the Cities Service Hour when it broadcasts the first of its 1930 series of programs over WRC at 8 o'clock tonight.

Rosario Bourdon will continue to conduct the concert orchestra and will be assisted by The Cavaliers.

Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, Secretary of the Interior, will be the chief speaker on a program addressed to the students of the Nation, to be sent over WMAL at 4 o'clock this afternoon, arranged by the National Students Federation of America. The program will also present Dr. James Brown Scott, secretary of the Carnegie Foundation for International Peace. In addition to the two speeches, musical selections by the Yale Glee Club Quartet will be furnished during the program.

Will Osborne and his orchestra, and Weede Myer's Orchestra will provide WMAL listeners with an hour and one-half of dance music from 10:30 o'clock until midnight.

"Breakfast Brevities," from The Washington Post, will be offered listeners through WOL at 8:15 o'clock, followed by the musical clock.

Dinner music will be broadcast at 7 o'clock preceded by the "Let's Go Fishin'" period. Pauline Loria, blues singer, will be presented at 6 o'clock.

The Thompson Brothers, old-time fiddlers, are offered by WJSV at 7:30 o'clock, followed by James Chamberlain, tenor, and the Dixie Troubadours.

The Washington Trio is scheduled for 10 o'clock.

Jane Engle INTERPRETS the MODE

An amethyst panne velvet evening ensemble trimmed with ermine dyed a rich purple. (Dah-ray Design.)

PARIS, Jan. 2.—It seems to be the unanimous opinion of the really important couturiers that skirts neither very long nor very short should be, will be, and are the choice of every elegant woman.

Elegant women have never really liked the very short skirts. They just couldn't be nice, unless one could afford to wear long silk tights or something like that—and then I doubt if they could be nice.

But neither can an elegant woman sponsor very long skirts, which of necessity trail the ground and cannot be worn for an hour without becoming filthy. There are times and places for long skirts, and no others—and the time is not during the day and the place is not on the street.

One should realize that all discussions for and against the long skirts pertain only to daytime wear. There is no discussion about long skirts for evening. There isn't a woman in the world who does not like to be a grande dame, nor a woman in the world who would not feel demode in a short skirt on the dance floor.

Which leads us to something rather important about evening coats—something you must hear about soon.

The Couturiers.

Heim. The most elegant furrier of Paris—pronounced exactly like it is in English except that the "H" is silent—"I'm," just as we abbreviate "I am."

* * * *

An evening ensemble of panne velvet trimmed with amethyst and mauve crystal! I just couldn't resist making this design, honestly—and my cunning French dressmaker is making it up for me right this minute! It has princess lines and hugs the hips, and the short jacquette is of the mauve velvet and, sh-h-h-h, has a huge collar and cuff of—really, my dear, ermine, which will never be bunny-rabbit again, dyed a deep shade of the purple!

* * * *

The length of evening wraps is today's most mooted fashion question. And the answer is—extremes. Either very short, in a jaunty, just-below-the-natural-waist-line jacquette effect, or very long, following the swoop of the modish gown. There just isn't any three-length in an evening wrap! Coats, yes—but that's another story.

* * * *

Skirts are taking a circular trend, with an opening on the side, which reveals a harmonizing printed material underskirt, also circular. This for afternoon, I mean, and informal street wear. And usually it complements a straight, tight-at-the-waist jacquette over a blouse, which matches the underskirt—and really blouses!

We hope you're looking for the weekly Dare fashion letter in The Sunday Washington Post. We think it's well worth your time.

Au Revoir!

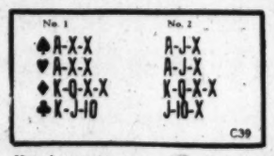
WORK ON BRIDGE

CONTRACT BRIDGE.

For the Player Familiar With Auction, But Inexperienced in Contract.

IN this series of Friday articles, a full explanation has been given of the No Trump count used when hands are valued Ace 4, King 3, Queen 2, Jack 1, two Tens 1; and it has been explained that the numerical count is far more dependable for No Trump purposes than the "quick trick" method of valuation. It also has been explained that for an original No Trump bid, dealer requires a count of 13, second hand 12, third hand 14, and fourth hand 15. Today we take up original bids of two No Trumps, the same count, of course, being used.

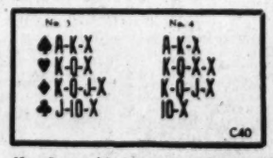
When a player is strong enough to bid an original two No Trumps, it does not matter whether he is dealer, second, third or fourth hand—the same total count is used for all positions at the table. When all four suits are stopped at least once, a count of 17 justifies an original two No Trumps. The following hands illustrate:



No. 1 would be a sound two No Trumps, because the hand counts 17 and every suit is stopped. No. 2 should be bid one No Trump only, for two reasons; it counts only 16, and one of the four suits is not stopped.

Two No Trumps may be bid on some hands which have only three suits stopped; but only when the hand counts 19 or more, has dependable stoppers in three suits, and has a fourth suit which is not unduly dangerous. A suit for this purpose is too dangerous when it is a blank or a singleton, or a doubleton whose highest card is lower than Jack. A bid of two No Trumps should be risked on a hand which qualifies under these restrictions, because binding only one might result in a pass by a partner who has strength enough to jump a bid of two to three—which would mean that the two combined should have strength enough to produce game.

Look at the following hands:



No. 3 would be a sound two No Trump bid: No. 4 would not, because the count is only 18. Even if No. 4 counted 19, it would fail to quality because of the character of the Club suit.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

AN ITCH ON THANKSGIVING.

IN a letter dated Thanksgiving Day, G. M. asks for a prescription for winter itch. This would indicate that G. M. was not certain that he was thankful. In all probability he remained indoors all that day. Somewhere about 2 o'clock he ate a heavy dinner, starting with a meat soup, peaking with turkey, and ending with mince pie. After that, feeling torpid, he proceeded to hibernate. He slept two hours and then lolled around the house. The house was snug and the air was warm and dry. Before bedtime he was itchy and scratchy. He sat down at his desk and, alternately scratching and writing, he sent out his S O S.

The answer sounds simple, but the prescription is costly and troublesome. Winter itch results from prolonged exposure of the skin to warm, dry air. The proper place to apply treatment is the air. If that is tried, the skin gets well without treatment. On the other hand, treating the skin and leaving the air as it is proves unsatisfactory two-thirds of the time.

The most effective treatment consists in going to Florida, southern California, or somewhere else in search of moist, cool air and opportunities to remain out of doors. That treatment is not possible for the rank and file. A few people are in a position to spend their time among the flowers in a conservatory.

Such people escape winter itch wherever they are. The great majority of people must depend on less expensive and more convenient methods. Remaining out of doors most of the time is possible for some. I have known woodsmen, however, who have fallen victims to winter itch because they would occasionally come indoors and sit around a hot stove. The worst of all sufferers are the members of the hot stove league.

If the house is heated by a system the air can be kept around 65, and never above 68.

If this is done there will be very little winter itch. If enough moisture is added to the air to hold the humidity at 55 per cent there will be almost no symptoms of the disorder. However, a pan of water on the stove will not supply enough moisture to save the day.

When it comes to treating the skin there are many prescriptions to choose from. Grease is the basis of all of them. If the skin is intact, carbolic acid in the grease adds to its efficiency. This chemical is a powerful sedative to skin nerves, but, like other powerful sedatives, it is somewhat dangerous.

SPEAK TO OFFICE MANAGER.

H. L. writes: In an office where I am employed with typists, &c., there are a number of men who are in the habit of spitting and blowing the nose on the floor. This is spread about by the feet. I would like you to write a short article on this habit, stating if it is injurious to the health of others in the office; whether it is illegal and, if so, what steps should be taken to enforce the regulations, if any.

REPLY.

Spitting on the floor is against the law. The law includes blowing the contents of the nose on the floor. These are offenses against office rules.

Speak to the chief clerk or other person in authority, asking that the office rule be enforced. Next in the line of authority is the health department.

The reason for both the law and the rule is the fact that these filthy practices spread consumption, pneumonia, common colds and possibly other diseases.

What Today Means to You

"CAPRICORN."

IF January 3 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:15 a. m. to 10:30 a. m., from 6 p. m. to 7:40 p. m., and from 11 p. m. to 11:45 p. m. The danger period is from 4 p. m. to 5:45 p. m.

Caution should be exercised on this date, as the signs indicate that it is not an auspicious time to travel, or to make changes. Do not forsake old friends for new ones, or you will rue the day. Beware of strangers.

The child born on this January 3 is energetic and very versatile. Although not gifted with a decided talent, it will be able to turn a hand to many things, and achieve success. It will gain through popularity and friendships.

You are an optimist—a happy being—for an optimist always manages to "reach a hand thro' time to catch the far-off interest of tears." You are never without hope, and that makes life worth living and lovable. The things hoped for, and not the things which you have, make you happy, for acquisition of things often brings disappointment and disillusionment. When your bubbles are shattered you do not give up in despair, for you still have faith that you can save the pieces or find new ideas. You are both a doer and a dreamer. Your dreams shed a glamour of romance over your life that extend the horizon of your existence.

You are naturally very neat and particular, and discord and untidiness grate upon you most unpleasantly. You are careful about money matters, without being stingy, and you never forget to prepare for your "rainy days." You usurp leadership quite unconsciously, simply by force of your independent ability and good nature. Hard work does not weary you, because you are cheerful and do not fret. You are wholesome and sweet and of a straightforward, upright nature. You are exceedingly tolerant-minded, forgiving and generous in all senses of the word. You are fond of children and animals and are of a loving nature, though not at all sentimental.

Successful people born January 3:

Lucretia Mott—Reformer.

James B. Doolittle—Senator, one of the founders of the Republican party.

Charles H. Hackley—Capitalist and philanthropist.

Henry Holt—Publisher.

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD

"Selfish Mothers."

"DEAR Miss McDonald: What is your opinion of a woman who insists on living with her son and daughter-in-law when she is unwanted?

"We have been married just a year and a half. I have been working over a year of that time to aid in buying a home, car and similar necessities and luxiries. Seven months ago my husband's father died. Since then we have had one string of woes. He lost his job and we lived for a time on my salary of $15 per week. Of course that ate up our bank account that was meant for our home. Then he found work, but at a very low salary. Now he is making $20 per week. Together we are managing to get back on our feet. We live in a three-room bungalow in the suburbs and found it, for a time, very satisfactory.

"But for the last six months his mother has been crying about his duty toward her. So now, after I have done everything I know of to prevent it, she is coming to live with us for the remainder of her life. That means this: The money, a few dollars a week, that I can manage to put in the bank will be used instead in paying our added expenses. I must keep on working indefinitely to pay expenses and prevent discord. Also it ruins all prospect of our having babies some day as I would never want to bring a helpless child into such an environment of nagging. And my husband and I both love home and babies intensely.

"The big rub is she can with a little influence enter a home of which she has often told me, and which really is a beautiful place, but she won't do it because she wants to stay with her son. So she brings up the point of a son's duty to his aged, widowed mother who can not work. And all I can see is disaster. Can you help? Or maybe some of the folks who read your splendid column?

"DISHEARTENED."

Your problem is the problem of thousands, for the self-centered woman can see nothing but her own wish. As a matter of fact the various homes for elderly people today are really just boarding houses where no one is young. But the idea still clings that it is a better and happier lot to ruin a son's life and be grudgingly fed at his table than to join a group of elderly people in a home maintained for the elderly. This opinion prevails most strongly among the ignorant so that these homes have memberships from the better class of old people.

One can understand how an old couple would suffer almost any privation rather than be separated after a lifetime together, but a widow has no excuse except selfishness when she forces her way into another woman's home, especially when that woman is helping to maintain the home. But that does not deter these selfish souls.

So much for the mother's side. Now for the wife's. Marriage exacts much of a woman, therefore woman should enter into that highly hazardous existence open-eyed. But the average girl instead gives no thought either to possible home-ties or inherited responsibilities on the part of the boy she decides will do as a husband. He may earn $30 a week and may have to help support his parents. The girl should know that in such circumstances, illness, death or any one of the daily calamities that make up life, would necessitate assistance or charity. If she knows it she disregards it, and marries despite it. Result? Discord when the expected happens. And in this case the expected happened.

The man who could refuse his destitute mother a home would be a terrible husband. However blameworthy the mother for demanding such sacrifice, there is no blame whatever attaching to the son who makes it.

He is doing only his duty in making his mother's last years on earth just as happy as it is in his power to make them. Any good man would suffer keenly knowing that his mother was unhappy and so his wife, if she loves him, must prove herself a wife in more than name and make the best of what destiny has written.

Few of us can choose our fate, but the girl who marries the only son of poor parents, and marries him when he can not even support a home, really chooses the almost certain fate of having a dependent in-law in her home. And the least she can do is make the best of the fate she chose, and sometimes it is not half the horror it at first seems. There are thousands of homes where grandma could ill be spared and where her place could never quite be filled.

So, don't be too "disheartened," until the page is written in full. Instead, carry on!

This column is for you! Your experiences, opinions and suggestions will help all who read this page. Express your views and help those in need of advice. You need not sign your name.

Silver Years

By Gertrude S. Trowbridge

"After the Golden Years of Youth, Come Those of Fine Silver"

Society in the time of Marcus Aurelius must have been far less agreeable than it is today, for he advises: "Begin the morning by saying to thyself, I shall meet with the busybody, the ungrateful, arrogant, deceitful, envious, unsocial. All these things happen to them by reason of their ignorance of what is good and evil. But I, who have seen the nature of the good that it is beautiful, and of the bad that it is ugly, * * * can neither be injured by any of them, for no one can fix on me what is ugly, nor can I be angry with my kinsman nor hate him. For we are made for cooperation, like feet, like hands, like eyelids, like the rows of the upper and lower teeth."

This last thought he expressed later more concisely: "What is not good for the swarm, is not good for the bee."

But, today if we meet people kindly and sincerely, how few prove to be really unpleasant! In fact, the glory and importance of most lives lie in the privilege of having known and loved many beautiful characters.

A very original idea of the significance of every meeting with our fellows is illustrated by that brilliant French writer, Pierre de Coulevain. We prefer her way of approach to that of Marcus Aurelius.

She compares each of us to a thread in the fabric of life which, as we move along, crosses over or under other lives in the weaving. These contacts make the quality and pattern of the stuff. If we are weak thread, where we meet another we take away strength at that point; if we are strong, we reinforce. If we trace back our thread through many years, marking each contact which we have had with others, we shall discover that what may have seemed a trivial meeting has turned our life in an entirely different direction and affected its whole course. So we should daily notice those whom we meet and realize that, having come together, there is bound to be some effect upon one or the other. Then we shall be more careful not to weaken the fabric or spoil the design made by the warp and woof.

The threads are of all colors; many dull, many brilliant. All are important. If some were lacking, the fabric would not hold together.

IN THE PLAYHOUSE

By JOHN J. DALY

JUST when everything was in order to have a real old-fashioned Ziegfeld week in Washington—along about January 20—word comes that the glorifier of the American girl has decided to cancel this date at the National. Originally it had been reserved for the premiere of "Simple Simon," a mammoth musical comedy now in rehearsal, with Ed Wynn, known far and wide as "The Perfect Fool." Just what is to be done about it, of course, is something for Mr. Stephen Cochran, manager of the National, to worry over, but the wires between New York and Washington burned last night and another attraction will be booked, so 'tis said. The idea is to have no more dark weeks from now 'til the close of the season.

* * * *

SO MUCH interest is taken in the theater—since Washington felt its absence during several idle weeks—that advance sales are about to break all records. Monday night, with William Gillette returning in his revival of "Sherlock Holmes," promises to be the outstanding event of the season—not a seat in the house unsold. After that there may be a chance for stragglers, but the seat sale for the remainder of the week is well above any advance allotments of the year. To prove that stars still have drawing power, people are even now writing in for tickets to "Papa Juan," Otis Skinner's play, due here the week of January 27.

* * * *

SHORTLY before Mr. Skinner comes to town, Poli's will have the privilege of playing Jane Cowl's new comedy, "Jenny." Always a drawing card, Miss Cowl is one of Washington's favorite actresses. So Mr. T. D. Bonneville, the energetic manager of Poli's, is getting ready for one of his big weeks. The play will open here on Monday night, January 13—less than two weeks away—and already the advance orders are rolling into the box office. On Monday night next Poli's will harbor the German Grand Opera Company, which gives the Avenue playhouse its start for the season. After that there are many attractive bookings and Mr. Bonneville hopes to be a busy man right up to the Easter holidays.

* * * *

"MUSTY" MILLER, manager of the play now at the National, "Trevelyn's Ghost," is an old-timer in the theater—as his name might imply. He won that nickname in the old ale days, so tradition has it. At any rate, "Musty" has been coming to Washington with plays since Harry Rapley was a young boy—and both of them, the owner of the National and the manager of the troupe, have been friends that long, and good friends, too. In any discussion of Washington as a show town Mr. Miller stands up for the Nation's Capital. He says: "Whenever we bring a good play to town Washington turns out en masse. The answer is, Washington knows what it wants." There, in a nutshell, is a worthy observation.

WHO'ZAT?

1. He was an Irishman.
2. He lived during the nineteenth century.
3. For many years he was the leader of the Irish Home Rule movement and in the interest of that movement he visited America and raised a large fund.
4. His loss of influence came about when he became the co-respondent in a notorious divorce suit, involving a woman whom he afterward married.

Answer to yesterday: Marshal Ney.

SCHOOLGIRLS NEED HEALTH

Daughter of Mrs. Catherine Lamuth
Box 72, Mohawk, Michigan

"After my daughter grew into womanhood she began to feel rundown and weak and a friend asked me to get her your medicine. She took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Herb Medicine. Her nerves are better, her appetite is good, she is in good spirits and able to work every day. We recommend the Vegetable Compound to other girls and to their mothers."—Mrs. Catherine Lamuth.

Daughter of Mrs. Eva Wood Howe
1006 South H. Street, Danville, Ill.

"I praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for what it has done for my fourteen-year-old daughter as well as for me. It has helped her growth and her nerves and she has a good appetite now and sleeps well. She has gone to school every day since beginning the medicine. I will continue to give it to her at regular intervals and will recommend it to other mothers who have daughters with similar troubles."—Mrs. Eva Wood Howe.

WINNIE WINKLE, THE BREADWINNER — Gentlemen, Be Seated

WELL, HOW DID YOU LIKE "THE LOVE MARCH"? ISN'T IT A SWELL PICTURE?
YES, THE PICTURE WAS FINE, BUT MY STARS, I'M NEARLY FALLIN' DOWN I'M SO TIRED OUT!
GOSH, YOU DON'T MEAN TO TELL ME YOU STOOD UP ALL THROUGH THAT MOVING PICTURE??
OH NO, WE HAD SEATS IN TH' THEATRE, BUT COMIN' HOME, TH' CAR WAS TERRIBLY CROWDED!
WEREN'T YOU ABLE TO GET A SEAT??
WELL, I GOT A SEAT ALL RIGHT —
--BUT POOR MAW HAD TO STAND ALL TH' WAY HOME!

STOCK PRICES LOSE DURING ERRATIC DAY

1930 Business News Proves Uncertain, Being Both Bright and Gloomy.

FOREIGN ISSUES SLUMP

New York, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The stock market stumbled into the New Year with considerable confusion today.

Share prices were bid upward rapidly in the first hour, sharply depressed during the afternoon, and rallied moderately in the final half hour. Closing quotations were irregularly lower, scores of leading issues showing net losses of 2 to 8 points. The market remained dominantly professional, the day's transfers falling short of 3,000,000 shares.

The flood of year-end forecasts and analysis by important bankers, economists and industrial leaders, while reiterating confidence in the stability of fundamental conditions, and faith in a comparatively early recovery in business and trade, were rather guarded, and inclined to conservatism. Commission house advices generally predicted higher prices before the close of the new year, but were largely noncommital as to the immediate market outlook. On the whole, New Year's brought little cheer to the full crowd.

U. S. Loans Gain $96,000,000.

Particularly unsettling developments came late in the day. Just before the close of the market, the Fox Film class A stockholders protective committee issued a statement asserting, "indications are that a receivership must be resorted to at once." After the close of the market, the weekly Federal Reserve brokers' loan compilation disclosed a gain of $96,000,000, the largest since late September.

Other business and corporate news was decidedly mixed. Sears-Roebuck reported an increase in December sales of 27.8 per cent over the previous December, and Montgomery Ward, a gain of 12.04 per cent, the latter falling considerably short of the average gain for previous months of the year. Freight-car loadings for the third week of December dropped 80,757 cars from the preceding week, despite higher shipments of coal resulting from cold weather. American Cigar and Continental Motors passed their common dividends, and a receiver was appointed for Submarine Boat. A favorable curtailment of crude oil production was reported for last week.

Call Money Holds at 6 Per Cent.

Monetary conditions largely reflected year-end conditions. Indication of a abrupt relaxation, such as is normally experienced in January, appeared in a reduction of 1/4 of 1 per cent in the rates on the shorter maturities of bankers' acceptances. Call money held at 6 per cent.

The increase in brokers' loans reflected in part the rally in stock prices in the last week of the year, but also was due to normal year-end money requirements. The Federal Reserve condition statement showed further liberation of credit through open-market operations, although rediscounting was curtailed and reserve position strengthened.

Erratic fluctuations in General Electric, which showed a net gain of 4 points in the morning, a loss of 5 1/2 in the afternoon and a net loss of 1 1/4 at the close, was typical of the action of leading shares. Fox Film A was a feature of the afternoon, dropping 5 points to a new low at 17 in heavy liquidation.

U. S. Steel sold up 2 3/4 points to 173 3/4, dropped to 166, and closed at 167 1/4, off 3/4. Stocks closing about 2 to 8 points lower included Allied Chemical, American Power & Light, American Tobacco B, Byers, Kraft Phenix, McCrory Stores, Pacific Lighting, Republic Steel, Macy, Sears Roebuck and Standard Gas.

Few Issues Rise 2 to 5 Points.

A few stocks closed substantially higher, including Air Reduction, General American Tank, Hershey Chocolate, Chesapeake & Ohio and United Aircraft, up about 3 to 5 points.

Commodities were irregular. Wheat futures lost 2 cents and more on bearish Government weather reports and reports of offerings from France and Russia. Corn sagged a half cent and more, reflecting large receipts and favorable weather. Cotton futures rallied 35 to 95 cents a bale on covering and light offerings.

Foreign exchanges slumped, sterling cables dropping 5-16 to $4.87 13-16, but these changes were not regarded as particularly significant, owing to the small volume of business. The first quarter is normally a period of strength in leading exchange rates.

BONDS RISE IN FIRST DAY'S SALES OF 1930

Utilities and Carriers Lead Advances; Trading Is Rather Light.

EUROPEAN ISSUES FIRM

New York, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The bond market began 1930 with a rise in prices. Gains averaged small and trading was light, but the advances proved to be fairly general, with the rails and utilities showing to the best advantage. Buying was selective in character and the highest grade loans got most of the attention.

Reinvestment demand is slow in asserting itself and the market does not expect to see an inflow from the large current dividend and interest payments for several days, but a much better sentiment was apparent in the day's dealings. Purchases were evidently being made in anticipation of easier money which would serve to lift bond prices.

Rails Lead in Gains.

Gains of a point or more in investment rails and utilities were numerous, and a few of the industrials participated in the upturn to a similar extent. Foreign loans were considerably stronger.

American Telephone 5½s, Armour & Co. 5½s and Real Estate 4½s, Atchison Refunding 4½s (California and Arizona division), Great Northern 4¼s, Missouri Pacific Refunding 5s, New York Central 3½s, Northern Pacific 5s, New York Telephone 6s and Virginian Railway 5s climbed at least a point during the day and most of the gains were held through the close.

Small Advances Numerous.

Smaller advances came out in a large number of issues. Declines were comparatively infrequent and most of them resulted from minor selling.

Liberty bonds and Treasury certificates moved irregularly, but there was little interest in the group.

Latin Americans took a prominent part in the foreign trading and Argentines, Chilean and Brazilian listings were generally higher, with gains averaging somewhat more than a point. European government obligations were steady.

DISCOUNTED BILLS DROP $130,400,000

$97,000 Surplus Increase Is Made by Richmond Reserve Bank.

NEW BROKERS' OFFICE

A decrease of $130,400,000 in holdings of discounted bills and an increase of $37,300,000 in holdings of bills bought in the open market, as compared with the previous week, is shown in the consolidated statement of condition of the Federal Reserve Banks on December 31, made public by the Federal Reserve Board yesterday. The total of bills and securities was $1,547,517,000, or $65,020,000 below the amount reported on December 24.

Federal Reserve note circulation totaled $1,909,723,000, or $79,400,000 below the amount reported a week ago, with all of the reserve banks reporting decreases. Total reserves increased $60,182,000 to $3,010,928,000, and deposits increased $38,464,000 to $2,413,675,000, of which $2,355,263,000 was members' reserve, an increase of $35,145,000.

Following the closing of the books on December 31, the Federal Reserve Banks transferred $22,538,000 to surplus, increasing that account to $276,936,000. The Richmond Federal Reserve Bank, representing the Fifth District, in which district Washington is located, increased its surplus $97,000, bringing the total up to $12,496,000.

Fifth Reserve District Data.

The Richmond Federal Reserve Bank reported decreases in both discounted bills and bills bought in the open market. Discounted bills totaled $38,939,000, or a decrease of $1,901,000; and bills in the open market, $13,336,000, or a decline of $1,612,000. Total bills and securities were reduced $2,757,000 to $61,834,000, and total deposits amounted to $67,309,000, or a decrease of $2,644,000 during the week.

Loans on securities to brokers and dealers reported to the Federal Reserve Board here yesterday by the New York banks totaled $3,424,000,000, or an increase of $96,000,000 during the week, but a decrease of $1,906,000,000 compared with the corresponding week last year. Of the loan total, $2,981,000,000 were on demand and $443,000,000 on time.

Loans "for own account" were reported at $1,167,000,000, an increase of $322,000,000, while loans "for others" decreased $219,000,000 to $1,548,000,000 and those "for account of out-of-town banks" declined $7,000,000 to a total of $709,000,000.

A Washington office is to be established shortly by Hemphill, Noyes & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange, and one of the largest and most widely known investment houses in the country, with offices in the New Shoreham Building. Awaiting completion of its new offices, Hemphill, Noyes & Co. are temporarily located in the Securities Building. It is expected that the firm will occupy their new quarters about January 20.

Has Large Wire System.

The company, in addition to its regular stock exchange business, participates and originates a large volume of investment securities, and has one of the largest private-wire systems in the country.

The Washington office will be under the management of Thomas J. Mangan, jr. and Nevius P. Gardner. Mr. Mangan, until recently, was associated as comanager of the Washington office of Halsey, Stuart & Co., and is widely known in tennis circles, having been champion of the District at various times. After serving in the World War, Mr. Mangan attended Georgetown University and has been a resident of Washington for the last twelve years. Mr. Gardner, who is a native Washingtonian, attended Lafayette College and for the past several years was associated with the National American Co., of New York.

Thomas P. Bones, jr., formerly with J. & W. Seligman & Co., has taken a position with the local office and announcement will be made later as to other members of the personnel. The Philadelphia office of Hemphill, Noyes & Co. is under the management of Arthur Guy, a former resident of Washington.

New Stein Bros. & Boyce Member.

Edward W. Gamble, jr., who has been associated for a number of years in an executive capacity with the New York and Washington offices of J. & W. Seligman & Co., has accepted an appointment as Washington and general Southern representative for Stein Bros. & Boyce, members of the New York Stock Exchange. He will take up his new duties this morning at the Washington headquarters in the Woodward Building.

Mr. Gamble is a member of a distinguished Virginia family and is a graduate of the University of Virginia. His first banking experiences were attained ten years ago as a representative in Virginia for Redmond & Co. Subsequently, he accepted an offer from J. & W. Seligman & Co. and was detailed for several years to the Washington offices of that firm. He left this city to take charge of an important banking department in the Seligman New York offices, where he has remained until his selection by Stein Bros. & Boyce as their chief of Southern activities, with headquarters in this city.

Arrangements are now being completed by Stein Bros. & Boyce for new and decidedly more commodious ground floor offices in the Washington financial center, in which the most up-to-the-minute investment banking and stock exchange facilities will be installed. Mr. Gamble has a host of friends in this city, as well as throughout the South, and will have associated with him in Washington a large staff of assistants thoroughly familiar with local financial conditions as well as the technical details of the brokerage and banking business, the firm announces.

District Exchange Data.

Small block trading characterized activity on the Washington Stock Exchange yesterday, with 87 shares changing hands in 17 transactions on the first trading day of the new year. In the bond division, $4,200 was the total of four sales, of which $3,000 was in Washington Railway & Electric 4s at 82½, a gain of one-half point. Washington Gas 5s sold in a $1,000 lot at 100, and the same company's 6s, series A, in a $200 lot at 100½.

Stock trading was distributed among nine issues, with Potomac Electric and Washington Railway & Electric most active. The latter's preferred sold in 2, 3 and 10 share blocks at 94, and in a 2-share block at 94¼. Potomac Electric 6 per cent preferred gained one-half point in a 5-share sale at 111, and after call dropped back to 110½ in 3 and 5 share blocks. Potomac Electric 5½ per cent preferred sold in a 2 and 10 share blocks at 105.

Lanston Monotype recorded a 3-point gain in the sale of 5 shares at 118, and other transactions included 5 shares of Riggs National Bank at 580, 5 shares of Mergenthaler Linotype at 106, 18 shares of Peoples Drug Stores at 103½ and 104, 10 shares of Merchants Transfer & Storage common at 118, and 5 shares of National Savings & Trust at 520.

H. S. Broasard, manager of the Washington office of the Investors Syndicate, of Minneapolis, will leave this city tomorrow to attend the annual convention of the organization in Minneapolis. As a result of large sales made through the office here, Mr. Broasard was one of a number of district sales managers who were awarded expenses to the convention.

MICHIGAN BARS SHIRES AFTER FOE MAKES CHARGE

REVENGE TAKES BEATING FROM DISCRETION

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Notwithstanding the implied threat of the Hon. Francis Xavier McQuade, the New York police magistrate, to go into court and squawk the unrevealed details of the scandal of the Good-Natured Kidders of 1924, it seems unlikely that the distinguished jurist will let his vengeful desires conquer his discretion.

The Hon. McQuade would seem to be in possession of interesting facts regarding the attempt to bribe an opposing ball player not to bear down against the Giants during the days when they were on the point of winning their last pennant to date. But if he should make use of this information now in the case at issue, it would look as though he were revealing the truth not so much for love of the truth and a high standard of sportsmanship as to win a lawsuit and some money. Inasmuch as he was the treasurer of the Giants' baseball firm at the time of the Kidding Around in the Giants' clubhouse, it is quite likely that he had as much information in those days as he has at the present time.

O'Connell, Meanwhile, Is the Goat.

If that is the case and if his private information is such as would bear out the story of the unfortunate goat, Jimmy O'Connell, it would be interesting to know why the judge happened to withhold his knowledge and permit O'Connell to suffer the full blame. That is, O'Connell suffered the official blame, including disbarment from the baseball business, which was the only business in which he had any future, although the public had other ideas about the instigation of the plot.

Judge K. M. Landis, who signed the writ of banishment against O'Connell, very frankly said that the investigation had not been closed and probably would never be closed, and from this suggestive remark of the baseball commissioner it was possible to infer that he thought there were others in the conspiracy who had not been found guilty with O'Connell merely because of a lack of evidence.

As a baseball magnate at the time, Judge McQuade might have served the interests of sportsmanship, chivalry and fair play, which are the first motives of all baseball magnates, by addressing the same questions to John McGraw, the manager of the team which he now purposes to address to Mr. McGraw in his civil suit for money alleged to be due him.

Would Force Landis To Reopen Probe.

Of course, if the Hon. McQuade should persist in asking McGraw to explain the scandal of the Good-natured Kidders directing the examination with a private knowledge of unrevealed facts, Judge Landis, as baseball commissioner, in consistency would have to reopen his own investigation and apply to the situation all further information thus obtained. This would be a delicate task for one pledged to deal alike with magnates and employed athletes, because it is a comparatively simple thing to boycott a ball player, but quite another matter to impose corresponding discipline on a stockholder.

Magistrate McQuade insinuates that Mr. McGraw has not told all he knows. Under the high standard of ethics required of the baseball player it is possible to boycott an athlete merely because at some time in his youth he has been convicted of stealing a peanut off a pushcart. But out

Infield Puzzle Confronts Shawkey

Gehrig Only Fixture in Inner Cordon of Yankees.

New Manager Given 35 Players to Fit Into Machine.

Note—This is the first of a series of stories dealing with major league baseball prospects for 1930.

By BRIAN BELL.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The New York Yankees will give Bob Shawkey, the new manager, 35 players next month and ask him to fit the baseball puzzle picture together. There are enough players of known worth in the assortment to make the former world champions contenders again if Bob the Gob can strike the right combination.

His first problem will be arrangement of the infield. Only Lou Gehrig is established. He will play first base, as usual. Tony Lazzeri is a certainty in the line of first defense, but whether he will again take care of second remains to be seen. He may be needed elsewhere. Mark Koenig has shown that he is a better shortstop than third baseman, so he probably will return to his former love. A general scramble may result between Lyn Lary, Jimmy Reese, Lary's former teammate, Ben Chapman, a great hitter, and the talkative Leo Durocher for the one place likely to be open. Not even Shawkey, however, knows what that vacant place will be.

Cooke in Line for Meusel's Post.

Two-thirds of the outfield will be back, the rejuvenated Babe Ruth and Earle Combs. Allan (Dusty) Cooke, great prospect from St. Paul, has been tentatively accorded Bob Meusel's former post more or less by acclamation, but Sam Byrd, ballplayer and golfer extraordinary, will ask that his vote be recorded in the negative. There are only five outfielders available. Cedric Durst being the fifth, and all will be retained.

One of the older school of recruits, Eugene (Bubbles) Hargrave, with ten years in the National League behind him, will bolster the catching staff after a year as manager of St. Paul in the American Association. Dickey, a fine newcomer, Bengough and Jorgens of last year's club and Bill John Karlon, drafted from Springfield, Mass., complete the receiving staff.

Manager Shawkey, who was a great pitcher in his day, will have a crop of 17 pitchers, prospects and near-pitchers from which to choose his staff. Hoyt, Pipgras, Zachary, Heimach, Wells, Pennock, Sherid and Johnson are veterans, although the last two are young in years.

Coast Leaguers Have Best Records.

Among the recruits with the best records are Vernon Gomez, from the San Francisco club, and Louis McEvoy, from Oakland, of the Pacific

2 Army Players Lost 15 Pounds in Defeat

Certain members of the West Point Football Team lost from 10 to 15 pounds during the recent game with Stanford at Palo Alto, Calif., F. A. Wandle, trainer of the team was quoted yesterday in an Associated Press dispatch.

Murrell, star full back and Perry, end, lost 15 pounds each, said Wandle. Maxwell reduced 4 pounds sitting on the bench under the California sun. The players weighed before and after the game.

Regarding the 34-to-13 defeat of Army, Coach "Biff" Jones, stopping off at Kansas City on his way back to West Point, had little to say. "Superior reserve material of Stanford and inadequate preparation of our team were responsible for the defeat," Jones said.

MILLS TO BE DIRECTOR AT HILLTOP

New Football Coach to Be in Charge of Sports at G. U.

Special to The Washington Post.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Jan. 2.—Thomas E. Mills, Georgetown University's new head football coach, will act as director of athletics in addition to coaching the gridiron team at the Hilltop, he stated at his home here upon returning from New York City, where his appointment was announced.

During his first year at Georgetown he will not coach other sports than football, his contract not calling for such work, Mills also said. It had been thought likely that he would take over the coaching of the Georgetown Baseball Team, as he has served as Notre Dame's head baseball mentor since 1926. Georgetown has no baseball coach at present, Bucky O'Neill having resigned last June. Mills has also coached boxing and wrestling at Notre Dame and is a member of the National Boxing Commission.

Mills said that he will leave here with his wife about February 1 to take over the duties of his new office and that he will call out the football players for spring training shortly thereafter.

Was Successful as Baseball Coach.

During his career at Notre Dame, Mills has done considerable traveling in the role of football scout and he has become well known in the Middle West and the East. He is well liked and is regarded as an authority on the sports in which he has coached. He has rendered valuable service to the Irish in baseball, boxing and wrestling, as well as in football.

As a baseball mentor, Mills achieved notable success. In 1927 his team won 15 games and lost 6, while the 1928 edition was victorious in 24 out of 32 games. Last spring the Irish diamonders won 19, lost 11 and tied 1. His boxing and wrestling teams also were successful.

Guy Bush, Cubs' Hero, Signs for Two Seasons

Chicago, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Guy Bush, Right-handed pitcher, who scored the Cubs' only victory over the Athletics in the last world series, today signed a two-year contract with the National League champions. The salary involved was not revealed, but was said to represent a substantial increase.

Tigers and Toronto Exchange Batteries

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The Free Press will say tomorrow that Haskell "Josh" Billings, pitcher, and Eddie Phillips, cather, have been or will be released by the Tigers to the Toronto Club of the International League.

In exchange, the paper will say, Joe Samuels, pitcher, and George Rensa, catcher, will come to the Detroit Club. Billings came to professional baseball from Brown University.

Pompano Citizens Plan To Open Meet Saturday

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Residents of Pompano announced today that all necessary funds to conduct a racing meet at the horse track there had been raised and that nothing but an injunction could stop the meeting, which is scheduled to start Saturday.

There are 150 horses at the track, the announcement said, and all preparations have been made for the racing.

The new organization promoting the meeting is composed of C. L. Brown, president, Pompano member of the Broward County School Board; Roland Hardy, chairman of the Broward County Democratic executive committee; E. D. Lindfors, treasurer of the City of Pompano.

The inaugural Saturday will be seven races, starting at 2:30 p. m.

Cubs Free Gonzales, 14 Years in Majors

Chicago, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Mike Gonzales, veteran Cuban catcher of the Cubs, today was given his unconditional release.

Gonzales, one of the first of Cuba's contributions to the major leagues, broke into big time in 1914 when he joined the Cincinnati Reds. Subsequently he backstopped for the St. Louis Cardinals, New York Giants and the Cubs. In all he served fourteen seasons in the majors, coming back after serving two years with St. Paul of the American Association Club. He came to Chicago in 1925.

The veteran Cuban did most of the catching for the Cubs last season when Leo "Gabby" Hartnett's arm went limp. Hartnett's arm was reported in good shape again.

Because he has served 10 years and more in the majors, Gonzales automatically becomes a free agent.

Elis Beat G. U. Five, 26-23, In Finals

Yale Rallies Near End and "Freezes" Ball to Hold Lead.

Scores Tied 6 Times in Finals of Annual Yale Tourney.

Special to The Washington Post.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 2.—Georgetown and Yale two basketball teams that Elmer Ripley built, clashed here tonight for the championship of the annual Yale Tournament. Yale, which the famous coach took charge of this season, won by the score of 26 to 23, but only after the former Georgetown proteges of Ripley put up dogged opposition.

An old trick known to professional basket ball, in which Ripley starred for nearly twenty years, was used by Yale to clinch the verdict. The Elis, sorely pressed by the fighting Hilltoppers in the waning moments, "froze" the ball, thereby protecting its meager lead and preventing Georgetown at the same time from getting possession of the sphere.

After the score had been tied six times, with Georgetown holding a slight lead most of the time, Horwitz, Yale's hero tonight, put the Blue in the van with a successful toss from the foul line. A minute later Yale went into a 3-point lead as Linehan heaved a goal from mid-floor, and during the ensuing eight minutes before the final whistle Georgetown strove desperately but vainly to regain the lead with the Elis alternately freezing the ball under Georgetown's basket and breaking down the floor to snipe at their own.

Captain McCarthy Reduces Lead.

As the last minute began Capt. McCarthy cleverly intercepted a Yale pass and dropped in a 2-pointer to bring Georgetown to within 1 point of a tie, but the Hilltop's hopes had hardly gained breath before Horwitz placed Yale out of danger with a long dribble and score.

Georgetown led, 13 to 12, at the close of the first half, thanks to a marathon toss by Freddy Mesmer with 20 seconds to go. The score was tied four times in this period. Yale gained the front for the only time on a goal by Albie Booth, the football star, who performed cleverly at forward.

At the start of the second half Capt. Nanry caged a two-pointer to send Yale ahead, 14 to 13, and then McCarthy duplicated for Georgetown. Dutton's two foul tosses and Shea's fielder jumped the Washington score to 19 and it began to look pretty for Georgetown. At this juncture a Yale substitute, McGowan, entered the proceedings and forthwith collected three points which featured the Blue's rally that tied the score at 19-all.

Then Dutton and Mesmer sank free throws, giving the visitors the lead for the last time. Horwitz inserted two of his timely goals following this and until the finish Yale kept ahead.

The result made Georgetown runner-up in the Yale tournament for the second successive year. Last winter the Hilltoppers lost to New York University in the final. They avenged that defeat Wednesday night by eliminating the Violets in the opening round, winning by 31 to 27. In the consolation game tonight N. Y. U. swamped Holy Cross, 40 to 21.

Wallace's Purse Held After He Quits Fight

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The purse of Billy Wallace, lightweight, who lost to King Tut, of Minneapolis, in a bout here New Year's Day, was ordered withheld today by the State Boxing Commission pending a hearing of claims the Philadelphian could have continued instead of quitting at the end of the eighth round because of injuries.

Tut was declared winner by a technical knockout at the beginning of the eighth round when Wallace failed to respond to the bell, claiming his back had been injured in a fall through the ropes.

The boxing commission is to hear testimony of doctors who examined Wallace, to determine the extent of his injuries. It will also hear charges that Wallace held too much and failed to heed the referee's warnings.

Giants Book Chisox For 16 Spring Games

New York, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The New York Giants today announced an exhibition game schedule of 23 games, opening March 6 and closing April 14. Two dates are open and the number of practice tilts will be increased to 25. Sixteen games will be played with the Chicago White Sox. The Sox and Giants train at San Antonio, Tex.

Two games will be played with the Cleveland Indians, the only major league opposition other than the White Sox thus far booked. Only two minor league clubs appear on the schedule, Memphis, of the Southern Association, and Shreveport, of the Texas League. The exhibition season will be started and closed by college teams, the University of Texas and the Army.

Pitchers and catchers will report at San Antonio February 15 with the outfielders and infielders following two weeks later.

The schedule:

March 6—University of Texas, at Austin; 8-9, White Sox, at Houston; 13, 14, 15, 16, 28, White Sox, at San Antonio; 29, White Sox, at Fort Worth; 30, White Sox, at Dallas; 31, Shreveport, at Shreveport, La.

April 1-2, Cleveland, at New Orleans; 3-6, Memphis, at Memphis, Tenn; 7, White Sox, at Evansville, Ind.; 8, White Sox, at Terre Haute; 9, White Sox, at Indianapolis; 10, White Sox, at Fort Wayne; 11, White Sox, at Fort Worth; 12-13, White Sox, at Chicago; 14, Army, at West Point.

Pride of Magnates as Traders Proves Barrier to Many Major Player Deals

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

FANS often wonder why there is not more trading of players among major league clubs. Frequently conditions exist which make a player-shift the logical move, but the clubs invariably stand pat. One would think that a club weak in one department, but having surplus talent in another, would seek another outfit similarly fixed, only with the weakness and strength transposed, and make a deal, while there always are cases where players have outlived their usefulness and shifts of players of this type might benefit all involved.

But few deals are made, and it is not difficult to figure out the reason. It is simply a case of what might be called personal pride on the part of the magnates—each is afraid he might get the worst of the deal and become a laughing stock in the eyes of "his public" and the other magnates. It is this fear which prevents trades. It causes a club owner to broadcast to the world before attending a major league meeting, for instance, where all of the other owners have gathered, that he has this or that player on the market and is looking for some talent to bolster up a certain department of his team and then to come back empty-handed.

Joe Doaks for Babe Ruth Has No Appeal.

As soon as he reaches the trading grounds he usually demands Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and some cash for a broken-down pitcher and then comes home shaking his head and telling how he was unable to do any business due to the unreasonableness of the other fellow, who went there with the same idea—that of getting a whole lot for a very little, or less.

Baseball trading could be made profitable if the magnates were willing to stop looking for suckers and to take a chance on what looked to be somewhere near an even swap. Fans always are interested in seeing new faces, and clubs frequently have players they can not use but who would fit in nicely in some other combination.

Washington's last trade—the biggest of the 1928-1929 off-season—apparently helped both the Nationals and the Boston Red Sox. It was a five-for-one deal, giving the Nationals Buddy Myer in exchange for Pitchers Milton Gaston and Horace Lisenbee, Infielders Bob Reeves and Grant Gillis and Outfielder Elliott Bigelow.

Myer Was Tonic Nats Needed.

The Nats figured that, with Myer on third, their infield problem, then in quite an unsettled state, would be solved. While giving up more than half a team of players, none appeared to fit here. Reeves had been tried and found wanting and so had Gillis, while Lisenbee and Gaston had been almost useless in the box during the 1928 season. Bigelow was reputed as being a heavy-hitting but slow outfielder with a poor throwing arm, but had never reported here after having been bought from Birmingham.

Even though Myer proved a failure at third, he was played regularly—being shifted to second late in the season and developing into a prospect there. He hit .301 and did his share in helping the Nats win a game now and then.

From a Boston viewpoint, Reeves was the player on which the Sox counted most and he, like Myer, did not do the expected. He worked regularly at third and improved in fielding and throwing, but was unable to hit better than .248. Gaston, however, did some real pitching on occasions and his work was better than his record of twelve victories and nineteen defeats would indicate. The others did not help Carrigan much. Bigelow had spells of hitting and ended with an average of .283. His fielding and pegging were so poor, however, that he is now with Joe Engel's Chattanooga Lookouts. Gillis was used in but 28 games, hitting only .247, while Lisenbee was a bloomer from the start of the season and finally ended up somewhere in the Eastern League.

Here is one case in which both teams benefited from a trade and there are unlimited possibilities for many more of the same kind if the club owners would not demand a "locked bet" for fear of hurting their prestige as "David Harums" and would be willing to give the other fellow a chance.

Golf Army Pursues Golden Trail in California, Florida

LONG BEACH, Calif., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Campaigners of the Pacific Coast winter golf tournaments today renewed their quest for gold and fame by testing out the Municipal Course where tomorrow they will enter the annual Long Beach $3,500 open. More than 250 of the nation's leading professional and amateur stars of the links are expected.

Stars of the links are expected to appear in the opening two days of qualifying rounds, which will allow the low 64 scorers and ties to appear in the final 36-hole round Sunday.

Horton Smith, enterprising Joplin, Mo., pro whose record this season consists of three championships and a tie for second, is a slight favorite to displace Water Hagen, last year's winner.

While the great Haig and Leo Diegel, Professional Golfers Association championship are included in the entry list, it is still a question of whether a motion picture assignment will permit them to take part in the event. MacDonald Smith, Long Islander, who in the last two years has captured the annual Los Angeles $10,000 open, also is entered, but whether he will be able to appear is still in doubt.

The Beach tournament will be considered a sort of preparatory round in anticipation of the two big money tourneys, the Los Angeles open beginning January 8, and the Agua Caliente $25,000 open January 14.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The annual Miami open tournament will officially usher in the 1930 Florida golf season Saturday.

Gene Sarazen, twice winner of the event, will defend his crown against the largest entry list in the history of the tournament.

Prizes totaling $3,000 will be split among the leading scorers.

Tilden Wins; Faces Borotra in Finals

Paris, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Bill Tilden defeated Christian Boussus, young French southpaw, in the semifinals of the French international covered court tennis championships today by scores of 6—8, 6—2, 8—6. He will meet his old rival, Jean Borotra, the bounding Basque, in the final on Saturday.

Cavanaugh to Remain Coach at Fordham U.

New York, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Fordham University tonight announced the reengagement of Maj. Frank W. Cavanaugh as head football coach for the 1930 season.

The "Iron Major," who turned out an undefeated eleven at Fordham in 1929, said two months ago he did not expect to renew his contract, but university officials said today they had no difficulty arranging terms for a new one-year agreement.

Cavanaugh has served at Fordham for three seasons and before that turned out winning teams at Boston College and Dartmouth.

Only two members of the 1929 Fordham team will be graduated in June. Cavanaugh will have a formidable array of veterans headed by Tony Siano, reelected captain, with which to tackle a schedule listing seven major games in succession.

Fighter Asked To "Take a Dive"

Manager of 'Battling Criss' Says He Was Propositioned.

Bout Called Off by Shires on Excuse of Illness.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The Michigan State Boxing Commission, which from the first has never looked with a kindly eye upon the pugilistic activities of Art Shires, late today suspended the White Sox first baseman from Michigan rings.

The action was taken after the commission had been told by the manager of "Battling" Criss, a sand well shoveler from Rockwood, Mich., that a proposition had been made for Criss to "take a dive" in a scheduled four-round preliminary last night.

Chairman James Brown, of the commission, who announced the suspension, declined to reveal the identity of persons said to have approached the manager, Bandes Gildersleeve, with the proposition nearly a week ago.

Brown said he had advised promoters in other Michigan cities of the ruling and that a recommendation will be made to the National Boxing Association that Shires be barred in other States controlled by that body.

Shires Was Ill, is Announcement.

The Shires-Criss bout was called off yesterday morning with the announcement that Shires was ill in his hotel room, suffering with a cold. The baseball pugilist was examined by a physician who reported him unable to fight.

The commission then ruled that when he was able to go into the ring Shires must meet Criss before any other opponent. Previously the official body had taken an interest in Art's affairs by refusing to let a promoter match him in a main bout. The featherweight fight for which Shires was to have been a preliminary also was called off when Shires was reported ill.

Final disposition of the case will be made January 9, at Lansing, Brown said.

Landis Disdains Comment.

Chicago, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Kenesaw M. Landis, commissioner of baseball, tonight refused to comment on the possible effect on the standing in organized baseball of Charles Arthur (the Great) Shires, by the latter's suspension today by the Michigan State Boxing Commission. Shires was suspended on a charge that his handler had approached a proposed opponent in a Detroit ring with a proposition to "take a dive" for the baseball player-fighter.

"I have not learned all the facts," Mr. Landis said, "and I never comment upon questions concerning which I do not have all the information available."

Matches Tonight Open 3-Cushion Cue Tourney

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, Jan. 2.—Play for the world's three-cushion championship will open tomorrow night at the Palm Garden with two games on the schedule. This will be the first title billiard competition in three-cushions in more than a year. Eight of the greatest players in the game have been named to compete. The only player missing is Willie Hoppe and the veteran withdrew a short time ago when he failed to come to terms on a contract with the National Billiard Association of America, sponsors of the tournament.

The draw for the opening games follows:

First game—Johnny Layton, defending champion, vs. Harry Schuler, of Brooklyn, Eastern sectional representative. Second game—Otto Reiselt, of Philadelphia, former champion, vs. Charles E. Jordan, of Los Angeles, winner of the Western sectional tournament.

The other players who will be seen in the championship are Gus Copulos, of Detroit; Tiff Denton, of Kansas City; Allen Hall, of Chicago, and Augie Kiekhefer, of Chicago. Albert G. Cutler, of New York, will referee. All games will be at 50 points. The schedule calls for 28 games.

DISCOUNTED BILLS DROP $130,400,000

$97,000 Surplus Increase Is Made by Richmond Reserve Bank.

NEW BROKERS' OFFICE

A decrease of $130,400,000 in holdings of discounted bills and an increase of $37,300,000 in holdings of bills bought in the open market, as compared with the previous week, is shown in the consolidated statement of condition of the Federal Reserve Banks on December 31, made public by the Federal Reserve Board yesterday. The total of bills and securities was $1,547,517,000, or $65,020,000 below the amount reported on December 24.

Federal Reserve note circulation totaled $1,909,723,000, or $79,400,000 below the amount reported a week ago, with all of the reserve banks reporting decreases. Total reserves increased $60,182,000 to $3,010,928,000, and deposits increased $38,464,000 to $2,413,675,000, of which $2,355,263,000 was members' reserve, an increase of $35,145,000.

Following the closing of the books on December 31, the Federal Reserve Banks transferred $22,538,000 to surplus, increasing that account to $276,936,000. The Richmond Federal Reserve Bank, representing the Fifth District, in which district Washington is located, increased its surplus $97,000, bringing the total up to $12,496,000.

Fifth Reserve District Data.

The Richmond Federal Reserve Bank reported decreases in both discounted bills and bills bought in the open market. Discounted bills totaled $38,939,000, or a decrease of $1,901,000; and bills in the open market, $13,336,000, or a decline of $1,612,000. Total bills and securities were reduced $2,757,000 to $61,834,000, and total deposits amounted to $67,309,000, or a decrease of $2,644,000 during the week.

Loans on securities to brokers and dealers reported to the Federal Reserve Board here yesterday by the New York banks totaled $3,424,000,000, or an increase of $96,000,000 during the week, but a decrease of $1,908,000,000 compared with the corresponding week last year. Of the loan total, $2,981,000,000 were on demand and $443,000,000 on time.

Loans "for own account" were reported at $1,167,000,000, an increase of $322,000,000, while loans "for others" decreased $219,000,000 to $1,548,000,000 and those "for account of out-of-town banks" declined $7,000,000 to a total of $709,000,000.

A Washington office is to be established shortly by Hemphill, Noyes & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange, and one of the largest and most widely known investment houses in the country, with offices in the new Shoreham Building. Awaiting completion of its new offices, Hemphill, Noyes & Co. are temporarily located in the Securities Building. It is expected that the firm will occupy their new quarters about January 20.

Has Large Wire System.

The company, in addition to its regular stock exchange business, participates and originates a large volume of investment securities, and has one of the largest private-wire systems in the country.

The Washington office will be under the management of Thomas J. Mangan, jr. and Nevius P. Gardner, Mr. Mangan, until recently, was associated as comanager of the Washington office of Halsey, Stuart & Co., and is widely known in tennis circles, having been champion of the District at various times. After serving in the World War, Mr. Mangan attended Georgetown University and has been a resident of Washington for the last twelve years. Mr. Gardner, who is a native Washingtonian, attended Lafayette College and for the past several years was associated with the National American Co., of New York.

Thomas P. Bones, jr., formerly with J. & W. Seligman & Co., has taken a position with the local office and announcement will be made later as to other members of the personnel. The Philadelphia office of Hemphill, Noyes & Co. is under the management of Arthur Guy, a former resident of Washington.

New Stein Bros. & Boyce Member.

Edward W. Gamble, jr., who has been associated for a number of years in an executive capacity with the New York and Washington offices of J. & W. Seligman & Co., has accepted an appointment as Washington and general Southern representative for Stein Bros. & Boyce, members of the New York Stock Exchange. He will take up his new duties this morning at the Washington headquarters in the Woodward Building.

Mr. Gamble is a member of a distinguished Virginia family and is a graduate of the University of Virginia. His first banking experiences were attained ten years ago as a representative in Virginia for Redmond & Co. Subsequently, he accepted an offer from J. & W. Seligman & Co. and was detailed for several years to the Washington offices of that firm. He left this city to take charge of an important banking department in the Seligman New York offices, where he has remained until his selection by Stein Bros. & Boyce as their chief of Southern activities, with headquarters in this city.

Arrangements are now being completed by Stein Bros. & Boyce for new and decidedly more commodious ground floor offices in the Washington financial center, in which the most up-to-the-minute investment banking and stock exchange facilities will be installed. Mr. Gamble has a host of friends in this city, as well as throughout the South, and will have associated with him in Washington a large staff of assistants thoroughly familiar with local financial conditions as well as the technical details of the brokerage and banking business, the firm announces.

District Exchange Data.

Small block trading characterized activity on the Washington Stock Exchange yesterday, with 87 shares changing hands in 17 transactions on the first trading day of the new year. In the bond division, $4,200 was the total of four sales, of which $3,000 was in Washington Railway & Electric 4s at 82½, a gain of one-half point. Washington Gas 5s sold in a $1,000 lot at 100, and the same company's 6s, series A, in a $200 lot at 100½.—

Stock trading was distributed among nine issues, with Potomac Electric and Washington Railway & Electric most active. The latter's preferred sold in 2, 3 and 10 share blocks at 94, and in a 2-share block at 94¼. Potomac Electric 6 per cent preferred gained one-half point in a 5-share sale at 111, and after call dropped back to 110½ in 3 and 5 share blocks. Potomac Electric 5½ per cent preferred sold in a 2 and 10 share blocks at 105.

Lanston Monotype recorded a 3-point gain in the sale of 5 shares at 113, and other transactions included 3 shares of Riggs National Bank at 530, 5 shares of Mergenthaler Linotype at 106, 13 shares of Peoples Drug Stores at 103½ and 104, 10 shares of Merchants Transfer & Storage common at 118, and 5 shares of National Savings & Trust at 320.

H. S. Brossard, manager of the Washington office of the Investors Syndicate, of Minneapolis, will leave this city tomorrow to attend the annual convention of the organization in Minneapolis. As a result of large sales made through the office here, Mr. Brossard was one of a number of district sales managers who were awarded expenses to the convention.

MICHIGAN BARS SHIRES AFTER FOE MAKES CHARGE

REVENGE TAKES BEATING FROM DISCRETION

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Notwithstanding the implied threat of the Hon. Francis Xavier McQuade, the New York police magistrate, to go into court and squawk the unrevealed details of the scandal of the Good-Natured Kidders of 1924, it seems unlikely that the distinguished jurist will let his vengeful desires conquer his discretion.

The Hon. McQuade would seem to be in possession of interesting facts regarding the attempt to bribe an opposing ball player not to bear down against the Giants during the days when they were on the point of winning their last pennant to date. But if he should make use of this information now in the case at issue, it would look as though he were revealing the truth not so much for love of the truth and a high standard of sportsmanship as to win a lawsuit and some money. Inasmuch as he was the treasurer of the Giants' baseball firm at the time of the Kidding Around in the Giants' clubhouse, it is quite likely that he had as much information in those days as he has at the present time.

O'Connell, Meanwhile, Is the Goat.

If that is the case and if his private information is such as would bear out the story of the unfortunate goat, Jimmy O'Connell, it would be interesting to know why the judge happened to withhold his knowledge and permit O'Connell to suffer the full blame. That is, O'Connell suffered the official blame, including disbarment from the baseball business, which was the only business in which he had any future, although the public had other ideas about the instigation of the plot.

Judge K. M. Landis, who signed the writ of banishment against O'Connell, very frankly said that the investigation had not been closed and probably would never be closed, and from this suggestive remark of the baseball commissioner it was possible to infer that he thought there were others in the conspiracy who had not been found guilty with O'Connell merely because of a lack of evidence.

As a baseball magnate at the time, Judge McQuade might have served the interests of sportsmanship, chivalry and fair play, which are the first motives of all baseball magnates, by addressing the same questions to John McGraw, the manager of the team which he now purposes to address to Mr. McGraw in his civil suit for money alleged to be due him.

Would Force Landis To Reopen Probe.

Of course, if the Hon. McQuade should persist in asking McGraw to explain the scandal of the Good-natured Kidders directing the examination with a private knowledge of unrevealed facts, Judge Landis, as Baseball commissioner, in consistency would have to reopen his own investigation and apply to the situation all further information thus obtained. This would be a delicate task for one pledged to deal alike with magnates and employed athletes, because it is a comparatively simple thing to boycott a ball player, but quite another matter to impose corresponding discipline on a stockholder.

Magistrate McQuade insinuates that Mr. McGraw has not told all he knows. Under the high standard of ethics required of the baseball player it is possible to boycott an athlete merely because at some time in his youth he has been convicted of stealing a peanut off a pushcart. But out

Gehrig Only Fixture in Inner Cordon of Yankees.

New Manager Given 35 Players to Fit Into Machine.

Note—This is the first of a series of stories dealing with major league baseball prospects for 1930.

By BRIAN BELL.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The New York Yankees will give Bob Shawkey, the new manager, 35 players next month and ask him to fit the baseball puzzle picture together. There are enough players of known worth in the assortment to make the former world champions contenders again if Bob the Gob can strike the right combination.

His first problem will be arrangement of the infield. Only Lou Gehrig is established. He will play first base, as usual. Tony Lazzeri is a certainty in the line of first defense, but whether he will again take care of second remains to be seen. He may be needed elsewhere. Mark Koenig has shown that he is a better shortstop than third baseman, so he probably will return to his former love. A general scramble may result between Lyn Lary, Jimmy Reese, Lary's former teammate, Ben Chapman, a great hitter, and the talkative Leo Durocher for the one place likely to be open. Not even Shawkey, however, knows what that vacant place will be.

Cooke in Line for Meusel's Post.

Two-thirds of the outfield will be back, the rejuvenated Babe Ruth and Earle Combs. Allan (Dusty) Cooke, great prospect from St. Paul, has been tentatively accorded Bob Meusel's former post more or less by acclamation, but Sam Byrd, ballplayer and golfer extraordinary, will ask that his vote be recorded in the negative. There are only five outfielders available, Cedric Durst being the fifth, and all will be retained.

One of the older school of recruits, Eugene (Bubbles) Hargrave, with ten years in the National League behind him, will bolster the catching staff after a year as manager of St. Paul in the American Association. Dickey, a fine newcomer, Bengough and Jorgens of last year's club and Bill John Karlon, drafted from Springfield, Mass., complete the receiving staff.

Manager Shawkey, who was a great pitcher in his day, will have a crop of 17 pitchers, prospects and near-pitchers from which to choose his staff. Hoyt, Pipgras, Zachary, Heimach, Wells, Pennock, Sherid and Johnson are veterans, although the last two are young in years.

Coast Leaguers Have Best Records.

Among the recruits with the best records are Vernon Gomez, from the San Francisco club, and Louis McEvoy, from Oakland, of the Pacific

2 Army Players Lost 15 Pounds in Defeat

Certain members of the West Point Football Team lost from 10 to 15 pounds during the recent game with Stanford at Palo Alto, Calif., F. A. Wandle, trainer of the team was quoted yesterday in an Associated Press dispatch.

Murrell, star full back and Perry, end, lost 15 pounds each, said Wandle. Maxwell reduced 4 pounds sitting on the bench under the California sun. The players weighed before and after the game.

Regarding the 34-to-13 defeat of Army, Coach "Biff" Jones, stopping off at Kansas City on his way back to West Point, had little to say. "Superior reserve material of Stanford and inadequate preparation of our team were responsible for the defeat," Jones said.

MILLS TO BE DIRECTOR AT HILLTOP

New Football Coach to Be in Charge of Sports at G. U.

Special to The Washington Post.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Jan. 2.—Thomas E. Mills, Georgetown University's new head football coach, will act as director of athletics in addition to coaching the gridiron team at the Hilltop, he stated at his home here upon returning from New York City, where his appointment was announced.

During his first year at Georgetown he will not coach other sports than football, his contract not calling for such work, Mills also said. It had been thought likely that he would take over the coaching of the Georgetown Baseball Team, as he has served as Notre Dame's head baseball mentor since 1926. Georgetown has no baseball coach at present, Bucky O'Neill having resigned last June. Mills has also coached boxing and wrestling at Notre Dame and is a member of the National Boxing Commission.

Mills said that he will leave here with his wife about February 1 to take over the duties of his new office and that he will call out the football players for spring training shortly thereafter.

Was Successful as Baseball Coach.

During his career at Notre Dame, Mills has done considerable traveling in the role of football scout and he has become well known in the Middle West and the East. He is well liked and is regarded as an authority on the sports in which he has coached. He has rendered valuable service to the Irish in baseball, boxing and wrestling, as well as in football.

As a baseball mentor, Mills achieved notable success. In 1927 his team won 15 games and lost 6, while the 1928 edition was victorious in 24 out of 32 games. Last spring the Irish diamonders won 19, lost 11 and tied 1. His boxing and wrestling teams also were successful.

Guy Bush, Cubs' Hero, Signs for Two Seasons

Chicago, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Guy Bush, Right-handed pitcher, who scored the Cubs' only victory over the Athletics in the last world series, today signed a two-year contract with the National League champions. The salary involved was not revealed, but was said to represent a substantial increase.

Tigers and Toronto Exchange Batteries

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The Free Press will say tomorrow that Haskell "Josh" Billings, pitcher, and Eddie Phillips, cather, have been or will be released by the Tigers to the Toronto Club of the International League.

In exchange, the paper will say, Joe Samuels, pitcher, and George Rensa, catcher, will come to the Detroit Club. Billings came to professional baseball from Brown University.

Pompano Citizens Plan To Open Meet Saturday

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Residents of Pompano announced today that all necessary funds to conduct a racing meet at the horse track there had been raised and that nothing but an injunction could stop the meeting, which is scheduled to start Saturday.

There are 150 horses at the track, the announcement said, and all preparations have been made for the racing.

The new organization promoting the meeting is composed of C. L. Brown, president, Pompano member of the Broward County School Board; Roland Hardy, chairman of the Broward County Democratic executive committee; E. D. Lindfors, treasurer of the City of Pompano.

The inaugural Saturday will be seven races, starting at 2:30 p. m.

Cubs Free Gonzales, 14 Years in Majors

Chicago, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Mike Gonzales, veteran Cuban catcher of the Cubs, today was given his unconditional release.

Gonzales, one of the first of Cuba's contributions to the major leagues, broke into big time in 1914 when he joined the Cincinnati Reds. Subsequently he backstopped for the St. Louis Cardinals, New York Giants and the Cubs. In all he served fourteen seasons in the majors, coming back after serving two years with St. Paul of the American Association Club. He came to Chicago in 1925.

The veteran Cuban did most of the catching for the Cubs last season when Leo "Gabby" Hartnett's arm went limp. Hartnett's arm was reported in good shape again.

Because he has served 10 years and more in the majors, Gonzales automatically becomes a free agent.

Elis Beat G. U. Five, 26-23, In Finals

Yale Rallies Near End and "Freezes" Ball to Hold Lead.

Scores Tied 6 Times in Finals of Annual Yale Tourney.

Special to The Washington Post.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 2.—Georgetown and Yale, two basket ball teams that Elmer Ripley built, clashed here tonight for the championship of the annual Yale Tournament. Yale, which the famous coach took charge of this season, won by the score of 26 to 23, but only after the former Georgetown proteges of Ripley put up dogged opposition.

An old trick known to professional basket ball, in which Ripley starred for nearly twenty years, was used by Yale to clinch the verdict. The Elis, sorely pressed by the fighting Hilltoppers in the waning moments, "froze" the ball, thereby protecting its meager lead and preventing Georgetown at the same time from getting possession of the sphere.

After the score had been tied six times, with Georgetown holding a slight lead most of the time, Horwitz, Yale's hero tonight, put the Blue in the van with a successful toss from the foul line. A minute later Yale went into a 3-point lead as Linehan heaved a goal from mid-floor, and during the ensuing eight minutes before the final whistle Georgetown strove desperately but vainly to regain the lead with the Elis alternately freezing the ball under Georgetown's basket and breaking down the floor to snipe at their own.

Captain McCarthy Reduces Lead.

As the last minute began Capt. McCarthy cleverly intercepted a Yale pass and dropped in a 2-pointer to bring Georgetown to within 1 point of a tie, but the Hilltop's hopes had hardly gained breath before Horwitz placed Yale out of danger with a long dribble and score.

Georgetown led, 13 to 12, at the close of the first half, thanks to a marathon toss by Freddy Mesmer with 20 seconds to go. The score was tied four times in this period. Yale gained the front for the only time on a goal by Albie Booth, the football star, who performed cleverly at forward.

At the start of the second half Capt. Nanry caged a two-pointer to send Yale ahead, 14 to 13, and then McCarthy duplicated for Georgetown. Dutton's two foul tosses and Shea's fielder jumped the Washington score to 19 and it began to look pretty for Georgetown. At this juncture a Yale substitute, McGowan, entered the proceedings and forthwith collected three points which featured the Blue's rally that tied the score at 19-all.

Then Dutton and Mesmer sank free throws, giving the visitors the lead for the last time. Horwitz inserted two of his timely goals following this and until the finish Yale kept ahead.

The result made Georgetown runner-up in the Yale tournament for the second successive year. Last winter the Hilltoppers lost to New York University in the final. They avenged that defeat Wednesday night by eliminating the Violets in the opening round, winning by 31 to 27. In the consolation game tonight N. Y. U. swamped Holy Cross, 40 to 21.

Wallace's Purse Held After He Quits Fight

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The purse of Billy Wallace, lightweight, who lost to King Tut, of Minneapolis, in a bout here New Year's Day, was ordered withheld today by the State Boxing Commission pending a hearing of claims the Philadelphian could have continued instead of quitting at the end of the eighth round because of injuries.

Tut was declared winner by a technical knockout at the beginning of the eighth round when Wallace failed to respond to the bell, claiming his back had been injured in a fall through the ropes.

The boxing commission is to hear testimony of doctors who examined Wallace, to determine the extent of his injuries. It will also hear charges that Wallace held too much and failed to heed the referee's warnings.

Giants Book Chisox For 16 Spring Games

New York, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The New York Giants today announced an exhibition game schedule of 23 games, opening March 6 and closing April 14. Two dates are open and the number of practice tilts will be increased to 25. Sixteen games will be played with the Chicago White Sox. The Sox and Giants train at San Antonio, Tex.

Two games will be played with the Cleveland Indians, the only major league opposition other than the White Sox thus far booked. Only two minor league clubs appear on the schedule, Memphis, of the Southern Association, and Shreveport, of the Texas League. The exhibition season will be started and closed by college teams, the University of Texas and the Army.

Pitchers and catchers will report at San Antonio February 15 with the outfielders and infielders following two weeks later.

The schedule:

March 6—University of Texas, at Austin; 8-9; White Sox, at Houston; 13, 14, 15, 16, 28, White Sox, at San Antonio; 29, White Sox, at Fort Worth; 30, White Sox, at Dallas; 31, Shreveport, at Shreveport, La.

April 1-2, Cleveland, at New Orleans; 5-6, Memphis, at Memphis, Tenn; 7, White Sox, at Evansville, Ind.; 8, White Sox, at Terre Haute; 9, White Sox, at Indianapolis; 10, White Sox, at Fort Wayne; 11, White Sox, at Toledo, Ohio; 12-13, White Sox, at Chicago; 14, Army, at West Point.

Pride of Magnates as Traders Proves Barrier to Many Major Player Deals

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

FANS often wonder why there is not more trading of players among major league clubs. Frequently conditions exist which make a player-shift the logical move, but the clubs invariably stand pat. One would think that a club weak in one department, but having surplus talent in another, would seek another outfit similarly fixed, only with the weakness and strength transposed, and make a deal, while there always are cases where players have outlived their usefulness and shifts of players of this type might benefit all involved.

But few deals are made, and it is not difficult to figure out the reason. It is simply a case of what might be called personal pride on the part of the magnates—each is afraid he might get the worst of the deal and become a laughing stock in the eyes of "his public" and the other magnates. It is this fear which prevents trades. It causes a club owner to broadcast to the world before attending a major league meeting, for instance, where all of the other owners have gathered, that he has this or that player on the market and is looking for some talent to bolster up a certain department of his team and then to come back empty-handed.

Joe Doaks for Babe Ruth Has No Appeal.

As soon as he reaches the trading grounds he usually demands Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and some cash for a broken-down pitcher and then comes home shaking his head and telling how he was unable to do any business due to the unreasonableness of the other fellow, who went there with the same ideas—that of getting a whole lot for a very little, or less.

Baseball trading could be made profitable if the magnates were willing to stop looking for suckers and to take a chance on what looked to be somewhere near an even swap. Fans always are interested in seeing new faces, and clubs frequently have players they can not use but who would fit in nicely in some other combination.

Washington's last trade—the biggest of the 1928-1929 off-season—apparently helped both the Nationals and the Boston Red Sox. It was a five-for-one deal, giving the Nationals Buddy Myer in exchange for Pitchers Milton Gaston and Horace Lisenbee, Infielders Bob Reeves and Grant Gillis and Outfielder Elliott Bigelow.

Myer Was Tonic Nats Needed.

The Nats figured that, with Myer on third, their infield problem, then in quite an unsettled state, would be solved. While giving up more than half a team of players, none appeared to fit here. Reeves had been tried and found wanting and so had Gillis, while Lisenbee and Gaston had been almost useless in the box during the 1928 season. Bigelow was reputed as being a heavy-hitting but slow outfielder with a poor throwing arm, but had never reported here after having been bought from Birmingham.

Even though Myer proved a failure at third, he was played regularly—being shifted to second late in the season and developing into a prospect there. He hit .301 and did his share in helping the Nats win a game now and then.

From a Boston viewpoint, Reeves was the player on which the Sox counted most and he, like Myer, did not do the expected. He worked regularly at third and improved in fielding and throwing, but was unable to hit better than .248. Gaston, however, did some real pitching on occasions and his work was better than his record of twelve victories and nineteen defeats would indicate. The others did not help Carrigan much. Bigelow had spells of hitting and ended with an average of .283. His fielding and pegging were so poor, however, that he is now with Joe Engel's Chattanooga Lookouts. Gillis was used in but 28 games, hitting only .247, while Lisenbee was a bloomer from the start of the season and finally ended up somewhere in the Eastern League.

Here is one case in which both teams benefited from a trade and there are unlimited possibilities for many more of the same kind if the club owners would not demand a "locked bet" for fear of hurting their prestige as "David Harums" and would be willing to give the other fellow a chance.

Golf Army Pursues Golden Trail in California, Florida

LONG BEACH, Calif., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Campaigners of the Pacific Coast winter golf tournaments today renewed their quest for gold and fame by testing out the Municipal Course where tomorrow they will enter the annual Long Beach $3,500 open. More than 250 of the nation's leading professional and amateur stars of the links are expected.

Stars of the links are expected to appear in the opening two days of qualifying rounds, which will allow the low 64 scorers and ties to appear in the final 36-hole round Sunday.

Horton Smith, enterprising Joplin, Mo., pro whose record this season consists of three championships and a tie for second, is a slight favorite to displace Water Hagen, last year's winner.

While the great Haig and Leo Diegel, Professional Golfers Association championship are included in the entry list, it is still a question of whether a motion picture assignment will permit them to take part in the event. MacDonald Smith, Long Islander, who in the last two years has captured the annual Los Angeles $10,000 open, also is entered, but whether he will be able to appear is still in doubt.

The Beach tournament will be considered a sort of preparatory round in anticipation of the two big money tourneys, the Los Angeles open beginning January 8, and the Agua Caliente $25,000 open January 14.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The annual Miami open tournament will officially usher in the 1930 Florida golf season Saturday.

Gene Sarazen, twice winner of the event, will defend his crown against the largest entry list in the history of the tournament.

Prizes totaling $3,000 will be split among the leading scorers.

Tilden Wins; Faces Borotra in Finals

Paris, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Bill Tilden defeated Christian Boussus, young French southpaw, in the semifinals of the French international covered court tennis championships today by scores of 6—8, 6—2, 8—6. He will meet his old rival, Jean Borotra, the bounding Basque, in the final on Saturday.

Cavanaugh to Remain Coach at Fordham U.

New York, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Fordham University tonight announced the re-engagement of Maj. Frank W. Cavanaugh as head football coach for the 1930 season.

The "Iron Major," who turned out an undefeated eleven at Fordham in 1929, said two months ago he did not expect to renew his contract, but university officials said today they had no difficulty arranging terms for a new one-year agreement.

Cavanaugh has served at Fordham for three seasons and before that turned out winning teams at Boston College and Dartmouth.

Only two members of the 1929 Fordham team will be graduated in June. Cavanaugh will have a formidable array of veterans headed by Tony Siano, reelected captain, with which to tackle a schedule listing seven major games in succession.

Fighter Asked To "Take a Dive"

Manager of 'Battling Criss' Says He Was Propositioned.

Bout Called Off by Shires on Excuse of Illness.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The Michigan State Boxing Commission, which from the first has never looked with a kindly eye upon the pugilistic activities of Art Shires, late today suspended the White Sox first baseman from Michigan rings.

The action was taken after the commission had been told by the manager of "Battling" Criss, a sand well shoveler from Rockwood, Mich., that a proposition had been made for Criss to "take a dive" in a scheduled four-round preliminary last night.

Chairman James Brown, of the commission, who announced the suspension, declined to reveal the identity of persons said to have approached the manager, Bandes Oildersleeve, with the proposition nearly a week ago.

Brown said he had advised promoters in other Michigan cities of the ruling and that a recommendation will be made to the National Boxing Association that Shires be barred in other States controlled by that body.

Shires Was Ill, is Announcement.

The Shires-Criss bout was called off yesterday morning with the announcement that Shires was ill in his hotel room, suffering with a cold. The baseball pugilist was examined by a physician who reported him unable to fight.

The commission then ruled that when he was able to go into the ring Shires must meet Criss before any other opponent. Previously the official body had taken an interest in Art's affairs by refusing to let a promoter match him in a main bout. The featherweight fight for which Shires was to have been a preliminary also was called off when Shires was reported ill.

Final disposition of the case will be made January 9, at Lansing, Brown said.

Landis Disdains Comment.

Chicago, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Kenesaw M. Landis, commissioner of baseball, tonight refused to comment on the possible effect on the standing in organized baseball of Charles Arthur (the Great) Shires, by the latter's suspension today by the Michigan State Boxing Commission. Shires was suspended on a charge that his handler had approached a proposed opponent in a Detroit ring with a proposition to "take a dive" for the baseball player-fighter.

"I have not learned all the facts," Mr. Landis said, "and I never comment upon questions concerning which I do not have all the information available."

Matches Tonight Open 3-Cushion Cue Tourney

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, Jan. 2.—Play for the world's three-cushion championship will open tomorrow night at the Palm Garden with two games on the schedule. This will be the first title billiard competition in three-cushions in more than a year. Eight of the greatest players in the game have been named to compete. The only player missing is Willie Hoppe and the veteran withdrew a short time ago when he failed to come to terms on a contract with the National Billiard Association of America, sponsors of the tournament.

The draw for the opening games follows:

First game—Johnny Layton, defending champion, vs. Harry Schuler, of Brooklyn, Eastern sectional representative. Second game—Otto Reiselt, of Philadelphia, former champion, vs. Charles E. Jordan, of Los Angeles, winner of the Western sectional tournament.

The other players who will be seen in the championship are Gus Copulos, of Detroit; Tiff Denton, of Kansas City; Allen Hall, of Chicago, and Augie Kiekhefer, of Chicago. Albert G. Cutler, of New York, will referee. All games will be at 50 points. The schedule calls for 28 games.

ZOOM SCORES LUCKY VICTORY AT NEW ORLEANS

Cruelty Nets Suspension To Rider

Cavens Set Down for Beating Film, Favorite, Over Head.

Zoom Wins as Count Palatine, Leading, Steps in Hole.

FAIR GROUNDS RACE TRACK, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Over a very heavy track, Harry Payne Whitney's Zoom, making his first start since 1928, took the fourth race, a 6-furlong sprint, here today. The Show Off finished second and Scotland third. The race was not truly run, as Count Palatine stepped in a hole at the furlong pole when leading and almost fell. He lost several lengths by the mishap. Film, the favorite, ran out in the first quarter, after getting off on top. He went to the outside fence, and Jockey Cavens, who had the mount, beat him over the head and continued beating the colt until they passed the finish line. The stewards promptly suspended Cavens indefinitely for cruelty.

Zoom ran to the front, but at the 3-furlong pole Count Palatine took a head lead and was going easily when he stepped into the hole and dropped back. Zoom then drew away to win by four lengths. The Show Off beat Scotland by half a length for the place.

Beginning Saturday, the post time of the first race will be 2 o'clock, central time.

Tommy Lad Scores
At Havana.

Havana, Jan. 2 (A.P.)—Tommy Lad, which races for O. L. Foster, inaugurated his 4-year-old form in an auspicious manner when, under a hustling ride by Comingore, he proved a clever winner of the San Francisco Springs claiming event at 6 furlongs. Tommy Lad showed the way to H. Neustetter's Gideon, while H. T. Palmer's Listerine was third. A field of six paraded to the post. Tommy Lad, installed as the choice, assumed command at once from a good break and displayed a high flight of speed, with Gideon racing in closest pursuit, while Listerine was in third place, with Aucilla bringing up the rear. Propus, making his debut here, failed to display the early dazzling speed he showed when racing for G. A. Cochran and was far back throughout.

There was no change in the running positions to the stretch turn. It was there that Gideon, under pressure, moved up stoutly, while Listerine made a wide turn. Tommy Lad, however, was far from through and readily answered his rider's call. He drew away again in the final few yards and was taken in hand. Gideon was far in front of Listerine, which was driving hard to hold Fair Thorn safe for the minor award of the purse.

Pat Draws Away at Agua Caliente.

Agua Caliente, Mexico, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—George Drumbeller's Pat won the featured attraction on today's card. Grand Dad, owned by the Labrae Stable, was second, and Serenader, owned by L. T. Whitehill, was third. The race was a 6-furlong sprint, and the time was 1:14. Eight horses comprised the field. The purse was worth $700 to winner's owner. Pat paid $7 to $2 in the mutuel machines. Serenader was the favorite.

Pat carried Serenader along at a fast clip in the early running, drew away when the latter began to tire in the stretch and won easily by two lengths. Grand Dad followed the pace closely and finished strongly on the inside, two lengths ahead of Serenader. The latter was tiring badly at the finish.

125-Pound Grid Teams Schedule Game Sunday

The All-Star Capital City League 125-pound class football team will meet the Wolverines in a postseason game Sunday at 1 o'clock on Fairlawn Field. Burch, of the Meridians, and other players wishing to play with the All-Stars, are requested to call Manager Eddie Cantor at Lincoln 6654 between 5 and 6 p. m. today.

APACHES—NOTICE.

Members of the Apache A. C. Football Team are requested to phone Manager Seymour Hall, at Atlantic 2548-R tonight.

TRUNDLE'S GOAL WINS.

D. Trundle's goal in the last thirty seconds of play enabled the Peck Midgets to come from behind and defeat the St. Stephen's Five, last night, at the Peck Gym., 29 to 28. Incidentally, Trundle was the high scorer for the evening with 15 points.

TEMPTER, who was kept on rail all the way and, closing gamely, was up to win in last stride. FORCE set stiff pace, but came a bit wide in stretch and tired finally. HERB ASHBY was kept close up but weakened in last furlong. INDRA closed a big gap. SHARK had early speed. SAM MENGEL ran a good race for six furlongs.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:37. Off at 4:38. Winner, E. H. Boomn's ch. h. (6), by Brumado—Othiana. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:25 1-5, 0:51 4-5, 1:19, 1:47 1-5, 2:02 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—THE HUGUENOT, $6.90, $6.40, $3.60; MILES PRYOR, $6.20, $3.40; PADONA, $3.80.

THE HUGUENOT, much the best, just galloped along in front and won as he pleased. MILES PRYOR closed with a rush in stretch. PADONA followed the pace, but weakened in stretch. HEHUKAI did not like the going. YACHTSMAN quit.

COLLYER'S COMMENT on the SPORT of KINGS

BY BERT E. COLLYER

MORE hot ones.

After getting off on the right foot at the Fair Grounds New Year's Day in case you were among the missing, I slipped you three winners, one, Double Heart, which paid $23.40. I believe I am going to keep right on with the good work. So lend an ear to ole Uncle Bertram for a few minutes and get in on some juicy ones. With a prospect of a muddy track at the Crescent City plant this aft, I look upon STAGE STRUCK as the best proposition of the day. This thing is in the clever hands of Bill Frizer and probably is much better than ordinarily rated. In fact, I suspect old Bill has been hiding him away all summer.

Incidentally, Old Bill also has entered RUSTICATE, a fancy 4-year-old, in the second spasm and it looks like he'll shoot with both barrels. The only thing that even resembles a feature down at the Fair Grounds today is the fourth race, in which a band of eleven 3-year-olds has been named overnight. At the distance, I anticipate a good effort from THE COACH, which has won his last two starts. It is a tough spot, however, with ROYAL SPORT, ASSOCIATE, EIL WEIR and COBY all figuring close.

Down at Havana, where I generally manage to snag at least a couple out of the barrel, the best thing I have to offer is LASSA, which is labelled XXX special by the trackman. This one has run with, and beaten, better horses than he is pitted against today and although the price won't be anything to write home about, I like the spot to me. IMPERATOR and SAN CARLOS for what is left. Both are well bred and either may be the one. TWELVE SIXTY for the fifth and CORPOSANT for the nightcap.

ROSENBLOOM CHOICE OVER LOMSKI

Star Light Heavies Meet Tonight for Fourth Match.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Two of the best light heavyweights in the boxing business, Maxie Rosenbloom, busy belter from Harlem, and Leo Lomski, of Aberdeen, Wash., tangle for the fourth time tomorrow night in Madison Square Garden, with nothing more than the "rubber" decision at stake.

The elimination contest ordered by the New York State Athletic Commission to provide a successor to the retired Tommy Loughran never did take Lomski into consideration. Rosenbloom, the slapstick, acrobatic star, lost his standing among the "favored four" by dropping a close decision in Buffalo to Jimmy Slattery, also overlooked in the early nominations. Slattery and Lou Scozza, also of Buffalo, must fight for recognition here as the new title holder.

Maxie and Lomski have met in a business way on three previous occasions. Leo won one, Rosenbloom one and another was a draw. Tomorrow night's ten-round feature should result in a definite edge one way or the other. Rosenbloom, fighting now in his best form, is a 6-to-5 favorite over the stiff-punching Westerner, who has not appeared to his former advantage of late.

GIANTS' LAW SUIT MAY FOREGO KIDDING

of respect for the property rights of stockholders it is impossible to dismiss a magnate even though it can be shown that he has served time or should have served time for bucketing the stock commissions of the traditional widows and orphans.

Sauce for the Goose
Bitter for Gander.

More specifically, a baseball player may be dropped out of organized baseball forever for having dealings with bookmakers, although the business side of the industry is more or less adorned by two or three stockholders or magnates who once were bookmakers or professional gamblers themselves. I would not wish to contend that bookmakers or professional gamblers should be barred from the baseball business, having found them to be, on the whole, much more scrupulous than lawyers or bankers and almost always making their bets without hidden reservations or special interest fees disguised as discounts.

But here is an obvious inconsistency in the even-handed administration of justice in the baseball industry whereby, if a magnate should happen to start a handbook or a faro bank, it would be possible to bar his players from the game for having dealings with their own employer.

But the present game of squawk and counter-squawk between the opposed groups of magnates in the Giants' firm is only a preliminary exercise familiar to all persons who have covered courts for any length of time.

Somebody Might Get Hurt.

It is reminiscent of two hot-tempered patrons standing at opposite ends of the bar in a saloon, brandishing heavy seidels and threatening to throw them at one another. I believe that presently one of their political mutual friends in the city will move in between the two excited but normally good-natured boys, McQuade and Charlie Stoneham, and soothe them down by pointing out that if they do let fly both of them are likely to be hit, in addition to which they might muss up the place and injure business.

Perhaps some retired ball player who chanced to overhear the good-natured kidding in the Giants' locker room in the last weeks of the 1924 season as described by Frank Frisch, then captain of the team, would now be willing to amplify the story for a few hundred dollars. But such testimony, however true, always admits of considerable doubt and it is not the best practice to obtain information this way.

I worked on a celebrated murder case once in which a lady witness who chanced to ride past the scene of the crime on her favorite mule, sold her first story of the incident to one reporter for ten dollars and then went on to sell other stories, all of them exclusive and no two alike, at a rising scale of compensation until presently she was getting almost as much as a major league fiction writer. They are all good stories, and the only objection was that if any one was true, all the others were false. To this the lady's only reply was, "Well, you wanted an exclusive story didn't you?"

There is always a long pause between the filing of a law suit and the hearing of the testimony and it is my idea that by the time the two good natured sportsmen of the Giant firm come to trial with their claims and counter-claims they will have decided that there is nothing to be gained by mud-slinging, as the politicians call it or blowing the police whistle as the practice is known among the sinister elements of society.

CAPITAL BOWLING ACES AWAIT INTERCITY TEST

Connecticut's Pinmen Here Tomorrow

Grand Palace Aims to Overcome Lead in Singles, Doubles.

Events on 2 Alleys; Harrison of "714 Fame" Shows.

TRAILING in two events by comparatively large margins and holding a five-pin lead in the third and most important, five of Washington's outstanding duckpin bowlers will battle for one of the largest purses ever wagered in intercity competition on the Lucky Strike and Coliseum drives tomorrow afternoon and night.

The pride of Connecticut small pin artists will invade the Capital for the final engagements of the series opened at Hartford, Conn., last Saturday.

Howard Campbell, the national singles champion, will meet Jack White, the New Haven ace as well as the outstanding star of New England, in a five-game match at the Lucky Strike, starting at 2:15 o'clock. Campbell is trailing by 39 pins after a heated duel in the opening block.

Major Test Faced In Doubles.

Maxie Rosenberg and Paul Harrison face the major test in the doubles, as they are 69 pins behind William Tato, of Waterbury, and Carl Frisk, the Hartford ace. Tato and Frisk collected 1,246 pins last week and the local pair has a tough assignment on hand. Although both Harrison and Rosenberg shot creditable sets in the opening round, they figure to pick up a number of pins on their rivals. Whether they can overcome the 69-pin lead is one of the uncertainties that will attract a throng of alley fans of the Coliseum tomorrow night.

Paul Harrison's record set of 714 was largely responsible for putting the Grand Palace Valet Shop Team in front in the five-man event.

The District bowlers are not seriously disturbed by the fact that they are trailing in two events and holding a trivial advantage in the other. They are well satisfied with their showing at Hartford, where they encountered conditions that do not prevail here and to which they were unaccustomed. They believe they hold a greater advantage over the invaders on local drives than the New Englanders had on their home alleys.

Additional Seats Installed.

Arrangements are being made at both the Coliseum and Lucky Strike to provide seats for large galleries. Bill Wood, manager of the Meyer Davis enterprises, is having a stand constructed to run the entire length of the alleys at the Lucky Strike in addition to the regular seats to the rear of the alleys. Lonnie Krauss will have his circus seats in place to the rear of the alleys on which the matches will be staged. The doubles match is slated to start at the Coliseum at 6 o'clock and the team event will follow immediately, starting about 8 o'clock.

Undefeated 100-Pound Quintet Seeks Title in District A. A. U. Tournament

Griffiths Aiming for Highest Basket Ball Honors.

UNDEFEATED in ten games and not completely extended in any one of this half a score of battles, the Clark Griffith 100-pound basketeers are intent on winning the first District A. A. U. championship for that class to be decided in the big tournament to be conducted under the auspices of The Washington Post in March.

Sponsored by the president of the Washington baseball team, the Clark Griffiths are mighty proud of their showing to date. They claim most of the outstanding contenders for 100-pound honors as their victims. The list includes the Medicos, Shires' Club, Ambassadors, Aces, Shermans, Parkviews, Knights of Columbus and the Spartans. The latter team has been upset three times in as many meetings.

Kemp Among Griffs' Stars.

"Snooky" Kemp, who aided the Jewish Community Center 100-pounders in annexing the local championship last year, is carrying on at a great pace at right guard, with "Bo" Bregman as his regular running mate. "Pep" Hunter has proven a clever performer at center.

"Cutie" Baggett, one of the shiftiest youngsters seen in the tournament here last year, is a regular forward. Murray "Speedy" Kraft, small but useful, takes care of the other forward berth.

Louis Miller, former Jewish Community Center lightweight court star, is managing and coaching the Griffs with success. Ernest Handlein, Red White, Genderson and Doonis contribute the reserve talent.

Ready to Play All Comers.

Manager Miller says his team does not necessarily want to wait until the District A. A. U. tournament to let local fans know which is the real 100-pound championship aggregation in the District. He is ready to book games with the best teams in the class, he said last night. He can be reached at Columbia 4855.

The Griffs will clash with the Cardinals tonight and next Tuesday they are scheduled to invade the Southwest Boys' Club gym for a game with the 100-pounders of that institution.

District A. A. U. Court Group Meets Wednesday

Chairman F. V. Thomson has postponed the meeting of the basket ball committee of the District A. A. U. until Wednesday night, January 8. The meeting had previously been scheduled for Tuesday night. The Boys' Club will be the scene of the gathering at 7:30 o'clock. A definite date for starting this year's tournament as well as the scene of the game will be determined at this time.

Printer Five Again Wins; Seen as Tourney Threat

Unlimited teams entering the District A. A. U. basket ball tournament this year will have a new threat to contend with in the Union Printer five. The Printers have been gaining momentum since they were organized at the start of this season and last night gave another exhibition of their court skill in defeating the Remsens by a 41-32 score.

Tuck Daglish, who is becoming something of a Frank Merriwell in local sports circles, contributed the knockout punch last night with eleven field goals and added 25 points to the winners' total.

Two Close Games Mark Boys' Club Court Play

Two close games marked the play of the Boys' Club League last night at the club gym on C street. In the 100-pound league, the Optimists nosed out the Spartans, 12 to 11, while the unlimited Tut Tut Wonders eked out a 24-to-23 win over the Optimists unlimited five.

The Spengler Post Five had little trouble in winning from the Senators, 35 to 12, and the St. Martin's coasted to a 25-to-3 win over the Nye House Quintet. Not one field goal was scored by the losers.

MARQUETTE FACES BIG TASK

Tossers Work Hard for Game With Notre Dame.

Special to The Washington Post.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Jan. 2.—There's no rest for the weary nor for the Marquette University Basket Ball Team which, following a one-day lay-off for Christmas, returned to cage togs and started preparations for the remainder of its 1929-1930 schedule, the heaviest in the history of the sport at the local school.

Coach Cord Lipe's Basketeers face a tough engagement this week when they tackle the Lawrence College Vikings here Saturday night, and then must start preparations for their appointment with the Notre Dame Ramblers at South Bend, Ind., January 11. In all, 23 games are included on the current schedule.

Although the Marquette Netters lost to Montana State last Saturday night, the Hilloppers were by no means disgraced by the caging demons from the West and, in fact, local fans are rather proud of the way their team performed against the Bobcats.

New Coach Bringing Team Along Fast.

Coach Lipe, who is new to Marquette, has brought his team along rapidly and it showed even further signs of improvement against the Montanans.

Lawrence always provides keen competition for Marquette teams, whether they are met at home or abroad. Saturday night's game should prove to be one of the most interesting contests of the season.

The remainder of Marquette's revised schedule follows:

Jan. 4, Lawrence, here; 11, Notre Dame, at South Bend; 14, Grinnell, here; 18, Creighton, here; 20, Detroit, here; 31, Michigan State, at East Lansing, Mich.
Feb. 1, Detroit, in Detroit; 4, Notre Dame, here; 7, Northwestern, at Evanston, Ill.; 11, Wisconsin, at Madison, Wis.; 13, Wisconsin at the Milwaukee Auditorium; 15, Drake, at Des Moines, Ia.; 17, Creighton, at Omaha, Nebr.; 25, Lawrence, at Appleton, Wis.; 27, Drake, here.
Mar. 1, Michigan State, here; 4, Iowa, at Iowa City, Ia.

Loud-Speaker Plan Check on False Starts

Several innovations in the starting of yacht races are to be tried out next summer by the American Yacht Club race committee, if that organization's present plans are carried out. The chief one is the employment of a loud speaker to recall boats that have gone over the starting line before their time.

It frequently happens in the excitement of a start in close quarters that a skipper will beat the gun and not realize it, will fail to hear when the committee hails him after the start and will finish the race, perhaps a winner, only to learn that he never started in it, according to official record. The committee believes that the loud speaker they propose to use for recalls will carry to the offending yacht, even against a strong breeze and across a long starting line.

Another innovation the club plans is to hoist the distinctive signal for the start of each class 30 seconds before that class is due to start and drop it at the time of starting. This reverses the old method of dropping the signal of the preceding class 30 seconds before the start of the next and raising the signal of the class starting at the moment it should start. The proposed change offers several obvious advantages, though unless all the Sound clubs use the same system the result will be very confusing to the racing men.

Fine Showing Made By Rutgers Athletes

New Brunswick, N. J., Jan. 2.—The six major and three minor sports teams at Rutgers University won two-thirds of their contests during 1929, one of the most successful years in Rutgers athletic history. The various squads participated in 76 contests, winning 50 and losing 26.

Winning its three dual meets, the track team was the only undefeated member of the Rutgers athletic family, while swimming, the most outstanding, was close behind with a total of nine meets won and one lost. The other major sports records are: Basket ball, won 10, lost 5; baseball, won 9, lost 4; lacrosse, won 7, lost 2, and football, won 5, lost 4. The Scarlet minor sports record is not so impressive, Rutgers having won 3 and lost 4 in tennis, won 2 and lost 2 in cross-country, and won 2 and lost 4 in wrestling.

With triumphs over Lehigh and Lafayette to their credit, the track and cross-country teams won the Middle Three titles in these sports. Lafayette won the baseball championship, and the football title was divided among the three, Lafayette having defeated Rutgers, which in turn defeated Lehigh, which later nosed out Lafayette by a 13 to 12 score.

The Scarlet freshman teams won 20 contests, lost 14 and tied 1, 18 of the victories being in major sports competition. The basket ball, lacrosse and baseball teams were all undefeated, with six, four and three victories, respectively.

Bruce High Alumni Beats Varsity, 44-27

Special to The Washington Post.

Westernport, Md., Jan. 2.—The Alumni deafeated the Bruce High quint, 44 to 27, while the high school girls won from the grads, 16 to 11.

The Alumni took a commanding lead early in the first quarter, which it held throughout the contest. Bruce did its best scoring in the last stanza, registering 11 points, while the Alumni made 13.

Arthur "Bob" Wilt led the Alumni by collecting nine field goals and two out of three from the foul line. Andy Smith, of last year's squad, sent seven through the hoop from the floor. Frankie Sullivan led the high school quint with four double-deckers. The line-up:

Middleton to Captain Beall High Tossers

Special to The Washington Post.

Frostburg, Md., Jan. 2.—Raymond Middleton, all-around athlete of Beall High School, was elected captain of the Beall quint in the Western Maryland Interscholastic League, to serve during the 1930 season.

Middleton is a senior. He was honored by being placed on all-star W. M. I. League teams during the 1929 basket ball and soccer seasons. Capt. Middleton will direct the team from the guard position.

Championship of Champs Event Attracts Fine Field

Many Nationally-Known Golf Amateurs to Compete for Travis Memorial Trophy at St. Augustine; Entries Close Jan. 10.

Special to The Washington Post.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Jan. 2.—The last call to those who would enter the classic of winter amateur golf tournaments, the national championship of golf club champions for the Walter J. Travis Memorial Trophy was issued here today. Entries will be accepted up to and including January 10 by Johnny Farrell, 1928 national open golf champion, who conducts the championship, or to Ray McCarthy, chairman of the tournament committee.

The entry list for this third edition of the "Championship of Champions" already has outstripped the figures set for it by the optimists. The number entered and the quality of the golf represented by them has demanded that the championship committee lengthen the playing period an extra day to permit 36-hole matches after the second round has been played. The scheduled plan is now the same as for the national amateur championship except that the qualifying test will be played in one day.

Many Nationally Known Stars Are Entered.

Many nationally known golfers are entered, among whom are Eddie Stimpson, former star and captain of the Harvard University golf team and former president of the Intercollegiate Golf Association; Carl Dann, jr., of Rollins College, the defending title holder; Harold Weber, of Inverness, five times winner of the Ohio State amateur title; T. "Val" Bermingham, of Wykagyl, 17 times champion of that prominent Metropolitan district club; Albert Hakes and Howard Tryon, the outstanding amateurs in Central New York; Samuel Freeth and David Frankel, two outstanding Long Island amateurs; James A. Cook, a plus 2 player of St. Louis, who is one of the prominent Missouri amateurs, and A. C. Bethune, brilliant young Canadian.

The list of entrants to date represents 20 States and Canada and includes New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Pennylvania, Michigan, Illinois, Ohio, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Indiana, Alabama, Kentucky, Minnesota, Tennessee, Missouri, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina Georgia and Florida.

International Aspect of Tourney Pleases.

This vast representation indicates the enormous popularity of the club championship tournament and a growth far more rapid than ever the national amateur championship has enjoyed.

Farrell is enthused over the international aspect of the tournament, as he personally obtained the entry of the brilliant young Canadian, A. C. Bethune, champion of the Royal Montreal Golf Club. Bethune played with Farrell during the northern season and, playing under poor golf conditions, turned in scores of better than 77 for the Quaker Ridge layout in the Metropolitan district, admitted to be one of the really difficult courses of the country.

NAVY TEAMS STRONG IN 1929

Led College Field in Gymnastics and Water Polo.

THE year of 1929 was marked by a number of athletic achievements by Naval Academy teams and disappointments in certain lines but, upon the whole, considerable progress.

Honors were won by the gymnastic, water polo, boxing, fencing, lacrosse and cross-country teams, and in some other lines there are indications that a much better position will be attained in 1930.

The Naval Academy teams in gymnastics and water polo were the undisputed leaders in the college field. Not lower than the second position must be assigned to its boxing and fencing teams, and its lacrosse team shared with Union the highest place in the Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association.

For the first time in its history the cross-country team did not meet defeat during its season, and in this line, as well as field and track in general now coached by Earl Thomsen, Olympic champion hurdler, the Naval Academy is making definite progress.

Cross-Country Team Undefeated.

After going through thirteen successive seasons without a defeat, the Naval Academy gymnastic team lost to Dartmouth in 1928. It was, therefore, greatly to the satisfaction of naval people when its gym team regained premier honors last year.

The water-polo supremacy was decided when the Naval Academy met and defeated Yale, these teams being the only undefeated teams in that sport up to their meeting.

While the boxing team lost to Pennsylvania State in the finals of the Intercollegiate Boxing Association, it completed its tenth successive season without losing a dual bout, probably a unique record as to any branch of college sport.

Penn State Beaten In Dual Match.

Pennsylvania State was one of the teams defeated in a dual match by the Naval Academy, so that the leadership in this sport for the year is somewhat mixed.

The Naval fencing team, which had a poor season the previous year, made a fine comeback and gave Yale a hard fight for first place in the finals of the Intercollegiate Fencing Association.

The Story of the Calendar.

IV. THE NEW CALENDAR.

IN 1752, England changed the date of the beginning of the year. Before that year the English had been in the habit of saying that the year started on the 25th of March; but they changed New Year's Day to January 1.

Any Month in 13-month year.

SUN.	MON.	TUES.	WED.	THURS.	FRI.	SAT.
1	2	3	4	5	6	7
8	9	10	11	12	13	14
15	16	17	18	19	20	21
22	23	24	25	26	27	28

What each month of the new calendar would contain.

In the same year the English adopted the new style calendar. They were 170 years late in doing so. By order of the government, people who went to bed on the night of September 1, 1752, woke up to find that it was September 14!

That would be a quick way to earn a salary, wouldn't it? The reason for the change was to make up for the error which had been caused by counting too many leap years.

People nowadays are talking about changing the calendar, and it is likely that the change will take place. The idea is to give each month an even number of days, and to have thirteen months in the year.

With the new calendar, every month would have 28 days, or exactly four weeks. Every month would start with a holiday—Sunday.

At the end of thirteen months of that kind, 364 days would pass. This would give an extra day to the year, and it would be a holiday. On leap years, there might be two holidays together.

What do you think of the new calendar plan? Wouldn't it be rather nice to have all months of even length?

Perhaps you know the old saying: "Thirty days hath September, April, June and November; all the rest have 31, except February, which hath 28."

If the new calendar is put into force, you may forget about that. There will be just four weeks to every month.

The world is waking up in many ways, and it seems to be waking up about the calendar.

Uncle Ray.

O. K.

GASOLINE ALLEY

YOU GOT A RIDE HOME WITH SOMEBODY IN HIS CAR DIDN'T YOU, LORA?
YES. THAT WAS MR. GLOSS. BABE LOTUS INTRODUCED ME TO HIM.
WHAT KIND OF A FELLOW IS HE?
HE'S AWFULLY NICE— GOOD LOOKING TOO. AND JUST THE POLITEST MAN YOU EVER MET!
OF COURSE I DON'T KNOW A THING ABOUT HIM BUT YOU ARE GETTING TO AN AGE NOW, HONEY, WHEN YOU MUST CHOOSE YOUR FRIENDS CAREFULLY. IT IS VERY IMPORTANT.
BUT I DIDN'T CHOOSE HIM—HE CHOSE ME. HE ASKED BABE TO INTRODUCE HIM—HE TOLD ME HE DID. I KNOW YOU'D LIKE HIM.

BOBBY THATCHER — Definite Information

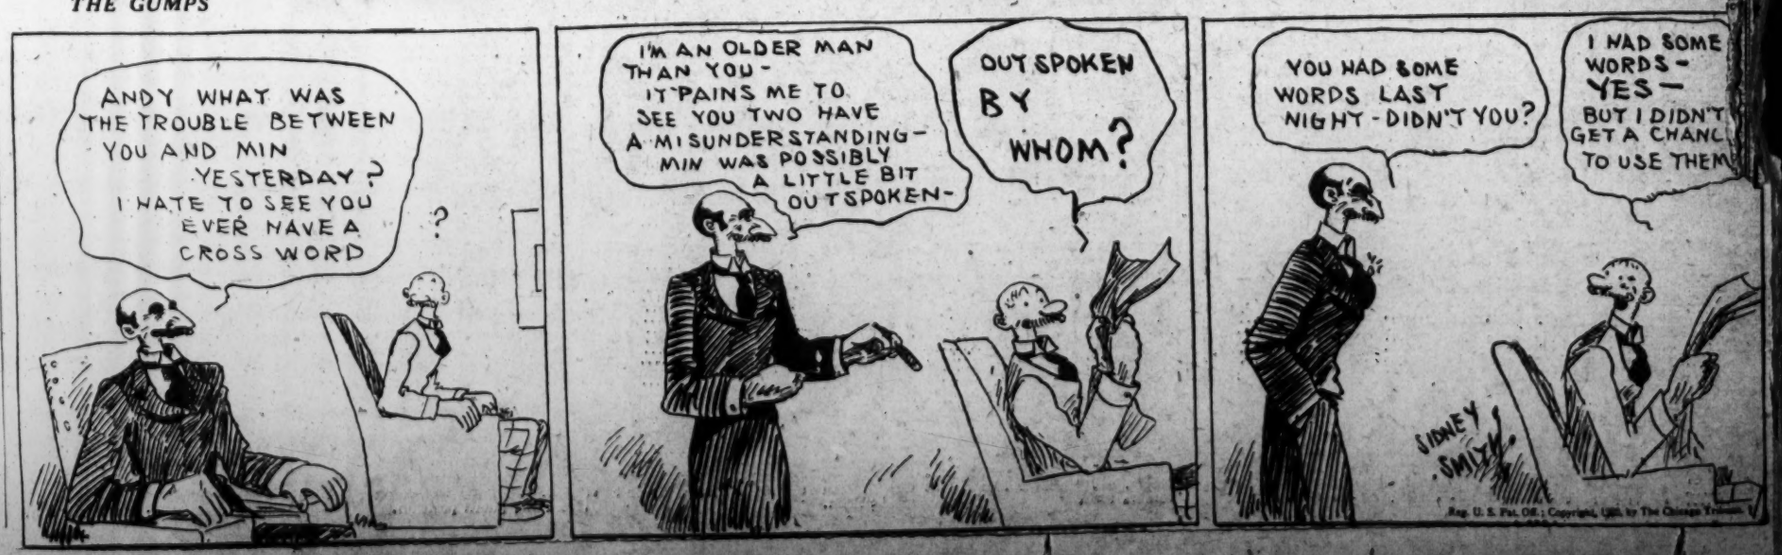
IN THE LIVING ROOM OF THE DESERTED FARM HOUSE WHICH HAD ONCE BEEN HIS HOME BOBBY BRUSHED A PILE OF RUBBISH ASIDE WITH HIS BOOT REVEALING A NUMBER OF TORN LETTERS—
DEAR MR FLINT: I HAVE NO REPLY TO MY LETTERS INQUIRING ABOUT MY NEPHEWS SON ROBERT THATCHER — WITH THE PASSING OF MRS FLINT I THOUGHT YOU MIGHT NOT CARE TO BE BURDENED WITH THE CARE OF A GROWING BOY AND—
THE REST OF THAT PAGE IS TORE — THE ADDRESS — HERE IT IS ON THE ENVELOPE - MRS IDA BAXTER 18 CHURCH ST.
© McClure Newspaper Syndicate
WELL THAT EXPLAINS A LOT- OF COURSE JED FLINT WOULDN'T WRITE AS LONG AS I DID ENOUGH WORK TO SAVE HIM A HAND
WHY HERE'S THE RED SWEATER MRS FLINT KNIT FOR ME! COULDN'T GET ONE ARM INTO IT NOW—

Bim, the Peacemaker

THE GUMPS



ANDY WHAT WAS THE TROUBLE BETWEEN YOU AND MIN YESTERDAY? I HATE TO SEE YOU EVER HAVE A CROSS WORD
I'M AN OLDER MAN THAN YOU - IT PAINS ME TO SEE YOU TWO HAVE A MISUNDERSTANDING - MIN WAS POSSIBLY A LITTLE BIT OUTSPOKEN-OUTSPOKEN BY WHOM?
YOU HAD SOME WORDS LAST NIGHT - DIDN'T YOU?
I HAD SOME WORDS - YES - BUT I DIDN'T GET A CHANCE TO USE THEM

ALEXANDRIA TO ASK CHANGE IN CHARTER

Council Adopts Ordinance Asking Legislators to Seek Amendments.

WOULD ALTER BOND LAW

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
312 S. Washington St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 323.

An ordinance was adopted by Alexandria City Council yesterday requesting Delegate J. Fred Birrell and State Senator Frank L. Ball to introduce a bill at the current session of the State Legislature to amend four sections of the existing charter of Alexandria with reference to the issuance of bonds.

The first section requested for amendment would authorize the city council to issue negotiable bonds of the city for payments for any improvements or property which it is, or may be, authorized or required by law to make or acquire, or to expend money or refund bonds heretofore or hereafter issued or to refund indebtedness.

The next section would provide that all bonds of the city except refunding bonds shall be made payable within the probable life of the improvement or undertaking for which they are issued, the probable life of such improvements to be estimated by the council; or when more than one improvement is provided for in a single bond issue, the average probable life to be computed.

The next section provides that the city shall not issue bonds or other interest-bearing obligations in excess of 18 per cent of the assessed valuation of the city's real estate, and the last section would legalize and validate all bonds heretofore issued by the city council, notwithstanding such bonds became due and payable more than 35 years after their date of issue.

The proposed amendment to the charter is understood to be for the purpose of clarifying the bond situation and placing it on a more definite basis.

Mayor Smoot took up the matter of the collection of personal property taxes in connection with the assessing of city license fees on automobiles, and City Manager Lawrence and City Attorney Budwesky were instructed to make a survey of the personal property tax laws of the District of Columbia and Maryland, with a view to a revision of the existing city ordinance, should such revision appear advisable. As matters now stand, the automobile owners are really paying a double tax to the city, one as a personal property tax and the other a city license fee, which has been the subject of discussion in the council on several occasions.

Councilman Timberman introduced a resolution to appropriate $5,000 for final payment of the attorneys engaged to assist the city attorney in the prosecution of Alexandria's suit against Arlington and Fairfax counties for the annexation of additional territory. The ordinance was held over under the rules.

The financial report of the city for the month of November, presentation of which had been delayed by press of other business before the council, was submitted by City Manager Lawrence. It shows a balance on hand as of November 1 of $7,120.26; budget receipts of $102,884.78; budget disbursements of $38,695.96, and other disbursements not estimated in the budget of $8,542.83, and a cash balance December 1 of $62,766.24.

A communication was received from E. E. Lawler, jr., chairman of the executive committee of the Alexandria Volunteer Fire Department, asking that the fire department be permitted to engage a carnival in April, to provide funds for entertaining the forty-sixth annual convention and tournament of the Virginia State Firemen's Association to be held here in 1932, in connection with the bicentennial celebration of Washington's Birthday. The request was granted.

A letter was received from Arthur Herbert, jr., conveying the thanks of the boards of managers of the Anne Lee Memorial Home for the Aged, for a donation of $180, and the Alexandria Hospital for $1,250.

Attorney William S. Snow appeared before the council with a petition that the city license on billiard and pool tables be reduced, and the matter was taken under advisement.

Capt. W. Cameron Roberts, of the Alexandria Light Infantry, also appeared before council and requested a donation of $150 to enable his command to go to Richmond to participate in the parade at the inauguration of Gov. John Garland Pollard, January 15. The amount was appropriated.

Attorney Charles Henry Smith presented a petition for a permit to erect a gasoline filling station on Franklin street, 100 feet west of Wythe street. Action was deferred to allow Mr. Smith to prepare his petition on the regular form of the city and to submit a revised sketch of the proposed location.

A request of George H. Schwarzmann for a permit to move two frame buildings from Fairfax and Montgomery streets to Fairfax and Wythe streets was granted, as was a request of Milton Leadbeater for a quest of Milton Leadbeater for a permit to erect a garage in the rear of 414 North Washington street.

Mrs. Naomi P. Craver, who was a member of the town council of Potomac which automatically went out of office January 1, was present at the council meeting by special invitation, and at the close of the session Mayor Smoot extended the thanks of the council to her for her interest in the affairs of Alexandria. Mrs. Craver replied, saying that she had attended the meeting because of her especial interest in the city, which has now become her own since the annexation of the town of Potomac. She was the only woman member of the Potomac Council, and it is believed the only woman member of a city council in Virginia.

Four additional policemen were appointed yesterday by Capt. W. W. Campbell, from a long list of applicants. They were A. E. Pierce, of Clarendon; Ira J. Posey, of Clarendon; G. A. Ellmore, 110 North Fairfax street, and W. A. Bayliss, 314 North Patrick street. There still remains one vacancy on the force which Capt. Campbell expects to fill shortly, and with the selection of the four men yesterday the force now numbers 29 men, including a captain and three sergeants.

Carl Lacey, a member of the force since July, 1929, has tendered his resignation, to engage in other employment.

The annual report of Fire Chief James M. Duncan, jr., for 1929, submitted yesterday, indicates that the fire loss in 1929 was approximately $104,376, the two fires entailing the greatest losses being that of the Fairfax Apartment Building, which was destroyed January 2 last, and the St. Mary's Catholic Church, June 5, which was seriously damaged.

There were 258 alarms during the year, of which 13 were general, 213 local and 30 suburban, with 2 still alarms. A total of 6,361 men responded to the alarms, 2,063 gallons of chemicals were used, 70 lines of hose laid, 33,200 feet of hose used, 3,121 feet of ladders used and there were 75 2-3 hours of pumping service, and 10 foamite extinguishers and 4 pyrene extinguishers were used.

A meeting of the George Washington Birthday Association will be held at 8 o'clock tonight in the George Mason Hotel, when officers for the ensuing year will be elected, and chairmen of committees for the Washington's Birthday parade will be named.

The fines and assessments from violators of the prohibition law brought $22,484.65 to the coffers of the city during the year 1929, according to the year's report from the office of the clerk of the Corporation Court.

This office also issued 854 marriage licenses, the majority to out-of-town residents, and a total of 1,234 deeds of all kinds placed on record.

Robert G. Carter, recently elected president of the Kiwanis Club, presided at the meeting yesterday, with J. Frank Myers in charge of the program. Speakers were former State Senator Floyd E. King, vice president and general counsel of the Virginia Public Service Co., and Felton Wendell, publicity man for the Seaboard Public Service Co.

The weekly Friday afternoon prayer service at the Anne Lee Memorial Home for the Aged will be in charge of Grace Protestant Episcopal Church during the month of January, with the first service at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Richard L. Ruffner placed the first deed of transfer from the newly annexed territory on record yesterday in the office of the clerk of the Corporation Court. It was from W. Harvey Hatch and wife to Arthur J. Condrey, conveying lots 778 and 779, in Del Ray.

City Collector Purvis Taylor will commence the sale of city automobile license tags today at his office in the City Hall.

Baby Is Drowned In Lake Near Home

Berwyn Child Topples in Water After Playing in Yard.

Wandering across the road from her home to an artificial lake, Mary Louise Freshour, 21-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren A. Freshour, of Berwyn, Md., was drowned yesterday morning when she toppled into the lake. Her body was found floating on the water some hours later when her mother missed the child.

The Freshours live with H. J. Bierman in Berwyn and when last seen the baby was playing in the yard. When missed, the mother and grandmother began a search, finding the body in the lake on the property of I. J. Currens, across the street.

Dr. A. C. Etienne, of Berwyn, was called and pronounced the baby dead. Justice of the Peace George Phillips issued a certificate of accidental death by drowning. The child's father is in Illinois on business.

John A. Fix Dies at Lynchburg.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 2 (Special).—John A. Fix, senior member of the firm of John A. Fix & Son, building contractors, died at his home here today, after six weeks' illness. He was a member of the Rivermont Presbyterian Church and is survived by his widow and six children.

Rockingham Jury Indicts Eighteen

Special Term Finds True Bill of Manslaughter in Accident.

Special to The Washington Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 2.—Eighteen indictments, charging 25 persons with offenses ranging from involuntary manslaughter to violation of traffic laws, were returned here today by the special grand jury of Rockingham Circuit Court.

Robert Baldwin, of Wardensville, W. Va., was indicted for involuntary manslaughter, in connection with the death of Miss Annie Cullers, in Brocks Gap, on December 1, when the automobile he was driving overturned. Harry E. Smith, of Smith & Maxwell, live stock dealers of Port Deposit, Md., was indicted on two counts of giving bad checks in payment for a carload of cows and a carload of hogs purchased from a local dealer. These checks aggregate $3,500 and were returned marked "not sufficient funds."

Car Owner Recognizes Toot of Stolen Auto

Recognizing the sound of the horn on his automobile while it was proceeding through downtown Washington about 9 o'clock last night, Edward S. Valliant, 21-year-old University of Maryland student, trailed the machine to Ninth and F streets northwest to discover the car occupied by two strangers less than a block from the spot from which it had been stolen about four hours earlier.

Accompanied by three school mates, Mr. Valliant took to the First Precinct station the two youths who, he claimed, were in the car. They gave their names as Edward J. Earle, 17 years old, of Twelfth street near M street northwest, and Frederick Kohlman, 17 years old, of Tenth street near K street northwest. Both were held on charges of investigation.

Heart Attack Is Fatal To Woodstock Citizen

Special to The Washington Post.

Strasburg, Va., Jan. 2.—Arthur Boyer, 58, member of a prominent family and an outstanding business man, dropped dead in his apartment in Woodstock at 10:30 o'clock this morning. Dr. Roy Fravel, when called, attributed his death to heart trouble.

Mr. Boyer was born in Page County at the time of the historic flood in 1872. With his mother he was placed in a boat from the second story window of the home and removed to a place of safety. While a young man he entered the mercantile business in Baltimore, where he remained for several years before coming to Woodstock. He is survived by two brothers—Col. Perry L. Boyer, United States Army surgeon, stationed at Vancouver Barracks, Wash., and Monroe Boyer, life insurance agent at Cape Charles, Va.

Culpeper Killer Given Five Years in Prison

Special to The Washington Post.

Culpeper, Va., Jan. 2.—Culpeper's first murder trial in years began and ended today when Thomas Mayfield, Negro, was found guilty of voluntary manuslaughter and was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary.

Mayfield killed Lester Smith, also colored, just one month ago at a construction camp near Culpeper following a row about food. Mayfield was the cook at the camp, and a complaint from Smith started an argument which led to the killing. The attorneys for the defendant were T. E. Grimsley and Burnett Miller, both of Culpeper.

COUNTY CHAMBER NAMES SECRETARY

Mrs. Kathleen M. Clarke Will Come to Arlington Body on January 15.

RESIGNS FAIRFAX POST

ARLINGTON COUNTY.
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Mrs. Kathleen M. Clarke, of Clarendon, was elected secretary-stenographer of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce at a meeting of the board of directors held at Clarendon yesterday. Mrs. Clarke fills the vacancy caused by the resignation of Executive Secretary F. P. Woodbridge, effective January 15.

Mrs. Clarke has since last August held the office of secretary of the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce. She announced last night that her resignation addressed to the board of directors of the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce will be filed today effective January 15.

Plans were completed for the special committee, comprised of State Senator Frank L. Ball, chairman; Hugh Reid, Ashton C. Jones, Guy N. Church, Henry C. Morris and William S. Hoge to go to Richmond, Wednesday, January 8, to confer with Gov. John Garland Pollard relative to needs for uniform development regarding approaches to the National Capital and certain recommendations which may be made to the General Assembly regarding the developments for Arlington County. The committee also will make arrangements for the joint meeting with the governor and members of the General Assembly proposed to be held in Arlington County Friday, January 17. The committee will be accompanied by A. H. Allen, president of the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce, and Fred Goodnow, president of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce, as the plans call for a joint conference with the three organizations.

According to President Keith A. Brumback, the tentative plans provide for the governor and members of the General Assembly to meet in the county for luncheon prior to a tour of this section of Northern Virginia, have dinner in Alexandria and in the evening attend the meeting of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. The speakers are announced as President Hoover, Gov. Pollard, of Virginia, Gov. Ritchie, of Maryland, and former Gov. Byrd, of Virginia.

The president announced the appointment of a special committee composed of Leon Arnold, C. W. Fitch, Henry C. Morris and Keith A. Brumback to cooperate with like committees to be appointed from the Fairfax and Alexandria City Chambers of Commerce to arrange for the entertainment of the group.

Discussing the advantages to be derived from the establishment of a central postoffice in Clarendon, from which all mail to all sections of the county would be distributed, President Brumback appointed the following committee to confer with Representative R. Walton Moore: Keith A. Brumback, chairman; William P. Ames, Ashton C. Jones, Hugh Reid, M. E. Church and Robert H. Forman.

Arrangements were completed for the annual meeting and election of officers to be held at the Washington-Lee High School Friday night, January 10.

The business meeting will be preceded by a dinner, open to all members, prospective members and county civic leaders, at 6:30 o'clock.

Plans have been made to entertain 200 persons, and those planning to attend are asked to notify the office of the secretary without delay.

Allen J. Saville, of Richmond, Va., who has directed the zoning of Arlington County, together with members of the zoning commission, are announced as speakers. Reports also will be received showing activities of the organization during the past year.

Sixteen directors will be elected who in turn will elect the officers.

The newly elected officers of Arlington Encampment will be installed at the meeting to be held tonight in the Odd Fellows Hall at Clarendon. The ceremonies will be in charge of Acting District Deputy Grand Patriarch Thomas S. O'Halloran.

Those who will be installed are Norbert Melnick, chief patriarch; Wallace Johnson, senior warden; E. W. Newman, high priest; Thomas S. O'Halloran, treasurer; J. W. Myers, junior warden, and Walter B. Huffman, scribe. The appointive officers to be installed are William Clever, guide; T. B. Harrell, inside guard; W. O. Telford, outside guard; S. H. Leary, first watch; R. P. Tucker, second watch; M. Smarr, third watch; B. G. Jones, fourth watch; William E. Willis, first guide tent, and Norman Carson, second guide tent.

The Arlington County Zoning Commission will hold its final public hearing on the zoning ordinance as drafted, prior to it being submitted to the county board of supervisors for adoption, tonight at the courthouse.

The commission will hold an executive session at the courthouse this afternoon at 2 o'clock to complete its plans for the evening meeting.

Undertaker's Garage Burns; Four Arrested

Special to The Washington Post.

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 2.—Four colored youths, their ages ranging from 18 to 21, are lodged in the Leesburg Jail as a result of a fire last night which destroyed a large metal garage belonging to Lloyd Slack, undertaker, and which contained an automobile hearse, ambulance, automobile and fourteen coffins, all of which were destroyed.

Two of the boys, Thomas Williams and Robert Lee, went into the garage after gasoline, and lighting a match ignited the gasoline, causing an explosion. The other two boys, John Jones and Edward Dean, waited for them outside, according to a confession of Edward Dean to Milton Crim, night watchman. Slack was badly burned about the hands while fighting the fire. Loss was about $7,000.

Winchester Historical Group Names Officers

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 2.—Organization of the Winchester Historical Society was tentatively effected last night at a dinner given at the home of John M. Steck, lawyer and chairman of the City School Board. It was attended by a large number of professional and business men and their wives. Need of such an organization to preserve objects and documents of historic interest not publicly owned had been pointed out recently.

The Rev. Dr. Frank T. McFaden, pastor of Loudoun Street Presbyterian Church, was elected temporary president, and C. Vernon Eddy, Handley Library librarian, secretary. The board of directors is composed of John M. Steck, Col. Bryan Conrad, of the State Conservation and Development Commission; Dr. Hunter H. McGuire, Judge Philip Williams, William E. Cooper, Dr. Lewis M. Allen, T. Russell Gather, H. B. McCormac and C. Vernon Eddy.

SCHOOLS IN FAIRFAX PLAN 1930 BUDGET

Tentative Account Awaits Approval by County's Supervisors.

B. Y. P. U. PICKS OFFICERS

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Vienna, Va.
Phone Vienna 84.

The school budget for the next school year was completed late yesterday afternoon by the Fairfax County School Board which ended a two-day annual budget meeting.

After some discussion before the estimates were completed, the board voted to ask the county board of supervisors for a 90-cent-on-the-$100 valuation tax levy. This will be a 5-cent decrease from last year, but will provide the necessary income to care for the expenses of the county schools. This decrease of the tax rate comes as a surprise to most every one in the county as it was expected that the school levy for the coming year would be increased instead of decreased. There will also be a 25-cent levy to take care of the library bonds and interest in the Falls Church, Dranesville and Providence districts. On the motion of Trustee Herbert Williams, from Providence district, the board also voted to ask the supervisors to lay a 5-cent levy to create a building fund for the erection of a centrally located vocational high school in the county as recommended in a survey made by the State Board of Education last year.

The board, on the recommendation of Superintendent of Schools W. T. Woodson, voted to increase the teachers salaries for next year. The increase decided upon at yesterday's meeting was $2 a month added to their present salaries each year for five years. A $700 fund was set aside to be used for additional increase for high school principals, but it was not decided as to the manner in which the money would be assigned. In discussing these increases, it was shown that it was an easy matter to secure good teachers in the county for one year but it was hard to hold them against competition of the District of Columbia unless increases in salaries are provided. It was estimated that these increases would cost about $3,000 more for white teachers and $500 for colored. The salary of the music teacher in the schools was raised to $1,215 per year and the supervisor of colored schools was raised to $1,000 per year.

$8,000 for New Addition.

The board included $8,000 in the budget to build a two-room addition in the rear of the present Fairfax school to relieve the congestion in the grades. The necessity of building new schools at several points in the county was discussed, but only $5,000 was included in the estimates for the erection of new buildings. The present school buildings in the towns of Herndon and Fairfax were built from funds provided by town bond issue but the State Board of Education holds "that title to all school property is now vested in the county school board." It was brought out that the special levies in these towns failed to meet the interest charges and sinking fund by about $500 in Fairfax, $800 in Herndon and $1,200 in the Dranesville district. The board agreed that each town district should be considered the same as a magisterial district and that any shortage should be met from the county funds.

It was estimated that the receipts and balances for next year would amount to $234,350.78. This includes the State appropriation of $67,850.25, special district levies and trust fund. The probable disbursements for 1930 and 1931 were estimated to include $900 for expenses for school board, $1,200 salary of clerk, $1,035 for local superintendent, $730 allowance, $1,080 secretary to the board, $150 office equipment, $200 for office supplies, $100 express and freight, $250 postage, telephones and telegrams, $80 miscellaneous expenses, a total of $5,725 for the administrative department.

$123,224.97 for Salaries.

Instruction for day schools, $103,759.97 for teachers of white schools, $2,250 for supervisor of white schools, $11,700 for colored teachers, $1,000 for colored supervisor, $3,300 for vocational training teachers, $1,215 for music instructor, making a total of $123,224.97. For substitute teachers, $2,500 was allowed.

Other instruction costs were $75 for free text books, $300 for maps, globes and charts, $100 for vocational equipment and supplies, $150 for laboratory supplies, $200 for general supplies, making a total of $825 for coordinate activities, which includes dental work, $400.

Auxiliary agencies, transportation by contract, which includes railroad, carfares and private buses, $8,000; wages of drivers of county-owned buses, $2,000; gas and oil, $1,500; truck repair and upkeep, $1,200; liability insurance, $500; libraries, $250; tuition paid to other divisions, $2,320.50; tuition to Falls Church, $2,250, and cost of trucks, $3,300; other agencies, $150.

Cost of schools' upkeep, wages of janitor, $6,500; wages of other employes, fuel and water, $7,000; light and power, $616.61; janitor supplies, $8,000; other expenses, $50, making a total of $15,066.61.

$3,400 for Insurance.

Fixed charges, $95 rent; $3,400 insurance; $5,000 treasurer's commission; $31 employes' compensation law; total, $8,526.

Maintenance of school buildings, repair of buildings and upkeep of grounds, $8,500; repair and furniture replacement, $300; other expenses, $200; total, $9,000.

Capital outlay, purchase of lands, $1,500; new buildings, $5,000; equipment of buildings, $1,500; improvement of sites, $200; other capital outlay, $900; total, $9,050.

Debt service, $7,232.67; payments on sinking funds, $3,866.75; interest on bonds and loans, $7,385.27; total, $18,484.69.

The total estimated expenses are $214,272.77. This will leave a balance of $29,078.01 to care for expenses from July 1, 1931, until school starts next fall, when the State appropriation will be ready.

These figures are subject to the approval of the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors, which meets Monday, January 6.

At a meeting of Acacia Masonic Lodge, No. 16, at Clifton, R. W. Ford was elected worshipful master. Other officers elected were H. J. West, senior warden; J. E. Kidwell, junior warden; J. B. Cross, secretary; Frank L. Ford, treasurer; M. W. Davis, senior deacon; J. M. Detwiler, junior deacon; Roy Kincheloe, senior steward; Luther Burke, junior steward; C. E. Taylor, chaplain, and G. B. Wright, tiler.

The Baptist Young People's Union, which held its last meeting at McLean, elected Raymond W. Simms, of Alexandria, president of the Eastern Potomac Federation B. Y. P. U., for the second consecutive year; Robert Wall, of Cherrydale, vice president; Mrs. G. P. Morris, of Del Ray, secretary, and Mrs. L. D. McEachern, of Clarendon, treasurer. This federation includes the young people of the ten Baptist churches in Fairfax and Arlington Counties and Alexandria City. The monthly meetings are held in the various churches in rotation. The next meeting will be held in the Temple Baptist Church at Alexandria. The executive committee, which meets monthly, will hold its meetings at Alexandria for the next six months.

Leon L. Freeman, president of the Vienna Volunteer Fire Department, has called a special meeting of the department for tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the town hall of Vienna. Two building sites for the new home of the department have been offered. This meeting will be to decide which of the two will be accepted.

The new fire siren was delivered yesterday. It will be erected in the next few days. A temporary dam across the creek near Parker's coal yard has been built by several members of the department for fire protection of the town.

Search for Honest Man Is Successful at Last

If Diogenes was alive today, he could end his search for an honest man with George A. Kidwell, a Richmond, Frederick and Potomac railroad foreman of the Potomac yards, living at 122 Uhler avenue, Mount Ida, Va.

Preston E. Peterson, of 1443 Spring road northwest, missed his pocket-book early last night and hastened to the First Precinct to report his misfortune. Peterson declared he lost the wallet in the vicinity of the District Building.

A short while later, Kidwell walked into the First Precinct building and turned in a pocket-book, identified as Peterson's which contained $30, and was found near the Earle Theater, Thirteenth and E streets northwest.

New Adams School Opened for Pupils

Congestion of Students to Be Partially Relieved Through Changes.

Marked relief in the elementary school congestion in the District is expected to result from the occupancy of the new John Quincy Adams School, Nineteenth street and Columbia road, and the eight-room addition to the Raymond School, Tenth street and Spring road, R. L. Haycock, assistant superintendent in charge of elementary schools, said yesterday as the new units were opened.

Pupils began moving yesterday from the Morgan School, V street between California and Champlain streets, into the Adams Building. They expect to complete the change today. The Morgan Building will then be reconditioned for occupancy by colored children from the Wilson and the Harrison Schools on February 1. Three portables at Wilson and part-time classes at both colored schools will thus be eliminated.

The Raymond addition was partially occupied yesterday by part-time classes from the old building. On February 1 the part-time pupils from Petworth will occupy the remainder of the addition. Seventh and eighth grade pupils of the Force School on Massachusetts avenue will move into the Adams Building, and kindergarten children now in at the old Adams will be transferred to the Force.

Martinsburg Man Dies From Snowball Injury

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 2.—Frank Hartley, young business man of Shepherdstown, W. Va., died in a hospital here today from an eye injury suffered last Saturday when he was struck with one of several snowballs thrown by friends. He was brought here Tuesday in an unconscious condition and died without rousing from the coma.

Whether the snowball contained some object or substance which caused the injury was not determined. Hartley did not complain until Tuesday, when he became unconscious, and was brought to the hospital for observation and treatment.

VIRGINIA APPLE CROP IS LEADER IN SOUTH

Only Washington and New York Surpass State in Production.

WINESAP CHIEF VARIETY

Richmond, Va., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Virginia was the third State in the Union in order of production of commercially grown apples over a period of five years, being led only by Washington and New York, according to a summary of market supplies and prices of apples made public by the United States Department of Agriculture through Henry M. Taylor, Federal-State crop reporting statistician.

During the five-year period, the report asserted, 10 States produced three-fourths of the commercial apple crop of approximately 101,000,000 bushels a year, which is about one-half the average crop. These 10 States in order of their producing importance were listed as follows: Washington, New York, Virginia, California, Michigan, Oregon, Illinois, Pennsylvania,
